What in business matters will aid one place will also help the other. The establishment of industries in one is an advantage to both, and the growth of one benefits the other. When this is the case, and the interests of the two places are identical, it would be wisdom to unite their population, influence and efforts, so that by the increased influence more may be accomplished for the benefit of both. If Peterborough should stagnate Ashburnham should also suffer. If Peterborough advances, Ashburnham shares the benefit. And if by union there would be greater strength, and a new impetus would be given to the growth of the town, it would be wisdom on the part of Ashburnham to unite, and on the part of the town to accept the assistance that the increased population would give. We make efforts and sacrifices to increase the population of the town in other ways, while here is a way that an increase of population of 1800 could be obtained without cost, provided, of course, that Ashburnham is willing, and there is no reason why it should not be. The tendency of trade is to gravitate to the larger centres. We have not only seen but felt this. And as the improvements in the facilities for travel increase this tendency will grow. This makes it important for Peterborough to consider its position. That there will be a large centre in this district will not be doubted, and the question is, Where will it be? Will Peterborough hold the lead it has, and become the centre of population and trade of this district, or will it allow some other town to outstrip it, and take the position that naturally belongs to it? Geographically, the town is properly situated to become the chief centre of this district. Its natural advantages also entitle it to that position, and it has the railway facilities for developing manufacture and commerce. The Trent Canal will give us a waterway to Lake Ontario, and consequently to Montreal and the seaboard, but in addition to that it will supply unlimited water power along the line of the canal, from Buckhorn in the north to the locks south of the town. Toronto is talking of bringing power from Niagara Falls, and if that scheme is at all feasible see what an advantage we have in the number of powers already in existence on the river, and those being constructed. We have the geographical position, and we have the natural advantages, and many artificial facilities, especially good railway connection. But we must push ourselves forward, even with all these, or we will lag behind. And why should it be continually proclaimed in every official statement published by either government that we have a population of between 11,000 and 12,000, when in reality our population is 14,000? We deliberately throw away the advantage of a difference of 2000 in population in every official statement distributed in any part of the world by the Governments, and if in our own publications we include the population of Ashburnham as being one business community with us, our statement of population is contradicted by the official publications. Frequent requests for statistics come to the town offices and in every answer sent the lower figures have to be given.

It is a mistake to throw away any advantage we can secure. Prestige is of material advantage to a town or a city as well as to an individual, and in pushing the town forward to maintain its position as the trading and manufacturing centre of the district the increased size and population union with Ashburnham would give would increase our prestige, for a financier or a manufacturer would be more favourably impressed with a larger place than with a smaller one. We were pleased that we could tell enquiring manufacturers that our population was 10,000, instead of 8,000, as it was a few years ago. We recognized the advantage it gave us. And yet we neglect a similar advantage that would not cost us anything or injure Ashburnham, but would benefit one as much as the other.

The water power, which is becoming more valuable now that electrical appliances convey the power to any part of the town, lies between the two municipalities, and in future negotiations with manufacturers it might facilitate securing factories by having the power from Auburn south all within one municipality.

These are some of the considerations that occur to me, and why I think it important that union should take place. The town has reached a point where something must be done to give renewed impetus to its growth. We cannot afford to stand still, and yet it is doubtful policy to load the town with indebtedness to secure factories to increase the population. Consequently we should neglect no opportunity to push ourselves forward and to not only maintain our position as the centre of population and commerce but to still further lead in this respect.

When this question was gone into to some extent previously, it was ascertained that so far as the financial position of the two municipalities were concerned, there was no difficulty, for the councils of both agreed that in this respect they were on equal footing.

Much of what has been and can be advanced in favour of union with Ashburnham, would apply with equal force as reasons for raising our standing to that of a city.

A stranger who is unacquainted with the towns of Ontario, in looking over the list of places in the province would naturally turn to a list of the cities. But he would not find Peterborough among them, although

WIFE ONLY THIRTEEN.

Husband Thirty-Seven—Unique Backwoods Romance—Touching Home Scene.

The Owen Sound Times prints the following unique and interesting story: Rev. James Ledlard, agent for the Children's Aid Society, recently took a trip away up the Bruce peninsula, and has returned with a little romance entered up in his diary. The agent of the society had been informed that a marriage had taken place between an old man in the vicinity of Stokes' Bay, and a little girl, a ward of the society, who was of unmarriageable age. The agent had the little girl's record investigated and though he could not secure authentic information as to her real age, he discovered that she was entered at the London shelter in 1900 as being ten years of age. This would make her about thirteen years of age now, though Rev. Mr. Ledlard believes that the child would probably be fourteen past. It was evident that everything was not right and the agent of the society started for Stokes' Bay. The journey north of Lion's Head was made through a wilderness of trees and finally John Saddler was located. John is not an old man, having just passed his thirty-seventh year. What surprised the agent more was that he seemed to be a fairly decent fellow, though his life in his isolated surroundings had made him somewhat rough in speech and appearance. That he had been a bachelor until quite recently was evident from the disorder of his apartment.

Touching Home Scene.

His wife was there, a pretty little, half-developed child, and had just began to get things in order. John sat and admired his girl wife as she hustled around to get the agent something to eat. Over in the corner was a flour barrel, and down into this little Mrs. John Saddler plunged elbow deep, coming forth with enough flour to bake bread for a whole regiment of clergymen. The child wonder flitted here and there, the kettle boiled, and the frying salt pork sputtered in the pan while its greasy odor penetrated the house and tempted the stomach of John, the husband. It was a scene of rustic domesticity that caused Rev. Mr. Ledlard to doubt his mission. "You see it's this way," said husband John, crossing his legs and contemplating his mite of a wife, "We'd 'ave 'ad things fixed up a bit better if we'd a been married a little longer and knew you was a comin'." The agent almost relented. It was a complex case. The girl seemed happy enough and John looked kindly enough, but things did not fit the requirements of the law as he would have desired. He ascertained that the preacher who performed the ceremony was Rev. Mr. Facey, the Methodist pastor at Lion's Head. He had been presented with a license, which he believed was all that was necessary. That the girl was under the age required by law must have been apparent to any man with eyes in his head, but, however, the license was accepted and the knot was tied. Little short of the hand of death can simplify matters in a Canadian marriage contract, and Rev. Mr. Ledlard realized that he was practically powerless.

The Preacher's Dilemma.

He could not go after the preacher very well, for he was protected by the license. The man who issued the license was protected by the universal custom that the husband may take out the license alone by simply swearing to the lady's age qualifications. Clearly then it was up to John, the husband. Would he put John in jail? That would not do. His little wife would shed salt tears and yearn for his return, and, anyway, this would not annul the marriage ceremony. Rev. Mr. Ledlard collected more facts and figures, and after mentally blessing the happy young couple—if you strike an average of their ages—returned to Owen Sound. The prospects are that John Saddler and his child wife, who is growing older every day, will live happily ever after.

Curious Old English Law.

It is interesting to recall in connection with railway accidents that only a few years back any instrument which by accident was the immediate cause of loss of human life became in English law "deodand"—that is, became forfeit to the crown, to be devoted to pious purposes. This law applies to locomotives, but in course of time coroners' juries, instead of claiming the forfeit, inflicted a fine. In the year 1833 a locomotive on the Liverpool and Manchester line which by exploding caused the death of its engineer and fireman was fined £20, while the following year another engine on the same line was fined £1,400.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

THE WELL DRESSED MAN.

Like the well dressed woman, it is not so much the cost of the garments as the suitability for special occasions and the way they are worn and cared for that make the well dressed man, writes the well-known New York fashion correspondent, Olive Harper. From shoes to hat the well dressed man is clean, and his garments always look neat and fresh, but how much of the apparent freshness is due to the creases in his trousers and careful brushing we neither know nor care. It is the general effect that we respect. The well dressed man respects himself and his clothes. He remembers Shakespeare's advice, "Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy," and then he takes care of what he gets.

What he gets this season or what he should get to be in fashion makes rather a formidable list, though still very far behind that considered necessary for lovely woman. He needs first for business a covert or overcoat, with a jacket or cutaway coat, and his vest in this case should match the coat, though many prefer one of different material. There is no hard and fast rule about this. Trousers may match or be of quite different material. With a business suit a derby or alpine felt hat is the best style, though if it is an elderly gentleman and he wears a cutaway suit a high silk hat is suitable. Colored shirts are proper for business wear or general morning wear. The collar is an important part of a man's attire, and immaculate freshness is the first consideration. The shape may be wing, poke or high band turndown. The proper cravat for business suits is either the ascot, the tie, the once over, the four-in-hand or culross. I hope the gentlemen will recognize these shapes by their names, which I must confess are all Greek to me, but that is what the obliging clerks at different places told me. Gloves for morning or business should be tan or dark gray. It seems that shoes are also prescribed in these several outfits, and with business or morning suits calfskin shoes are worn with the sack suits and patent leather with the cutaway.

After business is over a frock coat is the correct thing with a Chesterfield or a skirted overcoat. The vest is generally like that of the coat, but may be of fancy duck or other linen. Vests for this purpose should be double-breasted, and the trousers should be of striped worsted, light or dark, as the wearer prefers. Only a high silk hat should be worn with this sort of suit, and the collar must be either poke or bat wing, while the cravat is only allowed to be ascot or culross. The gloves should be tan or very light gray suede and the shoes patent leather buttoned boots.

For afternoon visits, receptions, matinees and day weddings the frock coat and Chesterfield overcoat are de rigueur. Vests are the same, and trousers are of dark gray cheviot or worsted in striped design. The high silk hat is here, too, and, as for afternoon wear, the shirt must be white and the collar lays front, wings of poke. The cravat could be white, black or light toned ascot or culross, the gloves gray, and patent leather shoes complete this costume.

We all know that an evening dress coat is necessary for all evening functions, and this season the Chesterfield or skirted overcoat is used. One may wear a white or a black vest, another double-breasted or single. Trousers are to be of the same material as the coat, and this is of fine broadcloth in preference to anything. Of course the shirt must be white and stiff as tin, with the cuffs sewed to the sleeves. The collar is to be as high as one can wear it without danger, and it may be lap front, standing or poke. The tie must be a broad end white barathea tie and the gloves white, glace or pearl. The shoes must be either patent leather button tops or pumps.

For informal dinners, club, stag and home dinners an evening jacket is the newest thing. A covert or raglan is worn with this when one is going out. Vests are double or single breasted, of the coat material or white with gold buttons. The trousers are of the same stuff as the coat. A white shirt with plaited bosom and with the cuffs fastened on is right for this, and a standing high band turndown is the collar, while only one cravat is suitable, a broad end black silk one For this informal affair a derby or black alpine will do, but for full dress an opera or a high silk hat with a cloth band is demanded

Large Loaves.

The largest loaves of bread baked in the world are those of France and Italy The "pipe" bread of Italy is baked in loaves 2 feet or 3 feet long, while in France the loaves are made in the shape of very long rolls, 4 feet or 5 feet in length, and in many cases 6 feet.

COPIED FROM THE BOERS.

War Office Adopts New Type of Cartridge Bandoliers.

The War Office has adopted a new pattern of cartridge bandolier and pouch for the army, says The London Daily Mail. Tenders are now invited for the supply of bandoliers, pouches and other equipment—123,550 bandoliers to carry 50 rounds of ammunition, 25,000 carrying 90 rounds, 247,100 pouches to carry 10 rounds, and 247,100 pouches to carry 15 rounds. All to be made of leather, the bodies of the bandoliers of split cowhide, the pouches of bridle leather.

The new bandolier is a collection of small pouches fastened upon a wide strap. The ninety-round variety has a curious double buckle to rest on the soldier's shoulder and to carry the steadying strap. The pouches are small, and carry ten rounds of ammunition. They are narrower at the bottom than the top. Their fastening flap is very large.

Each contains a leather tongue fastened at the bottom, and tapering very fine at its other end, to be folded round a clip of cartridges, so that the pulling of its loose end will bring it out instantly. The extra pouches are of the same type as those for the bandoliers, except those to carry fifteen rounds, which are to have no leathern tongue.

This type of bandolier resembles that which was employed by the Boers. The old type of bandolier used by English soldiers in the war was made of webbing, and carried cartridges horizontally packed in separate divisions. It was found to be useless, as it worked loose and lost ammunition. Then a long flap was added, which, fastened, kept the cartridges in their places, but was useless, too, for the buttons did not hold the flap. Then came bandoliers of the old type, with flaps for every ten, six, five, or four cartridges. Those with flaps for five were useful.

Three weeks ago split cowhide began to go up in price, rising one penny per pound.

STATESMAN'S PATHETIC DEATH.

Passing of Hon. Duncan Gillies, Speaker of Victorian Parliament.

Details of the death of the Hon. Duncan Gillies, the Speaker of the Victorian Parliament, formerly Premier and Agent-General in London, are pathetic. He had resumed the chair after a long illness, amid loud cheers, but after getting through the preliminary business he completely collapsed, and was unable to remember or identify any of the members who rose to address the House. The Premier, the Leader of the Opposition, and the Clerk of the House, went to his assistance, and he was removed to his official residence within the Parliamentary precincts. Three days later he was found dead in his bath. Mr. Gillies was a member of the Imperial Cable Committee which met in 1896 in London. The Earl of Selborne was the chairman. The Colonial Office was represented by Mr. G. H. Murray, C.B., Canada by Lord Strathcona and the Hon. A. G. Jones, and Australasia by Sir Saul Samuel and Mr. Gillies, Sir Sandford Fleming acted as expert adviser. The result of the deliberations of the Committee was the decision to lay the cable.

Fall From High Estate.

On the old greys becoming unsound in wind or limb, they had to descend from their high estate to follow humbler pursuits. Usually sold for what they would fetch, many a man made a good bargain thereby.

Some years ago a Windsor cabman purchased one of the Queen's greys for 36 guineas, subsequently hiring the animal out to a lady for a pound a week during five years, the lady providing for the horse.

The greys appeal strongly to side-street Romeos and Juliets who desire to enter the matrimonial state driven to church by an ex-royal horse and one cabman has increased his income in satisfying this wish. Some of the horses, however, have to follow more lowly callings, such as drawing parcel vans and other humble, though useful, conveyance.

Some comments are made at this rather ignominious ending of such fine horses, and not a few are sorry to see the animals now drawing other people's washing home.

Largest Town in Canada.

The largest town in Canada—this is the proud distinction held by the town of Berlin, the legislative, judicial and commercial centre of the banner County of Waterloo. Berlin has a population of 11,000, and this number is growing fast, no less than 700 people being added last year. One of the prominent members of the Berlin Board of Trade was asked why the town did not incorporate as a city. He replied

"We would rather be the biggest town in Ontario than the smallest city."

The neighboring city of Guelph has only 1,000 more population than Berlin. It was incorporated twenty-seven years ago. At that time Berlin had a population of about three thousand.

Berlin is above everything else a manufacturing town. It has in all 65 factories, some of them the largest of their kind in Canada. The wares sent forth from these busy workshops find a ready market in every corner of the Dominion, and even beyond the seas.

FORGERY AND PAINTINGS.

Posthumous Tribute to Art—"Dabbists" Are the People Who Are Most Frequently Caught.

Things are not always what they seem, especially in the matter of pictures and drawings, says a London exchange. There is a craze for "old" stuff, and there is always a supply forthcoming to meet the demand. Exactly whence it comes nobody seems to know, but as to its destination there is no manner of doubt. It is bought by people who think that they know a good thing when they see it, and who frequently suffer for their conceit. They buy for £1 what in their ignorance they are convinced is worth £50, and they find that they have made a bad bargain. The article may be a mezzo-tint which, if genuine, would be worth £35, but, being a facsimile, it is perhaps dear at a sovereign. The purchaser would not look at it at that price in the shop window, but he will cheerfully pay five times that figure for it at auction, rather than take the advice of a picture dealer, whose modest profit he would disdain to pay. The man who makes rubbish is naturally induced to go on making more when he knows that auction rooms are haunted by ill-informed bargain-hunters. There is, needless to say, no reflection on the auctioneer, who, even if he had the requisite skill, has no time to sit in judgment on every picture or print which is included in his catalogue.

Not Hard to Copy.

Until an artist is dead his works are not usually the subject of forgery. But let him once get beneath the ground, and then, if he was the fashion, a fine field is thrown open. David Teniers predicted that when he died it would require a gallery a league long to contain all the pictures attributed to him. His prophecy was too modest. Twenty leagues would have been nearer the mark. T. B. Hardy, the marine painter, is another name which has been the subject of a good deal of forgery. He was a prolific worker, yet as soon as he was gone there were not enough of his beautiful water-colors to satisfy mankind, and the imitator set to work energetically. Copies cost little to produce, and involve no originality. All that is needed for success is to work with an unscrupulous dealer, and to receive the co-operation of a public which is ever ready to pick up something which, if genuine, would be dirt cheap at the price so greedily paid. No doubt the gambling spirit has been fostered in the case of pictures by certain little incidents which, if strung together, would make an exciting volume. But the man who rakes over a dusthin, and finds an "old master" which he sells for £1,000, is a very rare person. He has, at least, never been known to do the trick twice over. Yet a good many picture buyers are looking for fortunes in the same direction.

Craze for Engravings.

The craze for engravings has, like many other things, its ups and downs. The Landseer craze is nothing like so strong as it was a few years ago, and even the great Hogarth is comparatively at a discount To-day engravings after Sir Joshua Reynolds command much attention, and so do those after Sir Thomas Lawrence and Gainsborough. Forgery is a strong word to use in connection with engravings, but what is often done is to palm off fourth editions as firsts by removing the margins. But this, of course, would not take in the experienced collector, who knows the points. Sometimes, indeed, the second and subsequent editions are unmistakably, and perhaps intentionally, different from the first in matters of detail. The man who makes pictures or engravings his hobby, may, as a rule, be trusted to know, not only as much about them as dealers do, but very often a great deal more. It would be surprising, indeed, if the devotion of a lifetime to a particular study did not have this result. It is the collector who is on the fringe of knowledge who frequently makes mistakes. He has to make bad bargains in order to learn wisdom, but even he would scarcely be found giving £6 for a bogus Morland, worth about 30s., under the impression that it was a genuine engraving of a value of £25.

"Original" Pictures Please.

Various circumstances have conspired to help the forger and the fabricator of recent years. One is that the great majority of people do not attempt to obtain large pictures. In the first place their purses may not be equal to it. In the second place, the taste is for something pleasing, which shall, if possible, have some approach to "originality." They have got sick of seeing the same engravings everywhere. It is a little trying when middle-class people, paying a series of afternoon calls, are compelled to gaze on the same kitten and the same ball of string in four out of every five houses. The number of "pictures" which the stores have worked off in various parts of the country is simply amazing. Now we are getting a reaction, and a desire for something better, which may easily be misguided. The untrained judgment so readily goes astray. The average man, when he learns that a picture attributed to a particular artist has been done up so many times, finds prima facie evidence that he has got hold of something original. The wiser man, on the other hand, attaches value to pedigree, and will not take risks such as the less experienced will run. It is not a bad habit to buy your pictures from a dealer you can trust, for no man of reputation will sell you for £50 a picture that cost him £5, and is worth very little more.

An Equine Murderer.

A remarkable story, says The Liverpool Post, comes from Mellor, near Blackburn. A man noticed a horse circling continually round a lamb, urging it towards a fence, and finally thrusting it through a hedge into a flooded dyke beyond, at the exact spot where another lamb was found drowned.

A Possible Exception.

Wife—Isn't it a fact, dear, that handsome men are proverbially disagreeable?

Husband—Well, I don't know. I always try to be pleasant.

VIOLETS AND SOLITAIRES

By IZOLA L. FORRESTER

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

He had made up his mind when the first sure news of the crash flashed over the wires. His first act as a poor man would be to set Evelyn free. It would save her the embarrassment of breaking the engagement herself and also do away with any possibility of a stormy, emotional interview between them.

He had heard her say once that she disliked violently expressed emotion. It was on his yacht one August day off Pine cliff. She was dressed all in white, some simple, costly affair that suited her clear white face and the dark brown eyes that seemed so much at variance with her bright blond hair.

HE BOUGHT A QUARTER'S WORTH; HE WAS A POOR MAN NOW.

So cool and sweet and proud she was that, looking at her, he had wondered whether she ever was like other girls, if she ever cried, the real old fashioned cry that comes from a helpless heartache.

And now he was glad that she was the other kind. At least she would not suffer over his trouble. Of course she had loved him in a way. He set his teeth and faced the cool, fresh spring wind that blew across City Hall park. They had both been young and wealthy and proud of each other. The engagement had occurred as a matter of course after his father had admitted him to the firm as a partner.

And now it had all gone up in smoke. He hardly realized how as yet, but he knew enough of the fate of others to see ahead only ruin and wreckage and insolvency for the old firm.

A flower seller stepped in his way, with a smile of good fellowship.

"Violets—five a bunch!"

Shirley frowned and then paused. She loved violets. He had sent some to her every day for months at 75 cents a bunch, great, purple, single petaled beauties heavy with fragrance and hothouse loveliness. These were double and small and a deep blue. He smiled grimly and bought a quarter's worth. He was a poor man now.

Miss Whitworth was at home. He was ushered into the smaller reception room, the one in old rose and gold that Evelyn liked best. He used to imagine her there in the brocades and powdered hair of the sun king's reign. All that sort of thing seemed to suit her.

She had not heard yet. Of that he was sure when she entered and greeted him. There was the same cool, sweet grace in her manner, the easy, well bred content in her eyes, as she smiled at him, her betrothed husband.

He did not give her the flowers, but held them, the poor little scanty clusters, with a bit of cheap silver foil wrapped around their stems. They seemed so out of place here in her environment.

"It is like spring, is it not?" she said. "Don't you want to drive through the park with me? I have just ordered the carriage."

He raised his head to make some careless, conventional answer when suddenly the longing swept over him to end it all and get away, away from her clear, dark eyes and the delicious charm of her presence. She had never seemed so beautiful and dear to him as now.

"I can't go," he burst out in a reckless, boyish fashion. "Evelyn, the old firm has gone up in the Yates crash. The governor's nearly ready for the suicide act, and I—why, we haven't got enough left solid to keep you in flowers and theater boxes for a year. And I came to say goodby."

She sat very quietly and looked at the violets.

"Aren't they pretty?"

He laid them on the table and flushed.

"They seemed a fitting symbol of the state of affairs. I got them in City Hall park. They were 5 cents a bunch."

She rose and crossed to the table, her back half turned to him as she raised the violets to her face.

"I am glad you thought of them. They are a symbol of remembrance."

The solitaire on her left hand sparkled brightly among the violets, and Shirley's face hardened as he wondered who would place the next one there. He rose, feeling dull and helpless.

"That is all, I think," he said. "I only wanted to tell you first so that you might be spared any scene or emotionalism."

Still she was silent. He looked at her with eyes full of pain and pride. Another solitaire was sparkling on the petals of the violets, and while he gazed it was joined by many. He stared at them awkwardly as he realized that she was actually crying. But why?

"Don't, dear; don't do that, please. I said you were free."

He had not meant to, but some way just for the last time he was holding her hands close to his lips and looking down into her brown eyes—eyes that seemed strangely soft and tender through their mist of tears.

"But don't you know—how could you think"— Her voice was low and broken. "I don't want to be free."

His hands tightened over hers, but he could not speak. Of course she did not understand what he had told her. He must be strong and save her from danger.

"Why do you make me say it all, Jack?" She hesitated, waiting, then went on: "I don't care about the firm or—or anything except you. It only means a fresh start, and you are young, and—and won't it be easier to start together, Jack?"

He released her hands.

"You're awfully good to me," he said. "But you don't understand what it all means, dear; you can't. It will take years to build up again, and you can't be married to a poor man."

She was laughing up at him through her tears.

"You foolish, foolish boy! Don't you see? It wasn't the money. Did you think that was all that mattered? Don't you know that night on the yacht? I was steering, and you put your arm around me and kissed me and called me your pilot, and I promised to be your pilot for life? Don't you remember? And nothing has changed, only a little money. I am still your pilot, am I not?"

She held out her hands pleadingly to him. But he closed his eyes and stood with lifted head and clinched fists praying for strength for her sake until suddenly he felt her arms around his neck and her hair brushed his cheek.

"I won't be given up," she said. "I won't, I won't. You ought not to even suggest it now when you need me most, and—and I love you."

There was a tap on the door a few moments later.

"The carriage, Miss Whitworth."

"Presently." Miss Whitworth's voice was happy and smothered somewhat. She drew away from his arms and gathered up the scattered violets.

"The darlings," she said, "I love them best of all!"

Could Not Lie On Her Left Side.

WAS TROUBLED WITH PAIN IN HER HEART FOR SIX YEARS.

Expected Her Friends Would Find Her Dead.

Mrs. C. Bondreau, Campbellton, N.B., was completely cured by MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills.

She tells of her experience in the following letter: "I was troubled with a pain in my heart and weakness for six years. Most of the time I could not lie on my left side. I consulted a doctor but got no relief and was completely discouraged. I did not think I would live long and expected my friends would find me dead. A friend brought me a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and I took them to please her, not thinking they would do me any good. I had not used half the box when I commenced to feel myself getting better and by the time I had taken two boxes I was completely cured and can recommend them to all sufferers from heart trouble."

A. McDONALD
Point St. Charles Mills.

The diver dies without air to breathe. The consumptive dies without lungs to breathe the air, or of lungs rendered incapable of breathing by disease. The blood as it flows in and out of the lungs indicates the consumptive's progress. As the lungs grow weaker less oxygen is inhaled and the blood changes from scarlet to purple. Oxygen is the life of the blood as the blood is the life of the body.

The effect of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery upon weak lungs is to strengthen them, to enable the full oxygenation of the blood, arrest the progress of disease, and heal the inflamed tissues. Lung diseases have been and are being cured by "Golden Medical Discovery," in cases where deep-seated cough, frequent hemorrhage, emaciation, weakness, and night-sweats have all pointed to a fatal termination by consumption.

"Some years ago I was almost a helpless victim of that dread disease—consumption," writes Mr. Chas. Fross, P. M., of Sitka, White Co., Ind. "I was confined to my room for several months, my friends and neighbors had given up all hopes of my recovery, until one day a friend advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and after I had taken the contents of the second bottle I began to improve. After taking six bottles I was, I honestly believe, delivered from the grave and entirely cured. I am now a strong and hearty man."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the clogged system from accumulated impurities.

Cheated the Youngsters.

In certain parts of New Guinea wallaby, a species of kangaroo, are very plentiful, and the traveler in search of sport finds the pursuit of them an exciting occupation. Wallaby steak is a refreshing change from canned meats, and the natives are only too glad to have the remnants of the carcass. A writer in the Badminton tells an amusing incident connected with the animal.

He had been ashore in one of the sparsely populated regions of the coast and secured four wallaby, an ample supply for the whole party, native guides and servants included. But he found that although wallaby is regarded as such a delicacy that no trouble is considered too great to obtain it none of the native boys in the party would touch it.

This was a mystery until one of them explained that they had been trained in childhood in the belief that if they ate wallaby before reaching a certain age it would stop their growth.

These boys all belonged to the part of the country where wallaby are few, and one can imagine the crafty old folks seated round the festive pot and winking at one another as the young people declined the succulent dainty.

Those who see an unwarrantable deception in the fostering of such a belief on the part of the young people must ask themselves if they have never told a child that "two pieces of pie will make little folks sick."

Falstaff's Blunder.

When Falstaff boasted that he was not only witty himself, but the cause of wit in other men, he thought of himself more highly than he ought to have thought. The very fact that he was witty prevented him from the highest efficiency in stimulating others in that direction. The atmospheric currents of merriment move irresistibly toward a vacuum. Create a character altogether destitute of humor and the most sluggish intelligence is stirred in the effort to fill the void.

When we seek one who is the cause of wit in other men we pass by the jovial Falstaff and come to the preternaturally serious Don Quixote. Here we have not the chance outcropping of "the lighter vein," but the mother love which the humorist finds inexhaustible. Don Quixote, with a lofty gravity which never for an instant relaxes, sets forth upon his mission. His is a soul impenetrable to mirth, but as he rides he enlivens the whole countryside. Everywhere merry eyes are watching him, boisterous laughter comes from the stables of village inns, from castle windows highborn ladies smile upon him, the peasants in the fields stand gaping and holding their sides, the countenances of the priests relax and even the robbers salute the knight with mock courtesy. The dullest La Manchan is refreshed and feels that he belongs to a choice coterie of wits.—S. M. Crothers in Atlantic.

Population of China.

During the European difficulties with China no little divergence of opinion was expressed as to the population of that great Asiatic Empire. A new census of China has just been completed, and the returns indicate that the population has been rather underestimated than overcalculated. At least, it shows the enormous total population of 426,447,000, according to the cabled reports. The number of inhabitants in Manchuria, Mongolia, Thibet and Turkestan was only estimated. Thus, more than one-fourth of the world is contained within the Chinese Empire. Even the British Empire, with its vast possessions on every continent, has 80,000,000 less inhabitants than China. In 1800 E. G. Ravenstein estimated the inhabitants of the earth at 1,487,900,000. Since then the number has increased at least 62,100,000, making a present total of 1,550,000,000.

The wild razorback hog of the south is the typical bacon hog. He has the big slab side, the streak of lean and streak of fat, and his diet of roots and nuts adds a fine flavor to his meat.

Allowing the crop every advantage in the way of climatic conditions, it is now very plain that there is a short crop of corn in sight for 1903. This inferentially means no lower prices for meats.

ROYAL WEDDING CAKES.

One of the Largest on Record Made in London

The wedding cake of Princess Alice of Battenberg, who was recently married at Darmstadt to Prince Andreas of Greece, was ordered in London.

Standing some six feet high, it was one of the largest cakes ever made for a royal bride, although that presented to Princess Beatrice by the ladies of Kent was about twenty inches taller. The latter masterpiece in confectionery cost 500 guineas.

It is a rule at royal weddings to have four or five cakes, one of which is made by the bride's own cooks, and cut up for despatch to her particular friends.

Among humbler brides there is a growing demand for cakes made in a single "tier," the price generally paid varying from ten to fifteen guineas. It is seldom, according to an authority, that more than the latter sum is paid for a bride's cake, even at a fashionable wedding.

An Extraordinary Incident.

The closing days of Lord Tennyson's vice-regal career in Australia have been marked by an extraordinary incident. A young man of twenty-five, named Robert Montgomery Parker, said to be the son of a wealthy Liverpool merchant, has been on a tour through America, China and Japan. His stay in the Far East upset his mental balance, for immediately on arriving in Melbourne he rushed to the offices of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company and excitedly handed in a batch of messages for immediate transmission to the Lords of the Admiralty, Lord Curzon, the admirals in command of the British naval stations, and various other official personages. All these messages were signed "Tennyson," and conveyed the alarming intelligence that Russia had declared war against England. The receiving clerk diagnosed the situation accurately, told the poor fellow that the great seal of the Commonwealth was necessary for such messages, and telephoned to Government House and the police. A few minutes later he was arrested at Government House, overpowered, and deprived of a fully-loaded revolver. His diary showed that he had made a close study of affairs in the Far East.

The Prime of Life.

Somebody once asked Lord Palmerston when he considered a man to be in the prime of life. "Seventy-nine," was the immediate reply. "But," he added, "as I have just entered my eightieth year, perhaps I am a little past it." The birth of an heir to the Marquess of Donegal in the latter's eighty-second year, makes it necessary to revise somewhat one's views upon the subject. Such an event, of course, while very uncommon, is not without precedent. Here is an instance which may inspire Lord Donegal with the hope of a numerous family. The Edinburgh Courant of May, 1766, records the following interesting fact: "Wednesday last, the lady of Sir William Nicolson, of Glenbervy, was safely delivered of a daughter. What is very singular, Sir William is at present ninety-two years of age, and has a daughter alive of his first marriage, aged sixty-six. He married his present lady when he was eighty-two, by whom he has now had six children."

MEETING TO DISCUSS MUNICIPAL UNION.

even now our population is larger than that of several of the cities. And many official statements are published in which cities alone are given and from these we exclude ourselves and lose the advantages this advertising would give us. In the classification of the urban municipalities we exclude ourselves from the higher rating and permit ourselves to be classed in the lower rating, for one unacquainted with the town, seeing it classed as a town, would not know whether we had a population of 3,000 or 10,000. In this respect we are rated with Lindsay, Port Hope, Cobourg, Bowmanville, and many places in this district as well as throughout the Province that are much smaller. A manufacturer or investor seeing our geographical position and noticing that this was the only city in the district would at once have his attention drawn this way, but the advantage of a higher rating we throw away, something that no business man would think of doing.

And there would be no disadvantages to offset this gain. I am aware that there has been a prejudice against making the town a city, but, like many prejudices, there is no reason for it. In no particular would the change increase our expenses, unless it might be in one item of $200 in the salary of the Police Magistrate. Our relations with the county would remain the same, for the law under which we now arrange with the county regarding the jail, court house, etc., applies also to cities. If we were not separate from the county now of course being raised to a city would change our relations with it, but as the town is separate, and has been for nearly forty years, there would be no change in that respect and no increased expense. The city council would have the same control over salaries and expenditures (with the one exception mentioned) that the town council now has.

There has been heretofore reference made to the rate of taxation in certain cities, but the rate is just as high in certain towns, and the difference in the rates here and in some cities is not because one is a town and the others cities, for as a city we would have the same control as we now have as a town.

There might be some sentimental reason for preferring to be the "first town in the Dominion" rather than the smallest city, but one trouble with this is that only those acquainted with the town know it is the first town. On the other hand it would not be the smallest city, but would rank second in population of all the smaller cities.

Mr. E. J. Toker, who followed, said, he presumed it was not because of any lack of interest that there were not more present. He said it was a general belief in the larger cities that the affairs of Peterborough were being well administered, but in his travels he had found a lack of appreciation of the size and importance of Peterborough, because of the fact that it was not ranked as a city, and he believed that the union of the two corporations would greatly benefit both places. The tendency of the times was to union, and he thought that the same principle should be applied to Peterborough and Ashburnham. The union, he thought, should be effected now, before increasing conflicting interests make it more difficult.

Ald. Morrison was the next speaker, and expressed himself as being in favour of the union, and thought that the fact that all the ratepayers in Peterborough are eligible to vote on this question, should be widely published. Dealing with the question of cost, he said that the rate of Ashburnham's taxes would, with the new sewer, be at least equal to that of Peterborough, without any of the many other needed improvements. He advocated an immediate union, on the ground that if it were delayed the question of allowing the village for the improvements would be very formidable. Peterborough, he believed, would lose nothing by the union, and stood to gain considerable. The union would give the town more borrowing capacity, which would be very desirable, as the present borrowing ability of the town is one of the best in the province, and the financial position of the town is excellent, having a good balance of assets over liabilities. One of the strongest reasons why Ashburnham should become a part of Peterborough is that it would give the latter a number of available manufacturing sites and the town is now hampered in this respect. He would just as soon see 10,000 additional population in Ashburnham as to see that amount in Peterborough. He believed that the incorporation of Peterborough into a city would be a most desirable thing. He thought that the ratepayers on this side of the river should turn out on Thursday and vote for the union. It would be an advantage to Ashburnham to effect a union, because that village would then get a better lighting contract. The Hunter street bridge is now in excellent repair and the cost of maintenance to the town would be very small. He hoped to see in next year's Council representatives from five wards instead of four.

Mr. G. K. Martin, asked as to those who were eligible to vote, and the Mayor replied that in Ashburnham only those who are property holders may vote, while in Peterborough all who are eligible to vote at municipal elections might vote on this matter.

The next speaker was Ald. McWilliams, who said he too was strongly in favour of the union, and urged that the people of Peterborough should turn out and vote on Thursday. He thought the fact should be more strongly emphasized that Peterborough is the most important town in the whole district of Eastern Ontario. Referring to the action of the frontier towns in trying to secure C.P.R. connection, he said that the C.P.R. should be impressed with the importance of Peterborough's trade, and if this were accomplished there would be small danger of this sidetracking being done. Speaking of the proposed sewer system of Ashburnham and the method of cost distribution, he said the system in the village struck him as being very fair, and he urged that to avoid confliction an immediate union should be effected.

Mr. K. E. Wood said the discussion was one-sided, and he had been cudgelling his brain to find reasons against the union, but had failed. He thought the people generally were in favour of the union, their absence from the meeting being proof of this. The question of reputation was a most serious one, he said, and should receive consideration. It was a false supposition he thought, that a large town was better than a small city, because Peterborough and Ashburnham would make a city almost equal to Brantford or Kingston.

Mr. Hughes-Charles following, said that he fully coincided with the remarks made by the previous speakers, and urged that a great advantage would come to the place to become a city. He believed Ashburnham would benefit greatly by the union, and, in fact, would be even more benefitted than Peterborough, and he felt that the fears held by some in the village that they would be neglected was one without foundation.

Ald. Shortly expressed himself as being strongly in favour of the union. He expressed these views after having given considerable study to the question. Much more could be said in favour of the union than had been said.

Mayor Roger said that the matter had been given considerable thought by him and after the most careful consideration he had come to the conclusion that a substantial benefit would accrue to both municipalities by the union. It was not necessary to go out of the town to see the benefit of union. There are four wards in the town, and each is larger than Ashburnham, and none of these would think for a moment of seceding from the town, and, he asked, why should the river prove such an insurmountable barrier to the union. He could see no reason why a union should not be beneficial. The scattering nature of the village should not be a disadvantage to the union, as no difficulty would be experienced in managing the affairs of the town. No injustice on the score of assessment would be done by the union as the same law that fixes assessment in Peterborough would fix it in Ashburnham. The taxation would not be increased unduly by a union. In the town there are 10 miles of granolythic walks, 18 miles of sewers and 20 miles of water mains, while the village has not a foot of either of the two former. He hoped no occasion would be afforded to blame Peterborough if the union is not now effected. Peterborough, he said, is going to go ahead whether Ashburnham does or not, and he thought the opinion of the town should be recorded. The time, he thought was opportune for a union, the councils of both places are in harmony, and if the people vote in favour of it, there is no doubt that the union will be consummated. He would like to see a decisive vote on the question on Thursday.

PUBLIC MEETING IN ASHBURNHAM.

Sentiments of the Villagers Present Favoured the Union.

The meeting in the Ashburnham town hall was not very largely attended last evening, very few of the ratepayers of the village attending the public meeting to discuss the advisability or inadvisability of a union between Peterborough and its adjacent neighbour. Reeve Adams was unanimously voted to the chair, and after the meeting had been called to order, Mr. Adams remarked that the ratepayers present had two questions to consider: that of union and that of sewerage, which, on his suggestion, were treated separately, the former being first discussed.

Mr. Garvin, who was the first to express an opinion in the matter, began by remarking that in his mind when both of the municipalities were in favour of the union ten years ago, the individual councils were grossly culpable for the final abandonment of the proposal. Regarding the present union, he had only heard one man speak against it, and he felt that the sympathy of the villagers, or a large majority leaned towards a confederation of the two municipalities. He dwelt upon the future of Peterborough, claiming that in the course of years it would be one of the greatest industrial centres in Canada. He remarked that Peterborough was rightly called the "Electric City." Mr. Garvin, when speaking regarding taxation in the village, said that the taxes in any case will rise. If, he said, we are joined to Peterborough, and if our taxes go higher, our property will become more valuable. He said that the Ashburnham people will in any case, "have to put their hands into their pockets," and if a union were to be effected, more would be received in return for such expenditure.

Mr. Adams next made a few interesting remarks regarding the material differences between a city and a town, showing that practically the only additional expenditure would be an increase in the salary of the police magistrate of $200. This was provided for on account of the increased population, and not because of the privilege of the place being termed a "city." He showed that the village had almost no control over their moneys, and felt assured that if a union were to take place the new municipality would spend as much and probably more on Ashburnham per annum as is usually expended now. He pointed out that the county rate was 2 1-2 mills on the dollar, which under the new system would not be taxed. Then the Collegiate Institute fee of $250 would be escaped by amalgamation with the town. Speaking on modern improvements generally, Mr. Adams incidentally mentioned that it was not usually known that Ashburnham spends as much proportionately on the upkeep of her streets as does Peterborough. Looking at the matter from a financial standpoint, the speaker thought the idea that the taxes would be almost doubled were the union to take place a mistaken one. The assessment, he said, is made according to the value of the property, and if it was over assessed property owners can appeal. He next showed the gradual rise of taxes in the village during the past until it is now only one mill lower than in Peterborough. Since 1893, he said, Peterborough had spent $83,175 in the construction of sewers, of which they now had almost twelve miles, while no less than $45,101.24 had been spent in building granolithic walks. Were Ashburnham joined to Peterborough she would have equal advantages, resulting in the installation of modern improvements, which if the village remained separate, seemed far away. The town, supplied as it is, with engineers, men and machinery, could make permanent improvements at a much less cost than the village, the council of which have none of these complements, to prosperity. He remarked that there was some dissatisfaction felt regarding the waterworks system of the village, which would cease on union, and the town would take over the supplying of water. He illustrated in figures that the village was expending more for water than the town. A six-roomed house in town, he said, was charged $4, while the water rate for the same sized house in Ashburnham was $7.

Mr. E. A. Peck was the next to voice an opinion. In opposing the union he argued that other places of the same population as Ashburnham were able to manage their own affairs and prosper, why then could not Ashburnham do the same. Because Peterborough happened to be near at hand was no reason why the village should not be progressive enough to look after itself. He did not see that three or four Ashburnham representatives could stand up for the needs of the village, successfully, before the council. Mr. Peck added that Ashburnham was well situated, had no physical disadvantages, and good soil, there was nothing to prevent its future prosperity. The speaker's remarks were met with desultory applause.

Mr. Garvin said that were a union effected the proposed expenditure of $10,000 for a sewage system in the village would not be much to the whole community while that sum would be a serious consideration for Ashburnham ratepayers alone. He stated that the granolithic sidewalks were an absolute necessity, afterwards acclaiming the advantages to the entire community by the union, believing that manufacturing concerns would take sites in Ashburnham which at present they cannot get with at least favourable outside conditions.

Reeve Adams succeeded Mr. Garvin by adding that manufacturing concerns were naturally attracted by a large place, as a small one could not give a site and advantages. The village factories themselves were even moving to Peterborough, instanced not so long ago in the canoe factory moving to the west side of the Otonabee. There was more business done in Ashburnham 40 years ago, he said, than at the present day. The village relies on the town for business, schools and many other advantages and he did not see why the municipalities should be separate.

Mr. McCarthy also advocated a union, pointing out in a short speech its many prospective advantages.

The matter of sewage was begun by Mr. R. B. Rogers, who showed the absolute necessity of sanitary conditions for any municipality whatsoever.

Mr. Peck spoke favourably on the subject, saying that the question of sewage was a question of health. A village without a sewage system, he said, invites diseases. People throw their slops outside the door and before long the ground becomes contaminated generally resulting in a death or two from infection. This, he suggested might happen in the case of the village which later on may not become a desirable place to live in, from a sanitary point of view. If we do develop sickness, he continued, the cost of the doctor and nurse will be far more than the expenditure for a sewer. A villager assessed for $800 would have to pay for a sewer, that is to say for health, $1 per annum, which is the usual price for a good sized bottle of patent medicine, or the fee charged by a doctor for only a few minutes medical advice. In conclusion Mr. Peck voiced emphatically the want of a sewer. His remarks were loudly applauded.

Mr. Garvin suggested that should a union take place that Reeve Adams be appointed Mayor of the new municipality.

After a little insignificant discussion the meeting broke up, leaving on the mind of an outsider that a large majority indeed were in favour of the union taking place, as it would be of great advantage to both from every point of view.

The Most Wonderful Curative of All Time

For Torturing, Disfiguring Skin Humours

And Purest and Sweetest of Toilet Emollients.

Cuticura Ointment is beyond question the most successful curative for torturing, disfiguring humours of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, ever compounded, in proof of which a single anointing preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed in the severer cases, by a dose of Cuticura Resolvent, is often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning and scaly humours, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure when all other remedies fail. It is especially so in the treatment of infants and children, cleansing, soothing and healing the most distressing of infantile humours, and preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scalp and hair.

Cuticura Ointment possesses, at the same time, the charm of satisfying the simple wants of the toilet, in caring for the skin, scalp, hair, hands and feet, from infancy to age, far more effectually, agreeably and economically than the most expensive of toilet emollients. Its "Instant relief for skin-tortured babies," or "Sanative, antiseptic cleansing," or "One-night treatment of the hands or feet," or "Single treatment of the hair," or "Use after athletics," cycling, golf, tennis, riding, sparring, or any sport, each in connection with the use of Cuticura Soap, is sufficient evidence of this.

SAD RESULTS OF KIPPEN EXPLOSION.

The Pastor, Rev. Mr. McLennan, may lose His Eyesight.

The Pastor and the Caretaker Were Trying to Prevent an Explosion When it Took Place—Both are the Most Seriously Injured of Those Who Were in the Explosion—Who Were Hurt.

Kippen, Nov. 26.—Exploding gas destroyed St. Andrew's Church Tuesday night. Thirty persons were blown up. Five were seriously hurt. The fine new building of brick was rent and torn as if by an earthquake. The floor bulged up and the walls collapsed. The congregation was enjoying a social. The disaster came without warning. The wildest scenes followed the crash. The screams of women and children pinned beneath the fallen timbers and the cries of those burned by the exploding fluid added to the panic. The explosion was heard a mile away.

Considerable mystery surrounds the calamity. The explosion is attributed to faulty construction of the acetylene gas plant. A year ago the building was erected, at a cost of $3,000. Later the gas plant was installed. It worked satisfactorily. During the supper Tuesday night, a poignant odor of escaping gas was detected a moment before the explosion. Rev. Mr. McLennan and Caretaker Moore were quick to realize the danger the crowd stood in. They rushed toward the cellar to shut off the gas supply. They were just approaching the big generator when the gas was ignited. Each received the full force of the burning fluid, and were seriously burned.

The force of the explosion was sufficient to raise the floor up several feet. This was the first intimation the crowd received that something was amiss. As the floor bulged up the crash followed.

Many people were fastened under the wreckage, and the little children were in much distress. The darkness was intense, and this added to the horror. Physicians were brought rapidly, and the people slowly made their way out of the wreck.

The injured are:

Rev. Mr. McLennan's face is burned badly. He is also suffering from internal injuries, caused by inhaling the burning gas, and his eyes are supposed to be seriously injured. He may lose his sight.

Mr. Moore, the caretaker, was knocked senseless. He was injured on the head and face. He will recover, but will be badly disfigured.

Mrs. James McLean was seriously burned, but there is every hope of her recovery.

Miss Nellie Cooper, Miss E. Elyte and Misses Alice and Florence Taylor were badly burned on the hands and face.

Five others were not so seriously burned.

Doctors are in attendance on the injured. The damage to the building will perhaps amount to $2,000.

The patients are at the manse and in the village being cared for, being unable to be removed home.

TROLLEY CAR SMASH.

St. Catharines, Nov. 26.—A collision yesterday, which might have proved fatal, occurred on the Hamilton, Grimsby and Beamsville electric road, near Beamsville. A car well filled with passengers left Beamsville at 2.15 p.m., bound for Grimsby, and a ballast train had left the gravel pit shortly before the passenger car left Beamsville. Instead of waiting on the switch, the ballast train continued on its way and began to descend the grade at the west end of the village at the same moment the passenger car took it from the opposite direction. As the trains came in sight of one another, the motormen put forth their efforts to reduce speed, and the motorman of the passenger car brought his car to a standstill.

The momentum of the ballast train was too great, however, and the result was that it crashed into the passenger car, head on. All of the passengers were forcibly thrown from their seats and severely shaken up, and for a few moments it was thought one lady was dead. Mr. Moyer, insurance agent of this town, received the severest injury, having his left arm broken and being severely shaken up.

Nitro-Glycerine Exploded.

Crown Point, Ind., Nov. 26.—A nitro-glycerine tank at the Aetna Powder Works, at Miller Station, near here, blew up yesterday, killing Albert Hoenscher and fatally injuring Chas. L. Potter and A. Fisher.

Demented By Cold and Hunger.

Kaministiqua, Nov. 26.—Two men who left here last Wednesday for a camp located about twelve miles north, lost their way and became demented from cold and hunger. One was brought in yesterday badly frozen and sent to Fort William; the other was found about two and a half miles north of the station dead. The name of the man sent to Fort William is William Burns. He came from Newcastle, Ont. The name of the dead man is unknown.

Fell Three Storeys.

Toronto, Nov. 26.—Lawrence Campbell, 43 Alexander street, is in the Hospital with both legs broken and an injured spine. He was cleaning windows at the St. George Flats, corner of St. George and Harbord streets, and fell from the third story, lighting on his feet.

St. Thomas, Nov. 26.—The body of John Brady was yesterday morning discovered lying in the ditch on Forest avenue by Henry Huntley. The deceased was a farm laborer, aged 32.

FORCED TO GIVE DECISION.

Referee Grasser's Statement Regarding Fitzsimmons-Gardner Fight of Twenty Rounds—Decision to Fitzsimmons.

San Francisco, Nov. 26.—Bob Fitzsimmons proved last night that he was not a dead one, when he outboxed and out-generalled George Gardner for twenty full rounds. Fitzsimmons was as awkward and as cunning as of yore, and apparently realizing that he must foster his strength, there was not a moment, when he was not careful. While the old man could avoid punishment from Gardner he could not knock his opponent out, although he landed a number of vicious blows. From his performance last night Gardner is not in Fitzsimmons' class. He landed on the old-timer once in a while, but Fitz was always going away from him and the blows were harmless. Several times Fitz apparently had Gardner almost out, but he was either too tired or lacked his old strength and could not land a knock-out punch.

Fitz was very skilful in dodging Gardner's blows, and in the clinches and breakaways was very careful. The fight did not please the spectators, and the men in the ring were frequently hissed when they went through a round without apparently trying to fight. Referee Eddie Graney, at the close of the contest, said that it was the worst fight he ever saw. He was forced to give the decision to Fitz, because the latter secured the knockdowns but otherwise did no damage. It was apparent that neither man was qualified to claim championship honors.

Ratepayers Will Be Given an Opportunity to Vote on Proposition.

St. Thomas, Nov. 26.—The ratepayers of St. Thomas will be given an opportunity on Jan. 4 next of voting to bring the Pere Marquette shops to St. Thomas. Tuesday evening General Superintendent W. W. Woollatt of the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway and W. M. Guy, local agent, completed an agreement with the City Council, which only lacks ratification by the ratepayers. The agreement entered into is to the effect that the Pere Marquette will erect its Canadian workshops on the vacant ground near Wilson avenue at an estimated cost of $75,000, will install machinery therein at an outlay of $50,000 and will employ not less than 100 hands. In return for this the city is to give the company a bonus of $20,000, exemption from all taxes, including school taxes, for ten years, and will furnish water at manufacturers' rates, or 6 cents per 100 cubic feet.

BRITISH OPINION OF CANADA LIFE.

Visit of Mr. Cox, General Manager Inspires Appreciative Reference.

Mr. E. W. Cox, General Manager of the Canada Life, has recently returned from London, England, where he paid a visit to the English Branch of the Company. On the occasion of the visit, the Searchlight, one of the leading insurance journals of that country, says:—The Canada Life has unquestionably come to stay. A company possessing intrinsic merits of the highest order, the Canada Life has met with a reception exceeding in warmth its most sanguine expectations, and after only six months' work has found its position here is already assured.

In London a reporter took occasion to interview Mr. Cox, and found him highly gratified with the progress in organization which has been made during the short time the Company has been transacting business in Great Britain.

In the principal cities of England, Scotland and Ireland suitable office quarters have been secured, and a large staff of agents are making the name and standing of the Canada Life better known.

Said Mr. Cox: "On opening the British branch we were told by an excellent authority that, with luck, we might expect to do a certain amount in our first year. We have already exceeded this total, although we have only been at work six months. Mr. Cheyne is responsible. He has established an excellent organization, and I have found that the Company is represented here by really good men."

The writer of the interview in closing pays a deserved tribute to Mr. Cox, and the marked success which has attended the Company under his management, in these words: "Mr. Cox is a born manager, and has all those qualities which enable him to enlist the services of a loyal and enthusiastic staff. It is he who is doubtless responsible for the increasing new business of the Company, and as he is still in his prime, the Canada Life may be expected to make great advances under his capable control."

YOUNG'S POINT.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Young's Point, Nov. 26.

The hunters have all returned from the woods and report good luck, especially Mr. Beard's party, the members of which not only succeeded in getting the number of deer allowed, but also brought back a black bear.

Sleighing is good here at present, and the roads are excellent.

The Government steamer "Empire" made a trip to the Point on Friday and took a scowload of gravel to Burleigh for use in making cement piers at the dam.

A very successful party was given at Beard's Hall on Friday night. The large number present enjoyed dancing until one o'clock, when the gathering dispersed after refreshments had been served.

Almost successful ball was held in the cheese factory last night, given by Mr. A. Wilson, proprietor of the factory. Splendid music was provided, and the large number present thoroughly enjoyed the evening. Card tables were provided, and those who preferred cards to dancing were pleasantly entertained. Dainty refreshments were served.

Mr. L. Godfrey met with a very painful and serious accident. He was loading a shot gun when the weapon exploded, the charge entering his hand. He was taken to the Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, where the amputation of a finger was seen to be necessary. He is at present doing as well as can be expected.

The "Majestic" has been placed in dry dock for the winter. After a successful season Captain Scollard left for a visit with friends in Buffalo and Rochester.

Mr. P. P. Young and wife have gone on a visit to Rochester.

THANKS THE GRAND TRUNK.

The Grand Trunk Railway System, are in receipt from the Canadian Committee of Arrangements in connection with the Fifth Congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, that was held in Montreal last August, a copy of the resolution adopted by the Canadian Committee of Arrangements at a meeting held 13th November, 1903.

Accompanying this resolution was a personal letter to Mr. Chas. M. Hays, second Vice-President and General Manager, from Mr. Arthur J. Hodgson, Chairman of the Committee, which reads as follows:

Montreal, November 13, 1903.

Chas. M. Hays, Esq.,
Second Vice-President and General Manager, Grand Trunk Railway System, City.

Dear Sir, — It affords me much pleasure to communicate herewith a resolution adopted by my committee this forenoon, conveying to your company an expression of its gratitude for the tour over the Grand Trunk Railway System, which by the courtesy of the management was provided for the oversea delegates to the Fifth Congress.

Thanking you personally for having from the first inception of the project of a free tour for the oversea delegates given the project the most hearty reception.

I remain, dear Sir,
Yours faithfully,
ARTHUR J. HODGSON,
Chairman.

The resolution reads,—

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE CANADIAN COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS AT MEETING HELD 13TH OF NOVEMBER, 1903.

Resolved, — That the Canadian Committee of Arrangements tenders to the Grand Trunk Railway Company its most sincere thanks for the hearty manner with which it met the Committee's request that the oversea delegates to the Fifth Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire should with the object of giving them some idea of the extent, resources and beauties of this country, be tendered a complimentary tour over its lines.

That the size and sumptuous appointment of the special train provided by the Grand Trunk Railway Company for the conveyance of the party of 225 delegates was a revelation to them, and that the comfort and convenience of travelling thereon and the high speed maintained were greatly appreciated.

That the Committee gratefully recalls the company's considerate kindness in sending with the party a number of its chief officers who in their official car dispensed each day most welcome hospitality to the delegates and their ladies and who moreover endeared themselves to every member of the party by their constant and unwearying personal attention to their wants and comfort.

That the trip from Montreal to Niagara, with the visits paid en route to Kingston, Toronto and Hamilton, and the glimpses afforded of the River St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario, was much enjoyed by the delegates, affording as it did opportunity to form a just appreciation of the cities in that section of the country, and its river and Great Lake scenery, while the sojourn at Niagara Falls was a delight to all.

That the journey through the beautiful Dundas valley, the visits to the cities of London, Windsor and Sarnia, with the trip under the river through the St. Clair Tunnel, were much appreciated by the party, while the boat trip through the lovely scenery of the Muskoka Lakes, taken in perfect weather, concluded a most enjoyable week.

That the Committee especially thanks the Grand Trunk Railway Company for the series of beautifully illustrated and tastefully bound guide books of the route that were presented to each member of the party, and it assures the company that these are greatly treasured by all who received them.

That the Committee of Arrangements is convinced that the circumstance that with the assistance of the Dominion Government, and by the kindness of the Railway and Inland Steamboat Companies, it was able to tender to the oversea delegates these extended tours through Canada, added largely to the success which has attended the holding of the Fifth Congress in this City, and it is most gratifying to know that these tours have resulted in impressing the delegates most favourably with the great resources of this country, the vast opportunities it affords for the investment of capital, and its superior advantages as a home for the surplus population of the motherland.

That the Committee has been gratified to learn that the knowledge of the resources and beauties of our country thus obtained by the delegates will be widely disseminated by them through the various parts of the empire from which they came, for it is the intention of many of the delgates to communicate to the members of their respective Chambers and to other audiences, by illustrated lectures and other means, the information they have gathered during their visit to Canada.

That the Committee records its belief that the tours throughout Canada have fulfilled in the highest degree the hopo in which they were planned; that in addition to affording much enjoyment to the oversea delegates to the Congress, they would result in great and lasting good to our country, and that the Railway and Steamboat Companies who gave the transportation facilities, deserve and enjoy the gratitude of all Canadians for their wise generosity in this connection

TO STEM WHITE PLAGUE.

Year of Progress for Sanitarium Association.

Nurses' Training School to be Established—Important Work of the Free Hospital—The Need of Money.

The sixth annual meeting of the trustees of the National Sanitarium Association was held in the National Club on Saturday afternoon. Among those present were: Sir William Meredith, Vice-President, in the chair; Hon. Geo. W. Ross, Messrs. W. J. Gage, Hugh Blain, J. J. Crabbe, Dr. N. A. Powell, Fred Roper, accountant and auditor; Dr. J. H. Elliott, physician in charge of the Muskoka Cottage Sanatorium, and J. S. Robertson, Secretary of the association.

The reports of the officals of the Muskoka Cottage Sanatorium and the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives were of a very gratifying character, bringing the work of the association up to September 30. The year has been the most progressive in the history of the association. The number of patients in residence at the older institution, the Cottage Sanitorium, has been the largest in the history of the institution, running latterly from 65 to 69 each week. New roofed tents are now being built to bring up the accommodation of this institution to 75. The medical results attained have been of a very satisfactory character.

The present is the first complete year of the Free Hospital, 163 patients having been treated through the year, and for the period of eighteen months since the opening of the institution 294. These have come from the wage-earning class, 57 different occupations being represented, including axe-polishers, baggagemen, bakers, barbers, boxmakers, brass finishers, cigarmakers, coal heavers, firemen, gasfitters, journalists, labourers, laundresses, lumbermen, machine operators, piano tuners, printers, sailors, salesmen, seamstresses, steamfitters, trackmen, teachers, telegraph operators and wood machinists. The number of patients absolutely free maintained during the year was 37. Of those who paid in part for their maintenance the daily average amount per patient received from individuals or municipalities was 84c. Patients have come all the way from Prince Edward Island on the east to the North-west Territories on the west.

The financial report of the Free Hospital for the year shows that between the cost of maintenance for the twelve months, and the actual revenue received from patients who have paid in part, directly or through their municipality, together with the Government Grant, there was a shortage of $13,634.51. In response to appeals for contributions the sum of $10,375.96, was received during the year, making the net shortage $3,258.55. "These figures," says the secretary's report, "confirm the statement in my report of a year ago, that not less than $20,000 must needs be subscribed this year if the free hospital is to fully care for all patients for which it has provided accommodation. During the past year, because of the shrinkage in subscriptions for that period, the management were obliged to close certain wards."

Added to the liability on maintenance account, there is a large deficit in the shape of an overdraft in the Imperial Bank, on capital account.

Reference is made by the Secretary to the efforts that are being made through individual friends and financial corporations to secure $800 a year from each to endow 25 beds. This endowment proposition, the report says, if it can be carried out, with any degree of success, will prove an important factor in solving solving the financial problem of the institution.

This clause in the report is significant, "It is important to emphasize that in both the Muskoka institutions only those in the early stages of tuberculosis are admitted, though with the piteous calls that have come for help, and the hospitals generally throughout the Dominion refusing consumptive patients, this rule has frequently been departed from."

A proposal was made at Saturday's meeting to establish a nurse's training school in connection with the institutions of the association, and a committee was appointed to deal with the question. A laundry plant has been purchased, and buildings are now being erected at Muskoka, where it will be installed, and the work for the two institutions done on the premises.

A cordial vote of thanks was passed by the trustees to the daily newspapers of Toronto and the press generally throughout the country.

QUALITY OF BEET SUGAR.

Reported Statement by Dr. A. E Shuttleworth.

Dr. A. E. Shuttleworth, of the Ontario Sugar Company, writes: "There is a fact made prominent by the growth of the beet-sugar industry which every newspaper in Canada should be pleased to ridicule, viz., the lurking erroneous impression that beet sugar is an inferior sugar. Redpath's granulated sugar is made from the raw sugar of sugar beets grown in Germany or Austria, which is imported into and refined in Canada. It is also beet sugar. How ridiculous that a name should change the properties of a chemical substance. Seventy-five per cent. of the sugar consumed in Canada is beet sugar, called cane sugar, a commercial name used because the substance was first produced from the cane, and still retained by refiners whose raw material is largely or wholly derived from the beet. Redpath's granulated is an example. I have had tests made this summer with canned and preserved fruits, using only Berlin beet sugar, and may say that the fruits have kept perfectly."

London, Nov. 25.—Sir John Blundell Maple, bart., M.P., is dead from Bright disease. He was born in 1845. The title was awarded for political services to the Unionists. His exposure of the remounts in the South African war was one of the earliest movements towards the reform of the War Office. ST. CATHARINES WELL.

In St. Catharines, the Garden City of Canada, eleven miles from Niagara Falls, on the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway, is situated the historic "St. Catharines' well," about which is woven many a romantic Indian legend, and whose curative properties are known far and wide throughout North America. The water of this famous saline well is considerably denser than sea water, but clear, sparkling and odourless, and is remarkable for its penetrative qualities.

These waters are a great specific for such diseases as rheumatism, gout, scrofula, neuralgea, liver troubles, skin diseases and cases of nervous prostration, or as a tonic pure and simple. The treatment is conducted on the broadest possible lines, the idea being to assist nature as much as possible. The use of the water is the chief medicinal agent, accompanied by static electricity, massage, exercise and rest. Treatment is in charge of the House Physician. The baths are in a separate building, connected with the main building by a glass covered corridor.

Full information, descriptive matter, and all particulars may be had on application to G. T. Bell, G. P. & T. A., Grand Trunk Railway System, Montreal, Canada.

TO DISCUSS MILITIA BILL.

Sir Sred. Borden, Minister of Militia, Will Go to England.

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—Sir Frederick Borden is going to England to discuss the provisions of the proposed militia bill with the War Office. The bill provides for an increase of the permanent force by about 500 men, and also gives the Canadian Government power to appoint a Canadian officer to the command of the militia of this country. The measure was introduced at the last session of the Dominion Parliament, but at the request of Mr. Chamberlain was postponed until a conference could take place between the Minister of Militia and the War Office in England. Before the conference could take place Mr. Chamberlain resigned, and the matter was allowed to stand for a time. Lately negotiations were resumed, and yesterday Sir Frederick Borden received a cable asking him to come to England. It is understood that he will try and leave about Saturday by the Cunard Line.

IN NIGHT ATTIRE AT 26 BELOW.

Boarding House at Norwood, Manitoba, Visited By Flames.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 25.—At an early hour yesterday morning when the thermometer registered 26 below, Norwood was visited by a serious fire. A boarding house, occupied by Mrs. Millett, was totally destroyed, and the occupants saved their lives by jumping in night attire from upper windows. In the house besides Mrs. Millett, a widow, were her eight children and about ten or twelve boarders. Most of them were cut by the broken glass, while several had their hair and eyebrows badly singed. Fortunately the house is a low one, and the jump from the upper windows resulted in no broken limbs. The loss is about $2,000.

FAVOR FOR TAX BILL

Now in Hands of Special Committee of the Legislature.

IT WILL NOT BE WITHDRAWN

Opinions of Deputations Varied Very Much—Board of Trade of Toronto Supported the Measure—Toronto Retailers and Ontario Municipal Association Oppose and Urge Withdrawal of the Bill.

Toronto, Nov. 26.—The Select Committee of the Legislature on Municipal Taxation met yesterday morning in the Railway Committee room at the Parliament Buildings. The Committee was appointed by the House last spring, but its time was so much taken up with deputations that it could not report before prorogation. The chief measure it has in hand is the vast bill drawn up by the Royal Assessment Commission. There are also one or two lesser measures to be dealt with It was agreed last June that the Committee should meet in the fall and prepare a report for the next session of the Legislature, and the Attorney-General, as chairman, called the Committe together yesterday. The total membership is twenty, and those present yesterday morning were: Hon J. M. Gibson and Messrs. Foy (Toronto), Beck (London), Carscallen (Hamilton), Preston (Brantford), Duff (West Simcoe), Hoyle (North Ontario), Pettypiece (East Lambton), Hanna (West Lambton), Lee (West Kent), Barber (Halton), Tudhope (East Simcoe) and Stock (South Perth).

The chairman, Hon. J. M. Gibson, led the way in a declaration that the report of the Assessment Commission was too valuable to be disregarded. There must be a further share of the burden of taxation thrown upon the corporations. The rights of the municipalities must be protected, but at the same time the Province must look to the needs of its own revenues, especially with growing expenditures. It was a well-drawn bill and they should not be easily diverted from accepting the Commission's conclusions as reasonable.

Although the Committee heard an abundance of deputations last session, and the Assessment Commission heard a great many, the legislators yesterday morning were at once confronted with the problem of whether it should hear more of them. It was decided to do so, and in the morning the views of the Ontario Municipal Association were presented, while in the afternoon deputations from the Board of Trade and Retail Merchants' Association were heard.

The Ontario Municipal Association delegation urged the withdrawal of the bill, the Board of Trade delegation (wholesalers) generally favored it, while the retailers opposed.

Although no express decision was announced it was evident the bill recommended by the Assessment Commission would not be dropped as had been suggested, but would be considered and amendments made, and those portions which were commendable would be accepted.

Darnley, P.E.I., Nov. 25. — Special. All through this tight little island, Dodd's Kidney Pills have established a reputation that has made them a household word. Many are the cases of Kidney Disease that have vanished before a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills. "For over eight years," he says, "I suffered from what the doctors pronounced Chronic Inflammation of the Loins and Kidneys. I got so bad I could scarcely sit or sleep. The doctor's medicine did not help me, and I was about to give up in despair when an advertisement led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. They did a wonderful work for me. Farm lands appreciated last year $19,000,000, and buildings $11,000,000. There were 1,127 cheese factories, a decrease of 50, which manufactured to the value of $14,792,924; the output increased by 12,000,000 pounds; the patrons decreased 4,000, and $3,000,000 more was paid to them for milk, or $13,153,255.

END OF CHICAGO STRIKE.

Company Yields Point, But Men's Original Demands Not Granted.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—The Chicago street carmen's strike was brought to a close yesterday by the ratification by the men of a compact agreed upon by their leaders and representatives of the company.

The basis on which the settlement was reached is a complete victory for the company as far as the original demands of the men are concerned.

The only important concession made by the company was an agreement to reinstate all the strikers, including the outside unions, who went out in sympathy with the trainmen, with the exception of those who resorted to violence during the trouble.

Have Reached Agreement.

Montreal Nov. 26.—The committee representing the locomotive engineers and the firemen of the Canadian Pacific Railway have practically reached a working agreement with the management, which has now merely to be ratified by the president, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy. The committee was in conference with General Manager McNicoll all day yesterday.

Roosevelt Denounced.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Senator Patterson of Colorado expressed himself in strong terms yesterday against the President's policy in Panama. "I regret the action of the Administration in aiding and encouraging the rebellion of Panama and its secession from the Republic of Colombia," he said, "as a most open and flagrant violation of international moral obligation to a sister republic, and the unqualified violation of a treaty the benefits of which we have enjoyed for fifty-seven years."

Paper Mill shut Down.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 26.—Thousands of men employed by the paper mills of New England and New York State are idle because of a shutdown of mills at numerous points. The International Paper Mills operating twenty-eight mills in New York and New England has announced a suspension of operations at all points for one week. The suspension is attributed to trade conditions. In New England unusually low water in mill streams practically forced the mill owners to stop machinery.

Will Never Face Trial.

Toronto, Nov. 26.—It is not likely that the case of Alfred McDougall, who is charged with embezzlement of funds from the Ontario Government, will ever come to trial. The case was called before Judge Winchester yesterday. The defendant's physicians stated that McDougall was in such a weak condition that in their opinion he could not live much longer.

Not Afraid to Endorse It.

People have learned to have such confidence in Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for every form of piles that they do not hesitate to endorse it at every opportunity. As a result Dr. Chase's Ointment is probably recommended by more persons than any preparation on the market today. There is no guesswork about its effects—relief is prompt and cure certain.

ANGLO-SAXON LOST NEAR YARMOUTH.

Struck Ledge at Low Water—Narrow Escape of Crew.

Halifax, Nov. 26.—The steamer Boston, which left Yarmouth yesterday, had on board the crew of the schooner Anglo-Saxon, lost near that port on Tuesday. The schooner left Gloucester for Princetown to get bait, but encountered rough weather and struck the outer ledge of Mud Island at low water. The crew of fifteen men took to the boats, but the captain and five others returned at high water when she floated. She was headed for Yarmouth, but though hard work was done at the pumps she filled rapidly and sank in deep water. The crew reached the shore in safety and were brought to Yarmouth yesterday. The vessel belonged to Cunningham & Thompson of Gloucester and was worth $12,000. Capt. Porter says that her bottom was stove in, so that she would be valueless if raised.

Orphan Girls Benefit By Death.

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—Mrs. J. Edgar Thompson, widow of a former president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is dead, at her home here. She was 79 years old. By her death the orphan daughters of Pennsylvania Railroad employes will be made the beneficiaries of a charity planned by Mr. and Mrs. Thompson many years ago. A large lot has been reserved as the site of an institution, and on it will be erected a building capable of accommodating 800 girls. The institute will be endowed from the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson.

Porte Accepts Reforms.

Constantinople, Nov. 26.—The Austrian and Russian Ambassadors here have received the reply of the Porte to the Macedonian reform proposals of the powers, accepting, in principle, all the nine points of the reform scheme.

The acceptance is qualified with the reservation that, in the applying of the scheme, everything calculated to humiliate Turkey shall be avoided. The Turkish reply has produced a good impression in diplomatic circles.

An All-Canadian Line.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 26.—The Legislature assembles to-day. The Speech from the Throne says that increased taxation is necessary. As a result of the decision in the Alaskan case, the Government will support "the building of an all-Canadian railway into the Yukon." The speech is strong against the Japanese.

Dog Made Him Crazy.

London, Nov. 26.—Robinson, the man who attempted to shoot the secretary of the Bank of England, was for six years a prospector in the Yukon, and while in Dawson he was bitten by a dog, the effects of which have always remained.

Reverse Will Retire Him.

Paris, Nov. 26.—La Patrie says former Premier Waldeck-Rousseau, angered at his recent reverse in the religious discussion in the Senate, will shortly retire from public life.

"God Save the King."

The identity of the author of the melody known in England as "God Save the King" and in the United States as "America" is a matter of controversy, but there is authentic proof of the fact that the English national anthem was sung in the middle of the Eighteenth Century to the same air as now. About 1766 this melody became known on the European Continent and was adopted as the national air of Prussia, Saxony and some other North German States. It is possible, therefore, that the air reached us from Germany, but it had been used by the English long before the beginning of the last century.

LAMENTED DEATH OF MRS. WM FAIR.

Occurred Yesterday Morning at Millbrook From Injuries Received.

Deceased Lady was Member of one of the Oldest and Most Respected Families in Cavan.

Mrs. William Fair, mother of Mr. Robert Fair, died at Millbrook yesterday morning at 11.45, from injuries received two weeks ago last Monday while out driving, the nature of her injury being that of an impotted fracture of one of her limbs received by falling while alighting from her carriage. The shock was so great that she lapsed into surgical delirium, from which she never recovered, although for the last few days she has been insensible to pain.

Her Christian name was Anne McCamus, daughter of the late Robert McCamus, who died in 1885. The family is one of the oldest in the township, and was about the first to leave the township of Cavan, Ireland, and settle in the township that is now called by the same name. Mr. McCamus came to this country in 1820, and in 1835 the late Mrs. Fair was born. She was married in 1853 to her now sorrowing husband, Mr. William Fair. They lived for a number of years at Centreville, but retired about 15 years ago and removed to Millbrook, where they have since resided. Her character was one of the most beautiful, her life being most consistent and without the slightest deception. She was a devoted member of the Episcopal Church and also took pleasure in dispensing charity in an unostentatious manner, and relieving the sick.

She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband, one son, Mr. Robt. Fair, of Peterborough, and two daughters, Miss Bella and Miss Ida, at home. One brother, Mr. Thomas McCamus, who lives on the homestead, and a sister, Mrs J. Wood, of Hope Township, also survive her.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon at 1.30, from her late residence, to St. Thomas' Episcopal church, where service will be held, the interment being at St. Paul's church cemetery.

The interest begins right at the commencement of the story, and continues unabated to the end, so that no copies should be missed. Be sure and read the first installment in the issue of Monday, Nov 30th.

MADE A LIFE MEMBER.

Mrs. J. C. Davidson Presented with Certificate of Life Membership in Woman's Auxiliaries.

At a meeting of St. John's Woman's Auxiliary last Tuesday, a certificate of life membership was presented to Mrs. J. C. Davidson. The certificate sets forth that it is the gift of the late Miss S. Fair, as a tribute of the esteem the recipient was held by the donor. Members of the family of the late Miss Fair were to have been present to make the presentation but were prevented by sickness in the family. The officers and members of the Branch presented Mrs. Davidson with a gold pin, the badge of life membership, which, with the certificate was suitably acknowledged.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Millisa Thornton Died This Morning After a Year's Illness.

The death occurred this morning of Mrs. Millisa Thornton, at her late residence, 65 Harvey street, after an illness of about one year. The deceased, who was 53 years of age, had been a great sufferer from asthma for some time, and her death was due to this disease. She was a widow, her husband having died about 20 years ago, and leaves one son, Mr. Theo. Thornton, and, one step son, Mr. Robt. Thornton.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, from her late residence, to Little Lake Cemetery.

A CREDITABLE PIECE OF WORK.

Elegant Wall Case in W. Warne's Store Made by Peterborough Canoe Co.

Mr. W. Warne has placed in his patent medicine store a new oak wall case, which is a credit not only to the store, but also to the manufacturers, the Peterborough Canoe Company. The case is a three section one, made of white oak, with a fancy sawn top, and polished to bring out the natural beauty of the wood. Its presence makes a decided improvement to the appearance of the store interior, and its beauty is a revelation to many, who had not believed that a local firm could manufacture goods of that nature.

TAKE IN THE BEST.

There is no doubt that the best concert attraction of the season will be that held under the auspices of St. Andrew's Young Men's Guild on Wednesday next in Bradburn's opera house.

Miss Tina Crawford, Scotland's greatest contralto, is making her initial tour of the United States and Canada, of whom the Dumfries, Scotland, Herald, speaks as follows: —"An expectant hush swept over the audience as the time drew near for Miss Crawford to make her appearance. Absolute silence prevailed until the end of her first song, when the people became enthusiastic and burst forth into rapturous applause. On her second appearance they cheered lustily and Miss Crawford was forced to respond to a double encore before the audience would allow her to retire. We have not heard such a brilliant voice in Dumfries for many years."

A PLEASING SOCIAL EVENT IN KEENE.

Miss Lottie Bell and Mr. M. J. Galvin Married Yesterday.

St. John's Church, Keene, the Scene of a Society Wedding—Popular Young Lady Married.

St. John's Church, Keene was the scene of a very pretty wedding yesterday morning at 9.30, when Miss Lottie Bell, of Keene, daughter of Mr. Chas. Bell, was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mr. M. J. Galvin, of Toronto. The rites were solemnized by Rev. Father Phalen, the church containing a large number of friends of the bride and groom, both of whom were well known and popular.

The bride, who was handsomely attired in a costume of white corduroy trimmed with mink fur and lace, with a picture hat to match, was given away by her father. Miss Lillian Bell, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and was dressed in a beautiful suit of light tweed with Persian trimmings and garnet picture hat. Mr. John R. Walsh, of Hastings, acted as groomsman.

After the wedding ceremony the couple, with a large number of guests drove to the home of the bride's father, where a dainty dejeuner was served, the newly wedded couple leaving for Peterborough in the afternoon, where they boarded the 5.10 C.P.R. train for Toronto, where Mr. Galvin has a prosperous business, and where they will reside for the winter. The bride's going away costume was a light tweed suit with Persian trimmings.

A very large number of handsome and costly gifts, of which the bride was the recipient, testified to her popularity, and the esteem in which she is held by her extensive circle of friends. Among the array of gifts was a black Persian lamb coat with mink trimmings, presented by the groom. The bride is very well known in social circles in Peterborough, where her charming personality and her musical ability as an accomplished violinist made her a general favourite.

Mr. Galvin, although he has not been living in this vicinity for some time, is quite well known, and is a very popular young man. He has but recently moved to Toronto from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., where for some years he conducted with his brother Mr. P. J. Galvin, a most successful business. He is President of the International Employment Association, which has branch offices in all the principal Canadian and American cities, the head office being in Sault Ste. Marie.

The young couple start out in their married life with the best wishes of their large circle of friends.

WEDDING BELLS.

Nuptials of Mr. Cecil Sucee and Miss May Dunford.

Armitage took place at 8 o'clock last night at 414 Sherbrooke street, when Miss May Georgina Dunford, daughtor of the late Albert Dunford, was married to Mr. Cecil D. Sucee, son of Mr. Joseph Sucee, of Ashburnham. The bride, who was dressed in white muslin carrying white carnations, was supported by Miss Annie Bryans, of Havelock, while Mr. Wm. F. Porter of town, fulfilled the duties of groomsman.

After the ceremony a delightful wedding dejeuner was served, at which the immediate relatives and friends were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Sucee will reside at 414 Sherbrooke street.

VERY LITTLE INTEREST TAKEN IN VOTING.

Only 293 Votes Polled When a Canvas was Made.

A canvass of the different polling sub-divisions in town at 3.30 this afternoon, gives the information that the electors are turning out very slowly to vote on the annexation question. In all the seven sub-divisions only 293 votes had been registered at that hour.

These were divided as follows:

Ward No. 2 — Sub-div. No. 3, council chamber, 55 votes; Sub-div. No. 4, Green's store, 41 votes.

Ward No. 3. — Sub-div. No. 5, J. W. Metheral's shop, 58 votes; sub-div. No. 6, 39 votes.

Ward No. 4 — Sub-div. No. 7, Wm. Lee's shop, 41 votes.

The figures for Ashburnham are not available but it is learned that little interest is being taken and votes are coming in slowly.

WEDDED IN ST. PETER'S.

Miss Nora McMahon Married to Mr. Michael John Bolton.

Yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Peter's Cathedral, Mr Patrick John Bolton was united in marriage to Miss Norah McMahon, in the presence of a number of the friends of the interested parties. The bride, who was very prettily and becomingly attired, was attended as bridesmaid by Miss Minnie Conroy, while Mr Michael Bolton was groomsman.

LADY MINTO COTTAGE HOSPITAL SCHEME.

A Praiseworthy Enterprise Which Should be Generously Supported.

The above is a scheme of Lady Minto to raise a fund of money to establish a number of hospitals in the North-West, which are to be superintended by a Victorian nurse, and Her Excellency wants, before leaving Canada, to have an endowment fund secured to run these hospitals. This fund has reached $26,000 From this sum eleven hospitals have been substantially aided, in Manitoba, Dauphin, Shoal Lake and Swan River; in British Columbia, Vernon, Revelstoke, Fort William and Thessalon; in Nova Scotia, Pictou. Grants have been promised to Red River, N.W.T., and North Bay, Ont., and it is hoped these can be completed as soon as spring arrives. It is intended at Revelstoke that the Indian women should be taught to nurse among their own people. It is Lady Minto's desire that her scheme should be contributed to by every person in order to have every one interested in what work is being done among the growing population of the west for the relief of those from our midst who go our there to cultivate new homes. Her Excellency, knowing that Peterborough is the largest town of Canada and the centre of such a large country, would like to see this district represented in her list, and Mrs. McAllister has been made secretary for Peterborough, and contributions of any amount from $1 up will be gladly received by her or may be left at Edmison's drug store. It is hoped that for the pleasure of Her Excellency, and for Peterborough's own good name, a goodly sum will be raised in this way.

ST. LUKE'S ANNUAL TEA A SUCCESS.

Foresters' Hall Filled to Overflowing Last Night.

Excellent Programme Rendered, in Which the Orchestra took a Prominent Part Rev. W. R. Tandy M. A. Chairman.

The ladies of St. Luke's Church have attained a well earned reputation for holding one of the most successful suppers and concerts of the year, and the announcement of the date each year is eagerly looked for. Satisfactory as all previously held suppers have been, both to the ladies who prepared them, and those who partook of them, that held last night surpassed them all. There have never been so many to satisfy, and they have never been so well satisfied. Year by year these events have gradually outgrown the buildings in which they have been held, and if the present rate of increase continues there will soon be no structure in town large enough to contain the crowds.

That held last night was in the Foresters' Hall, which was filled to overflowing From the time the dining hall was opened, shortly before six o'clock, until after eight, it was continually filled, and those who partook of the good things provided by the ladies are loud in their praise of the excellent quality.

After the supper a splendid programme was given in the large hall, at which Rev. W. R. Tandy, M. A., of Havelock, in the absence by sickness of the Rector, Rev. E. A. Langfelt, was chairman. Prior to the chairman announcing the programme, the orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Rupert Gliddon, rendered a number of selections which were thoroughly enjoyed. The playing brought forth the most enthusiastic applause.

Rev. Mr. Tandy in the chairman's address said he regretted that the Rector, who was so deeply interested in the work was unable to be present to participate in the success of the event. He congratulated the ladies, the result of whose work had been so highly satisfactory. The chairman's address was followed by a vocal solo by Mr. Walter Stocker, which met with distinct approval by the audience. Miss Mabel Pringle then gave a recitation, followed by a vocal solo by Miss Mary Rush. The orchestra gave a selection after which Miss Ruth Dawson favoured the company with a solo. Mr. Robinson, gave a much enjoyed reading, which was succeeded by a solo rendered by Mr R. H. Shepherd. All Saint's Male Quartette closed the programme with a well rendered selection

The hall in which the programme was given was crowded to the doors, and the large audience showed its unmistakable appreciation of the highly meritorious entertainment given.

The members of the Woman's Auxiliary, under which Society the supper was held, were assisted by the members of the Girls' Guild.

The admission fee will be 25 cents for both concert and hop, and can be had from members of the committee, the members of which are from each department of the works. Further announcements will be made before the date arrives.

LEAVING AFTER 78 YEARS RESIDENCE.

Mr. John Cranley sr., Left To day for Ludington, Michigan.

After 78 years residence in the township of Douro, Mr. John Cranley, Sr., left this morning for Ludington, Mich., where he will in future reside. Mr. Cranley is one of the oldest continuous residents of Peterborough county, and is one of the pioneers who helped to reclaim it from the state of virgin forest. He came here in 1825 when but two years old, having journeyed with his parents from Tipperara, Ireland. He married here, and raised a family, three sons still living in Douro township, John, Patrick, and David, and two, Michael and James, in Ludington, Mich. Mr. Cranley became a widower about three years ago, since when he has been living with his sons.

It is with natural feelings of regret that Mr. Cranley leaves the scene of his residence for so many years.

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM A SIGNAL TO LEAVE.

The View Taken by Local Audiences An Example Last Night.

At the conclusion of a full dress rehearsal of "H. M. S. Pinafore" held in the Opera House last night, the National Anthem was sung. The audience, for there was a large number of interested persons present, immediately stood up and joined in, and did not take it as a sign to slip on their coats and wraps and make a dash for the door in an almost desperate effort to reach the exit before the chorus could get the first three words out of their mouths. This habit, it is to be regretted, is more than common with Peterborough audiences, who seem to be serenely ignorant of the fact that when the National Anthem is sung it is to show the loyal feelings of those present to their Sovereign. It would be better not to sing it at all than to have it so lightly considered.

Don't forget to mark your tickets to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, at Ormond & Walsh's Drug Store for St. Andrew's Young Men's Guild Concert.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

It is not too early to sit down and plan out your Christmas shopping. The merchants have laid in the supplies of all kinds of holiday goods, and are ready to show them to their customers, and it may be said here that at no former holiday season was there a finer or more generous supply of all kinds of goods, knick-knacks and novelties, which always find a ready sale about this season of the year, than there is at present. Times have been good, very good, and are still good, with most people, and the merchants have laid in stocks accordingly, anticipating perhaps the largest and most profitable trade of any season for years. Those who prefer to buy the materials and make their own Christmas presents—and these are generally most appreciated—cannot begin too early to make their purchases. Those, again, whose Christmas gifts are to cross the sea will be none too soon in looking out for that which they desire to send away. And all purchasers of Christmas gifts or goods should do their buying as early in the season as possible, because, notwithstanding that the merchants place in stock an immense amount of goods every season, as the days go by the stock dwindles down, and those who have left their selections to the last have to take what is left, instead of having their pick of the whole stock while it is fresh and unbroken.

Through the aid of the newspaper and the advertiser, shopping has become a pleasure. Examiner advertisers tell daily what they have for their many customers, the kind and quality of the goods, the price, and all other information that it is necessary to know. Ladies in search of what they want should consult the columns of the Examiner.

It is not too early to begin your Christmas shopping.

MR. JOHN BRADLEY A POPULAR RIALROADER.

Particulars of His Death, Which Occurred Suddenly at Port Hope.

The Port Hope Guide contains the following particulars of the sudden death in that town of Mr. John Bradley, notice of whose death appeared in yesterday's Examiner:—

"Mr. John Bradley, a former resident of Port Hope, and at one time conductor on the Midland division of the G.T.R., died very suddenly at the Queen's Hotel this morning.

"Mr Bradley has for some time been running from Peterborough to Belleville, but was given the position of baggageman running from Toronto to Port Hope, this situation having been made vacant by the death of the late Thomas Sharpe.

"It was nearly 11.30 o'clock last night when the train arrived. Deceased walked from the station with Conductor Buller, apparently in the best of health, and after remaining in the sitting room of the Queen's Hotel for some time retired.

"About 1.30 o'clock Mr. Garbutt, night watchman, happened to be in the hotel and hearing a sound as if something had fallen informed Mr. Bennett, the proprietor. Mr. Bennett looked around the house, but found nothing wrong.

"At six o'clock this morning Mr. Garbutt went to deceased's room to call him, and upon receiving no reply opened the door and was horror-stricken to find Mr. Bradley lying on the floor dead.

"Dr. Corbett was at once summoned and upon examination found that the man had been dead for some time. Cause of death, heart failure. It is supposed that deceased felt this weakness coming on and got up to ring the bell, but before he could reach it was overcome.

"Mr. Bradley was for several years a resident of this town where he was married to Miss Sarah Gray, daughter of the late Joseph Gray, who for many years held the important position of Secretary of the Midland Division.

"Lately he has resided at 130 Seaton Street, Toronto. To mourn his departure he leaves a widow, a celebrated singer well known to the musical public of Port Hope, a daughter, also a noted vocalist and a teacher in the Conservatory of Music, Toronto, and one son, Bruce, at home.

"The remains were taken to Toronto by the flyer to-day for interment."

CANADA'S ANNUAL HOLIDAY NUMBER.

Regardless of race, creed or politics the people of Canada have come to regard The Christmas Globe as their national holiday number. It is the product of Canadian brains and enterprise and the pride of the Canadian people.

The publishers of The Globe assure their friends that the 1903 issue will excel in the wealth of its literary matter and in the richness of its artistic finish any of its predecessors. It would be difficult to conceive of a publication better calculated to dispel the erroneous conceptions of Canada and Canadian life that have taken root in the minds of the people of Europe than The Christmas Globe. This year the list of contributors contains such well-known names as Ralph Connor author of "The Sky Pilot," "The Man from Glengarry," etc.; Mrs. Jean Blewett, James E. Le Rossignol, Miss Agnes Dean Cameron, S. T. Wood and others.

IN RURAL ENGLAND.

ENGLAND'S WIDE-FAMED FARMS TO-DAY ARE UNPROGRESSIVE.

Change in the Character and Aspirations of the Young Farm Laborers Has Made the Well-Known Hedge a Very Variable Quantity—The Portman Estate Model Cottages—A Rather Dismal Picture.

The decadence of the English farming country is a fact well known and much deplored. Quaint and picturesque they are, but from an industrial point of view many of the country villages are dead, and England's wide-famed farms to-day are unprogressive, writes Mr. W. H. Moss in Toronto Globe. Striking revelations of these industrial conditions are given in Rider Haggard's "Rural England," in a recent magazine review of which there appears some general remarks on the subject:

There are certain general features, and yet generalizations are dangerous. There are signs not only of inevitable change, but of decadence and failure on a large scale; yet there are indications of new enterprise, and of possibilities as yet undeveloped. There are not only immense tracts that once bare corn reduced to pasturage; but there are many thousands of acres where the land is absolutely derelict, and long ranges of field where thistles and wild bush flourish, and the fox or rabbit play landlord or tenant till the city sportsman comes down; and yet there are farmers who thrive, and laborers here and there who rise, and many who live comfortably on the land, though they cannot make money from it; and there is, too, abundant wealth in country places which is not produced there.

Continuous Drift Towards Towns.

The drift towards the towns is continuous. We have long been aware of it. Here is the evidence from the villages. From north, south, east and west, with rare exceptions, comes the complaint that the young men are leaving them. The testimony on innumerable farms is that only the old men and the children remains. The work done, too, is generally inferior; all pride in it has been lost; the farmyard stacks are no longer the boast of rural architecture, but slovenly structures, as much of the work of the fields is slovenly. The cornfields have been turned into pasture-land; but it is startling, when we have heard the milk-cans rattling at the railway stations, to be told that in some places no one can be found to do the milking. The burden of feminine talk in the cities is concerned with the inferiority and dislocations of household "service"; there is a corresponding upset in agricultural life. In view of this exodus, the lament that "labor is scarce" means that at one point the vital forces are ebbing.

The lack of cottages in some localities doubtless causes young couples to move on; there are many cottages inhabited that should be condemned; and the conditions of a falling industry do not favor schemes of rebuilding. Yet when the most is done that can be done it does not always content. Here is a striking experience given by Mr. Haggard from the Portman estates:

Portman Model Cottages.

"In addition to their model cottages, for which they pay very little—but eightenpence a week—the laborers have pensions, clothing and coal clubs, to which the subscriptions are doubled at the end of the year, liberal allowances in the case of sickness, allotments and every other conceivable advantage. Yet they go, and, what is more, strike at haytime or other inconvenient seasons, and are generally troublesome. 'They won't be kept,' said Mr. Forrester, but, male and female, depart, mostly to take service in shops. Few except the 'doodles' remain. Doodle, by the way, is the Dorsetshire equivalent for the Norfolk 'wanter' and the Devonshire 'smike.' Yet if they will not stop on an estate like this, which, of course, is run absolutely without reference to expense—£10,000 a year, I understand being spent in wages alone—where will they stop?

"Everything has been tried. Thus, when some men asked for land, Mr. Forrester arranged for them to have a field of twenty-three acres, which was let at twenty-four shillings the acre, the landlord building a barn and providing a shand-power threshing machine. Fourteen men hired lots in this field, but in ten years there was only one of them left, the balance of the land having been rented by a miller. Again, cottages were sold to certain of the people upon special arrangements as to price. Mr. Forrester said that this was the worst thing that ever happened to them, and some of these cottages were now being condemned because their occupiers had reduced them to such a condition that they were no longer fit for folk to live in."

Too Limited Home Production.

The English farmer does not, moreover, supply nearly as much as he should of the nation's food.

"'I do not know,' said Sir John Rolleston, the President of the Surveyors' Institute, 'that any of us could take three meals in a day at a metropolitan restaurant, and be absolutely certain any single article that we consumed, either of meat or drink, was produced from the soil of Great Britain or Ireland.'

"By way of comment on this statement I may remark that more often than not the traveler may be quite certain of the contrary. In the course of extensive journeyings in England in 1901 I stayed in a good many hotels. With few exceptions—indeed, almost always if the towns were of any considerable size—I found that the food was foreign, and the waiters were German.

"The farmers are all gradually sinking in point of property. The very rich ones do not feel that ruin is absolutely approaching, but they are all alarmed; and as to the poorer ones, they are fast falling into the ranks of paupers. When I was at Ely, a gentleman who appeared to be a great farmer told me in presence of fifty farmers, at the White Hart Inn, that he had seen that morning three men cracking stones on the road, as paupers of the parish of Wilbarton; and all these men had been overseers of the poor of that same parish within the last seven years. Wheat keeps up in price to about an average of seven shillings a bushel, which is owing to our two successive bad harvests; but fat beef and pork are at a very low price, and mutton not much better. The beef was selling at Lynn for five shillings the stone of fourteen pounds, and the pork at four-and-sixpence; the wool (one of the great articles of produce in these counties) selling for less than half of its former price."

The Modern Dorset Peasant.

Fifty years ago the Dorset peasant was supposed to typify the worst estate of the agricultural laborer. Mr. Thomas Hardy, who has long known the county intimately, gives Mr. Haggard a note which shows it curiously modernized:

"I am told at the annual hiring fair just passed, the old positions were absolutely reversed, the farmers walking about and importuning the laborers to come and be hired, instead of, as formerly, the laborers anxiously entreating the stolid farmers to take them on at any pittance. Their present life is almost without exception one of comfort, if the most ordinary thrift be observed. I could take you to the cottage of a shepherd, not many miles from here, that has brass rods and carpeting to the staircase, and from the open door of which you hear a piano strumming within. Of course, bicycles stand by the doorway, while at night a large paraffin lamp throws out a perfect blaze of light upon the passerby. The son of another laborer I know takes dancing lessons at a quadrille class in the neighboring town.

"But changes at which we must all rejoice have brought other changes which are not so attractive. The laborers have become more and more migratory, the younger families in especial, who enjoy nothing so much as fresh scenery and new acquaintance. The consequences are curious and unexpected. For one thing, village tradition—a vast amount of unwritten folklore, local chronicle, local topography, and nomenclature—is absolutely sinking, has nearly sunk, into oblivion. . . . I cannot recall a single instance of a laborer who still lives on the farm in which he was born, and I can only recall a few who have been five years on their present farm. . . . That these people have removed to the towns of sheer choice during the last forty years it would be absurd to say, except as to that percentage of young, adventurous and ambitious spirits among them which is found in all societies. . . .

"Why such migrations to cities did not largely take place till within the last forty years or so is, I think, in respect of farm laborers, that they had neither the means nor the knowledge in old times that they have now."

Remedial Measures.

As to remedial measures, that which most commends itself as a means of keeping people on the land is the endeavor to give them a larger interest in it. The multiplication of small holdings is a chief way to that end, and Mr. Haggard supplies many illustrations which may help in the practical discussion of that question. There are other useful suggestions, some of the most valuable in the book coming from General Booth. A system of agricultural banks is also explained which seems likely to be of service where capital is wanting. Mr. Haggard himself advocates as a minor measure the establishment of an agricultural post. It seems, however, likely that the motor cars will in time effect as great a change in rural England as the electric railways have in rural America; as a preliminary let the highways be gradually adapted to their use.

A Duke's Cute Idea.

The Duke of Bedford has caused a good deal of amusement to the inhabitants of Woburn by his latest investment, a sort of miniature armored train, consisting of a truck, painted brown like the Duke's livery, and drawn by a small steam-motor. Both the motor and the truck are protected by high sides, so that the Duke can go safely into the enclosure where he keeps the wilder animals of his wonderful Zoo at Woburn. Some of these beasts are inclined to be restive at times, and the Duke had a narrow escape of being damaged by a large specimen of deer which turned ferocious one day while the Duke and a somewhat stout friend were in the enclosure, inspecting various new-comers. The enclosures are fenced round with very high palings, and the Duke, who is active and slim, was soon on the outside, but his friend had more difficulty, and only escaped by a very narrow squeak. Hence the new importation. And now the Duke and his friends can steam round the park in safety.—From M. A. P.

The Boyhood Friend.

Before he was elected to be the chief executive of the Old Dominion Governor Montague of Virginia met an old classmate on the train. They had not met for years. Mr. Montague was a candidate for governor and the other a plain country lawyer with a small income.

"What can I do for you when I'm governor?" said the candidate as he put his arm around his friend. "What can I do for you, old boy?"

"Just what you have done now," quietly replied the lawyer.

"Why, what's that?" said the other.

"Simply put your arm around me and call me 'old boy.' That's all I want," was the reply of the true friend of boyhood days.

The Function

of the kidneys is one of the most important in the human economy. Into everything we eat and drink, no matter how "pure" the food is labeled nor how careful we are, poisons enter. Were we not provided with organs especially designed against these poisons, human life would soon perish. The kidneys are the filters of the blood. They catch the poison in the food and expel it from the system. To do this they must be healthy and vigorous. When they are weak, or overworked, or clogged, or handicapped by disease in even a slight degree, they work imperfectly, or nor at all. The best remedy for disordered kidneys is

A FATAL COLLISION.

Mr. Robert Hutchison Killed and Driver Flowers Hurt.

Chatham, Nov. 24.—A bad wreck occurred on the L. E. & D. R. R. about a mile south of the city at 7.30 last evening. The mixed train coming north from Blenheim ran into a beet root special from Wallaceburg, shunting at the south end of the cemetery switch. Fireman Robert Hutchison was killed instantly, and his body buried in the wreck. Driver James Flowers was badly hurt in the shoulder and one hand, but was able to walk. Both men reside in Walkerville.

Fighting in Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—Fierce fighting, in which the police used their clubs freely and twice emptied their revolvers, marked the opening of the State street cable line by the Chicago City Railway yesterday. So far as ascertained no one was seriously injured, although there were many broken heads among the rioters. The hardest fighting yesterday took place at 41st street and State street, where a mob hiding behind a fence stoned cars guarded by officers. The police fired several shots over the heads of the strikers. Many of the mob were clubbed.

Wakeful Children.

For a long time the two year old child of Mr. P. L. McPherson, 59 N. Tenth street, Harrisburg, Pa., would sleep but two or three hours in the early part of the night, which made it very hard for her parents. Her mother concluded that the child had stomach trouble, and gave her half of one of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, which quieted her stomach and she slept the whole night through. Two boxes of these Tablets have effected a permanent cure and she is now well and strong. For sale by all druggists.

There is no more certain way for pale, weak people to attain the glow of health than by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great food cure which forms new, rich red blood and creates new nerve force.

CRIMPING IN QUEBEC.

Michael Huck, better known as Mick, was a prominent member of the crimping profession, well-known to the police of old Quebec fifty years ago. Not a vicious man, for a crimp, he carried on a large business, and his ready tongue never failed him. Like his confreres, he got foul of the law occasionally, but not to any great extent. In the few records left by the late Chief Trudel, of the water police, his name graces the entries, as a suspect, but in the wind up, he almost invariably comes out ahead. "Found no sailors," is the usual conclusion of the raid. Just how he squared himself, is hard to say, for his emporium was generally well-filled during the shipping season, especially by foreign seamen, of whom he had the monopoly, but he managed to get clear, in a surprising manner.

Huck had a sense of humor, too, deep and fine, as one of his transactions abundantly proves. A ship newly arrived contained a crew, ready to respond to his solicitations to desert, but only upon the promise that they would be sent to Chicago, where wages for lake mariners were, at the time, high, and alluring. He readily made the required promise, and carried it out by shipping them while dazed by liquor, upon a ship bound for Liverpool, so salving his conscience and gratifying his friends by a display of wit, at the same time by inserting in the shipping papers as to destination, Chicago, via Liverpool.

If the apologists of this illicit trade could have at any time discovered one redeeming feature, they certainly failed to, and were silent on the subject, as the feverish days of shipping from 1850 and onward produced a system of terrorism, such as shocked society. The knife was busily at work, and above the yells of combat, which issued constantly from the arenas in which the seamen fought, the cry of murder was too often plainly heard. Many were torn from the decks of ships by hired gangs of ruffians and driven like sheep into these haunts of infamy. Even mates were shanghaied, and shipped as common sailors, in spite of their appeals and protests. To supply a waiting ship and secure an advance note, kidnapping in open day was not uncommon. Here is a note from a journal of the time:

"The master of the Juno reports that, having sent his carpenter on shore to obtain certain bolts needed for the windlass, he was overpowered on the wharf by a crimp, thought to be Patrick Dyer, and carried on board an American ship, which sailed immediately after for Rio."

The open raids upon anchored ships ended by a murder, brutal and cowardly, and brought the authorities to understand that matters of this kind had gone already too far, and that steps must be taken to crush out the evil.

A ship lying in the stream was boarded at about ten o'clock one night by a man named Doherty, a runner for Michael Hayden, a well-known crimp of the port. The night watchman gallantly resisted the efforts of the ruffian to remove the crew, whereupon Doherty drew a revolver and shot him dead. Making his way to shore, he was hidden by the fraternity so cleverly, that the police never discovered his place of usually made his escape dressed as a concealment, and the murderer eventually made his escape dressed as a woman.

In fact the crimp himself has disappeared from his old haunts beneath the gray cliffs of Quebec, and he has no successors. One alone of those who carried on that terrible trade is still alive, doing a quiet sailor boarding house business in a small way, a survival of a past in which he bore a part himself, but of better repute than his associates. Of the rest, some fell in conflict, some were drowned while engaged in their illegal calling, some lived to a green old age, but all have passed away, repentant let us hope, of their dark deeds.

The system became impossible not from prosecution by an offended law, but because the rapid decline in shipping, which rendered the once busy wharves and coves of Quebec lonely and silent, robbed the crimps of their victims, and closed them up forever. They stayed for a time to gaze with saddened eyes at the steamships passing upward to Montreal, and looked in vain for the lofty sails which in the old conditions came thickly from the east, to provide them with what they had come to consider as their natural prey. Then such as could moved away—to Pensecola or Savannah—and such as could not sought a living as stevedores or timber towers.

A great quiet fell upon that once riotous scene, and respectability threw its cloak over the district where they had so long abounded violence, license and murder.

Will the old dead and buried horrors return to life ever again with that revival in trade, to which Quebec looks confidently forward? Not likely! A new generation has come, incapable of the atrocities which marked the life of that one past and gone. Here too those interested in the welfare of the sailor have instituted concerts and receptions, at which the seamen visiting the port can procure those innocent amusements for lack of which, perhaps, so many sought the vile dens of the old time crimps, to their own undoing.—J. H. F., in Montreal Star.

Tortured with Pain.
Too Weak to Work.
ULCERS, BOILS AND PIMPLES ALL OVER HER BODY

Such was the condition of Mrs. Samuel Deitz, Zurich, Ont.

She happily found relief from her terrible suffering by using

Burdock Blood Bitters.

A remedy without a rival for the cure of all diseases and troubles arising from bad blood. A record extending over a quarter of a century and thousands of testimonials will prove this. Mrs. Deitz writes: "Too weak to work, tortured with the pain of ulcers, boils and pimples all over my body, especially on my face. I had almost made up my mind to give up trying to have them cured. I was ashamed to have any person come to see me, my face was in such a terrible state. I tried everything I could think of but got worse and worse. I was then led to try Burdock Blood Bitters and was surprised at the wonderful change the first bottle made. Altogether I took seven bottles and am now completely cured and am in perfect health again. I feel that B.B.B. saved my life."

The Burdens of Modern Civilization.

Normally a woman should have no discomfort so far as feelings of discomfort are concerned, at each recurring period. But modern civilization has added its conditions of ever-present suffering to a large proportion of American women. The great bulk of such cases is due to inflammatory or congested conditions within limited territories which can be overcome by the right treatment. Of course, this local irritation is followed by headaches, backaches, nervousness, irritability, and, indeed, often results in nervous prostration or collapse which might have been avoided by proper treatment.

$500 REWARD FOR WOMEN
WHO CANNOT BE CURED.
Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

Death of Dr. Larocque.

Dr. Gideon Larocque, formerly Sergeant-at-Arms of the Quebec Legislative Assembly, who recently died in Montreal, was born in 1831, and pursued his duties at St Hyacinthe College. For years he was the representative of the County of Chambly in the Legislative Assembly. In 1875 he was appointed Sergeant-at-Arms at Quebec, and continued to fill that position until about a year ago, when he resigned.

His Idea of Pleasure.

"Oh, it wasn't that. But he could sit in the hotel, you know, and fish out of the windows."

All Fixed Beforehand.

It is said that one of the most inveterate writers out of speeches was the late Lord Derby, of whom the story went that the manuscript of one of his most statesmanlike discourses, being picked up from the floor, where it had fallen, was found not only to be freely sprinkled with "Hear, hear!" "Laughter," and "Applause," but also to contain a passage beginning, "But I am detaining you too long [cries of 'No, no!' and 'Go on!'."

CANADIANS GO TO RUSSIA.

Present and Future Possibilities of British Columbia.

Speaking of the increasing volume of trade from British Columbia, the correspondent of The London Morning Post says: "Vladivostock asked Vancouver the other day for six thousand barrels of beef, and by the way the Dominion takes a lively interest in the Russian penetration into the far east. An old rancher in British Columbia told me he intended moving to Manchuria. 'More room over there,' he said, 'and splendid grazing.' I met a Russian agent at New Westminster who was studying Anglo-Saxon methods of inducing immigration. He assured me in two of his eleven languages that the country opened by the Trans-Siberian Railway was like the best part of Canada, only better, for both wheat and cattle. He was convinced that the main tide of home-seekers would soon set that way. Anglo-Saxons may be slow to overcome the prejudices against knouts and Tartars, and provided that her own come to Canada she will not grudge Manchuria the Polish Jew and the kith of the Doukhobor.

"British Columbia is a land of many resources, which Americans are eager to open up. Some obstacles are being put in their way, and though immediate loss may follow from a 'dog in the manger' policy, it promises future profits. Throughout the Dominion this problem recurs—it is disputed on the St. Lawrence as eagerly as on the Gulf of Georgia—namely, shall Canada husband her natural assets till she can use them profitably herself or sell them now to foreigners for a comparatively small cash payment.

"Fathers do not readily practice economy for sons unborn, but there is a movement in favor of putting an export duty on some natural products which would seem to deserve encouragement in the nation's interest."

The New Commons Carpet.

It is to cost seven thousand dollars for new carpet for the House of Commons. The legislators, lobbyists and litterateurs wore the old one out during the seven months' session, and now the people have to put up the price of a new one. Why should they? It will be thought by everybody who considers the subject that the best thing in the premises for the Parliamentarians to do will be to buy the carpet out of their sessional indemnity, or to get along with bare floors. Surely, the business of this great country can be transacted without seven thousand dollar carpets, writes Day by Day in Toronto News. Perhaps the aesthetic tendencies of some of the members would be violated by the change, but the economy would counterbalance that objection. Let the carpets go, and the corridors of Parliament thunder with the echoes of myriad heels, not to speak of heelers.

CATARRH.

What This Disease is and How it May Be Cured,

Originating in the System it Can Be Cured Only by Treating the Blood.

Remedies Applied Externally Only Dry up or Suppress its External Manifestations and Throw it Back on the System to Return When They are Discontinued or Find Vent at Some Other Point Perhaps in More Important and Vital Parts.

Catarrh is a conditional disorder usually manifesting itself in or finding vent through the outside or covering skin or most frequently by way of the inside or lining skin which is called mucous membrane.

When catarrh affects the outside or covering skin it is called "eczema." The location of a spot or patch of eczema or skin catarrh may be at most any point covered by integument, by which name the outside skin is known.

Eczema or catarrh of the integument usually takes a descriptive name from its regional manifestation as palmar eczema if on the palm of the hand, facial eczema if on the face, etc., these names being extended to every part of the body covered by the integument. This is said to be the regional name of eczema.

Eczema also takes a descriptive name from the character of its manifestation. With eczema there is an infiltration of the skin showing the catarrhal nature of the disease, just as in a catarrh of a mucous membrane there is an infiltration of its tissues. This fluid with which the eczematous skin is loaded oozes out and drying on the surface forms scabs, crusts, scales, etc. Thus eczema gets another name known as its "lesional name," from its external appearance, as "squamous eczema" where it seems covered with scales, etc.

Then eczema takes a third descriptive name due to its intensity and duration, as acute for a short but very severe attack; sub acute for a milder attack, and chronic for long-drawn out or lingering eczema, etc.

Thus one little patch of eczema may have several descriptive names attached to it, the regional name, the lesional name and the name descriptive of its intensity. A patch of scaly eczema on the face might be described as "chronic squamous facial eczema," and any other patch at any other location might receive as many but different descriptive names.

So it is with catarrh in a mucous membrane or the inside or lining skin. If in the lining of the nose it is called "nasal catarrh"; if in the lining of some of the pelvic organs of women it is known as "leucorrhea" or more frequently as "female weakness."

Bear in mind that this is all catarrh, a systematic disease, finding vent in either the outside or covering skin (integument) or the inside or lining skin (mucous membrane) and you will not get confused but readily see why one remedy can cure these seemingly separate ailments.

The difference in the integument and catarrh of the mucous membrane is because of a slight difference in their structure.

There is the same infiltration and thickening in both cases but the glandular supply being different there is apt to be more discharge from catarrh of a mucous membrane and owing to the distinct nerve supply of the outside skin much more irritation as burning and itching in eczema or catarrh of the integument.

It is, however, all catarrh; an afflicted woman may have leucorrhea, bronchitis, nasal catarrh and eczema and it would be only systematic catarrh finding vent in all of these ways or four places at once.

If we can cure catarrh in the system we do away with all manifestations of it. Cure it in the system and it needs no vent. There is nothing to come out. This is the correct and scientific way of treating catarrh.

For catarrh of the outside skin (eczema); for catarrh of the mucous membrane of the nose (nasal catarrh) necessitating blowing, hawking, and spitting; for catarrh in the lining of the eustachian tubes causing deafness and head noises; for catarrh of the wind pipes leading to the lungs (bronchitis) giving rise to chronic coughs; for catarrh of the pelvic mucous surfaces, called leucorrhea and female weakness for all kinds of catarrh, lurking in any nook or corner of the system or manifesting itself in any tissue, organ or structure, there is no known remedy that equals Stuart's Catarrh Tablets. An internal remedy, operating through the blood, they search out and cure catarrh in any part or tissue of the body and cure catarrh just as readily in one form as another, therefore they are as applicable and serviceable for eczema and leucorrhea as for bronchitis or for nasal catarrh.

The Rev. L. E. Palmer, Baptist Clergyman, of Ceresco, Mich., makes a statement of interest to all catarrh and grip sufferers. He says: Stuart's Catarrh Tablets have certainly been a blessing to me. I have used them freely this fall and winter and have found them a safeguard against La Grippe and Catarrhal troubles from which I had suffered for years. I feel that I can freely and conscientiously recommend them.

Dr. J. J. Reitiger, of Covington, KY., says: I suffered from catarrh in my head and throat every fall, with stoppage of the nose and irritation in the throat affecting my voice and often extending to the stomach causing catarrh of the stomach. I bought a fifty-cent package of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at my druggists, carried them in my pocket and used them faithfully, and the way in which they cleared my head and throat was certainly remarkable. I had no catarrh last winter and spring and consider myself free from any catarrhal trouble.

Being in tablet form they are convenient to carry and take; being sold at all drug stores for 50c a box they are easy to procure and inexpensive; being a systematic remedy, they are equally good for all catarrhs; being of established merit, they are reliable and satisfactory. Use them and you will become their advocate and friend.

AID IS ASKED FOR OTONABEE SOCIETY.

Agricultural Society Wants Assistance From County Council.

November Session of the County Legislation—Business for Year Being Wound up.

WEDNESDAY'S SESSION.

The Council went into session at ten o'clock this morning. The Warden in the chair. All the members present.

The minutes of the last session were read and adopted.

On motion the Council went into Committee of the Whole on roads and bridges.

The Commissioners were engaged up till noon passing and taxing various accounts and discussing matters in connection with roads and bridges.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Council resumed at 2 o'clock. The Warden in the chair. All the members being present.

On motion of Mr. Johnston, a deputation from the Otonabee Agricultural Society was heard.

Mr. Smithson said he appeared on behalf of the Otonabee Society, who are asking for a small grant from the county to assist them in increasing their exhibition grounds. For some years the Society had felt that their show grounds had become too small, and last year they had been compelled to negotiate for additional land. They had now purchased the ground required, and all they asked the county was to contribute $200 towards the purchase money. It was the intention of the Society to deed the land to the municipality.

Mr. Weir said that the Society had not appeared before the County before, and hoped the members would see their way clear to granting their small request. Otonabee paid a good deal of the county tax and thought this favour might fairly be granted to the Keene show.

Com. Hunter thought he saw some danger, in the event of the Society coming to grief, of the land reverting to the municipality, in which case it would have the benefit of their money and the Society's as well.

Com. Fitzgerald said he belonged to a Society—the Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield Agricultural Society—which stood precisely in the same position as the Otonabee Society. They wanted more ground, badly, but did not know how it was to be got. He would not oppose the grant, if the rest of the Council agreed, but if it was passed the Lakefield Society would be here next year with a deputation for a similar grant, and he couldn't tell where it would end.

Mr. Johnston supported the grant and urged the claims of the Society and Township to the favourable commendation of the Council.

Com. Peck said this application was entitled to special consideration. The society had gone on for years and had done a lot of good work. He had always supported grants both to the West and East Riding Agricultural Societies, and for the sake of $200 he hoped the council would deal fairly in encouraging this growing society.

On motion of Com. Fitzgerald, seconded by Com. Hunter, the matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

PAYNE'S BRIDGE.

Mr. Payne of Dummer, was on motion of Com. Moloney, seconded by Com. Hunter, allowed to address the Council. He said that during the rebuilding of Payne's bridge, near his place, he had thrown open his property for the public traffic and the accommodation of the workmen, thinking that it would only be for a short time, but instead of that it had taken over three months and a half to build the bridge, during which time he had been greatly inconvenienced. He thought he ought to get $50 as compensation.

On motion of Com. Moloney the grievance complained of by Mr. Payne was referred to the Finance Committee.

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

On motion of Com. Fitzgerald the council adjourned until ten o'clock Thursday morning, and the members afterwards went into Committee of the Whole on Roads and Bridges.

THURSDAY'S SESSION.

The Council met again on Thursday morning at ten o'clock, and went into Committee of the Whole on financial matters which occupied the members attention until noon.

DEER HUNTING PHOTOGRAPHS.

Mr. J. W. Swan, official photographer of the Grand Trunk Railway System, has returned to Montreal from a ten-day's sojourn in the hunting regions situated on the Company's lines in "The Highlands of Ontario." Mr. Swan made the trip with a view of securing an additional collection of negatives of deer hunting pictures to add to the already large series which the Company have now, and which are being utilized to exploit the great attractions which are found in Ontario for the sportsman.

He was most successful in his quest, and has been able to obtain a number of excellent views, not only depicting the hunter in the act of securing his quarry, but several scenes of the game being hauled to camp, camping scenes and views of large numbers of deer at the several stations being got ready for transportation.

The Grand Trunk Railway system have made a specialty in the last few years of advertising the many attractions that Canada holds forth for the tourist, angler and sportsman, especially disseminating the information for the delectation of the increasing brotherhood of travellers from the United States. Thousands of dollars have been expended in this direction, with the result that the traffic has increased phenomenally. It is safe to say that the Grand Trunk are doing more than any other factor to advertise Canada as the Mecca for the summer visitor and the sportsman.

HOCKEY.

A Fenelon Falls writer in the Bobcaygeon Independent states: "The famous hockey team of Fenelon Falls is a thing of the past, the only player left in the village being Beteau, who, although he was one of the best of the seven, cannot play a visiting team alone. That famous team was never defeated till a break took place in the ranks, to be filled with raw recruits. In his mind's eye the inksslinger can see Beteau rush down the ice and score, with the whole seven of Lindsay, Keene, Peterborough, or Norwood rushing and howling at his heels. Oh! for the glorious by-gone days. It is worthy of notice that nearly all our hockey players have obtained situations Victoria Harbour. It is also worthy of notice that the Victoria Harbour hockey team recently applied for admittance to the O.H.A. They seem to be gaining in strength. Rah! for the Victoria Harbour hockey team, which, by the way, might better be called the Old Boys of Fenelon. It would be an excellent idea for Caretaker Corbett to get up an exhibition match this winter between the best team either Lindsay or Peterborough could put up and the team from Victoria Harbour (alias Old Boys of Fenelon Falls.) It would pay. The rink would be crowded, and it would ring with shouts for the Old Boys. The inksslinger would lead the concert and fling his Tam o' Shanter up to the highest rafter."

The Globe has the following special despatch from Montreal: "A gentleman prominent in local hockey circles has received a letter from Buffalo asking for assistance in an attempt to get together a travelling aggregation to be known as 'Stoddard's unrivalled hockey girls.' Applicants are promised good wages and good treatment. As Montreal is noted for good hockey players of the gentler sex it is thought that some of them might be enticed to join this combination. Meanwhile efforts are being made here to form a club of girls who are willing to travel and meet all comers on the ice."

MR. WM. DORAN DIED AT LITTLE WOLF, WIS.

Former Peterborough County Man Expired After Long Illness.

The Wausawa (Wisconsin) Advocate has the following account of the death of Mr. Wm. Doran, whom many in this county will remember:

"Wm Doran one of the pioneer settlers of Waupaca county, died at his home in the town of Little Wolf, Friday, Nov. 6, 1903, of heart failure.

"Wm. Doran was born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, on July 12th, 1845. At the age of 19 he came to the states and worked on the river and in the woods for several years, making his home at Northport. He was married to Rebekah Dinneen, of Northport, on January 6, 1873, and moved to Shawano, where Mr. Doran engaged in business. Two years later they moved onto the farm near Bear Lake, which has since been their home. To them was born nine children, eight of whom survive. They are Theresa, (Mrs. G. Weller,) Frank, Mae, Estella (Mrs. M. J. Carew,) Katherine, Loyola, Zita (deceased,) Veronica and Vincent. The mother died September 22nd, 1899.

"Mr. Doran came to this section about 28 years ago, when it was little more than a wilderness, to hew out a home for himself and family. He was a hard working man and had the confidence and respect of his friends and neighbours. He held the office of supervisor of the town of Little Wolf at one time, and for twelve years was treasurer of his school district, but he never sought public favour. In church affairs he always took an active part and held many responsible offices in the Sacred Heart Church, of which he was a member, being one of the trustees at the time of his death. He was treasurer of the church at the time the new building was erected. He was also a member of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin.

"Mr. Doran had been in poor health for several years, but his late illness dates back about a year. He was confined to the house about four weeks.

"The funeral was held Monday at 10 a.m. from the Sacred Heart Church, Rev. Father Darche, officiating, assisted by Father Kaster, of New London, and Father Darche, of Texas. A large concourse of relatives and friends followed the remains to their last resting place."

Parties wishing to have their pictures framed before Christmas will do well to call at the Metropole, on Hunter street, at once. Our stock is replete with the latest English and American mouldings.

TRIBUTE TO OUR DIPLOMAT KING.

Appreciative Reference Made by the French President.

Due to King Edward the Sovereign of England—Pleasant Incidents in Connection With the Visit of the British Members of Parliament to France—The Day's Programme in Paris on Thursday.

Paris, Nov. 27.—The members of the British Parliament, who, with their wives and daughters, are returning the visit to London of French Senators and Deputies, representing the International Arbitration Group, had a busy day. The most prominent of the Parliamentarians were entertained by the leading Deputies and other by the staff of the Siecle. Visits to the Senate and Chamber of Deputies followed, and at 5 o'clock a reception was given at the Elysee. Baron d'Estournelles de Constant introducing the members and their ladies individually to President and Madame Loubet.

Replying to an address delivered by Lord Brassey during the reception, President Loubet expressed the great pleasure at the visit of the members of Parliament, and referred to the happiness he experienced during his recent visit to London. He said he hoped the example set by two great nations of Western Europe in signing an arbitration treaty would be generally followed. The proceedings of the reception were most cordial.

Last night a great banquet, at which MM. Berthelot and Jaures were the principal speakers, was given. M. Berthelot recalled the efforts of the two countries in the cause of freedom, and strongly urged the adoption of a general system of arbitration. He rejoiced at the signing of the treaty between Great Britain and France, and added: "No doubt the United States will willingly join us."

Sir William Henry Houldsworth proposed the health of President Loubet, and thanked the French people for the cordial welcome they had given the visitors.

Premier Combes made a great speech in praise of international arbitration. He declared that the treaty between France and Great Britain had been ratified by the public opinion of the two countires, and criticized whoever said that the limitations of the treaty rendered unimportant the essential act. These limitations, he said, were due only to prudent introduction of new principles, but he believed that the seed would grow to a mighty tree. M. Combes said it was the duty of the Government to give the treaty in its existing form the sanction of experience. He had no doubt that it would result in spreading faith in arbitration, and possibly the day was not far distant when both nations would agree to submit all differences, however unimportant, to arbitration.

In conclusion, the Premier said: "I propose the health of the sovereign, to whom we owe it, Edward."

COULDN'T TELL THE CAUSE.

Continuation of the Inquest Into the Recent Explosion at Newmarket.

Newmarket, Nov. 27.—The adjourned inquest into the death of John Agnew, who lost his life at the United Factories on the day of the boiler explosion, was continued last night. Dr. Scott testified that death resulted from scalding and inhalation of steam and was instantaneous. Andrew Hunter and George Holmes testified as to the finding of the body, and O. P. St. John, boiler inspector, could not fix the cause, although he was sure it was not caused by lack of water in the boiler. A. E. Atkins, boiler inspector, corroborated this witness. Alex. Potts, the regular engineer, testified that the safety valves were all right the night before, and the inquest was adjourned till next Thursday evening.

ITALIANS AGAINST AUSTRIA.

Demonstrations in Rome That Government is Bound to Suppress.

Rome, Nov. 27.—Demonstrations against Austria, resulting from the prohibition by the Austrian Government of the institution of a free Italian university at Innesbruck, were continued throughout Rome yesterday, but were at all points broken up by the police, who gathered in large numbers, especially around the Austrian embassy and Austrian consulate, against which the chief efforts of the demonstrators were directed.

At the university the students, to the number of about 10,000, held an indignation meeting and then decided to make a demonstration in the streets of the city. The police were prepared for this, however, and as soon as the students emerged the police attacked them, compelling them to re-enter the university. The students showed their indignation by breaking the windows and furniture of the class rooms. The authorities have decided to close the university until order has been restored.

An anti-Austrian demonstration was held at Turin, where the demonstrators rang the bells of the university, broke the windows and benches, exploded firecrackers, producing a slight panic. Similar demonstrations were held at Milan, Parma, Padua and Genoa. The Government has determined to suppress these demonstrations at any cost as it wishes to avoid complaint from the Austrian Government.

Meet Next Year in Toronto.

Leamington, Nov. 27.—At an executive meeting of the Fruit Growers' Association it was decided to hold the next annual meeting at Toronto. There will be a large exhibit also of fruit and of farming implements. It is hoped to make the exhibit serve as a winter fruit fair, much after the lines of the winter fat stock show at Guelph.

Southampton, Nov. 27.—It is rumored here that the mails from the United States will shortly be landed at Plymouth instead of at Southampton, in order to expedite their delivery in London and to successfully compete with the Queenstown service.

The New Zealand Preference and Its Early Results.

MR. HENRY ASQUITH'S VIEWS

Colonies Would Not Ask Old Land to Tax Food—Hon. Mr. Foster's Address at the American Thanksgiving Dinner—What the Colonies Have Lost in British Populations to the U. S.

London, Nov. 27.—(C.A.P.)—Austen Chamberlain, addressing a mass meeting at Cambridge, Guildhall, yesterday, said the policy of the Government was to secure liberty to negotiate freely and back the words with deeds if necessary. Before leaving London, he learned that a large order placed with a German firm had, owing to the New Zealand preference, been cancelled and given to an English firm instead.

Winston Churchill, M.P., was boycotted again last night from a Conservative meeting at which he was announced to speak. He threatens to promote a new organization.

A parody on the hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers," beginning, "Onward every Liberal, onward to the fight," is being sung at Rosebery's meetings. It is raising a storm of protests from religious circles.

Mr. Asquith's Views.

Mr. Henry Asquith, speaking at Penzance yesterday, said he did not believe a single colony was prepared to say to the Motherland: "In order to give a preference to our trade, you must put a tax on the food of your people." The colonies were making no real sacrifices themselves and ought to extend the preference to England, compared with foreign countries.

The Monmouthshire Steel and Tinplate Works, at Pontyminster, employing 1,000 hands, has been closed on account of German and American dumped steel. The Finzel sugar refinery at Bristol, employing 1,400 hands, has also closed from the effect of the foreign bounty system.

Foster As a Prophet.

Hon. Mr. Foster, replying to the toast, "Our Guests," at the American Thanksgiving banquet at the Cecil Hotel last night, said that even after the Alaska award Canada's square miles overtopped the Republic. A commission composed of three Canadians, three Americans and an umpire should decide the proper name of the Republic. The American eagle screamed with pleasure at the award. As the centuries rolled by there would be one great power north of the 39th parallel of latitude strong in support of great social ideals. Canadians also had a Thanksgiving Day, and one thing they were thankful for was that they were an offshoot of the great Empire.

Mr. Ritchie, speaking at Croydon yesterday, said the fiscal agitation had badly unsettled trade, and he wanted the decision as soon as possible.

What the Colonies Have Lost.

Earl Dunraven, speaking at the Constitutional Club yesterday, said under a reasonable tariff system the colonies should have had a majority of the 4,000,000 wage-earners who left England in the last fifty years, most of whom have gone to the United States. He said for every emigrant America spent 6 shillings a head, while the colonies spent £6.

Naval Men For Joe.

The naval military experts of the Royal United Service Institute yesterday were enthusiastic in their support of Chamberlain's proposal of a colonial preference for the food supply of the Empire in time of war. The speakers included Admiral Lord Seymour, who commands the cruiser Kaybourne.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful, I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. Yours very truly, MRS. MAY FAIRBANKS, 216 South 7th St., Minneapolis, Minn." (Mrs. Fairbanks is one of the most successful and highest salaried travelling saleswomen in the West.)

FACTS ABOUT THE GREAT STEEL PLANT.

James Croeman writes to the New York World from Pittsburg as follows:—

Here in Pittsburg, the centre of the steel industry of the world, I have been attempting to get some idea of the real value of the properties and business of the United States Steel corporation, whose $1,000 stockholders are painfully watching the fluctuating prices of Wall street for a sign of hope. It is here, where the very air is blackened by miles of furnaces and mills, that the truth must be sought; for in New York where the stock-ticker has governed the management of this mightiest of financial and industrial enterprises in history, all avenues of approach to the facts are closed. The men who sold to the public more than $500,000,000 of paper representing no assets are silent and inaccessible now.

This afternoon I talked with several of the foremost steel and iron experts in the country. One is a man who knows the United States Steel corporation's business as thoroughly as any person not actually responsible for its management. His position enables him to speak impartially. He did not claim to give more than fairly approximate figures.

VALUE OF THE CARNEGIE PROPERTIES.

The values of the Carnegie steel properties, shown up by books in the legal struggle between Mr. Carnegie and Mr. Frick, was about $87,000,000, not counting ore fields. This included the Bessemer railway, the Frick coke plants and about $5,000,000 in cash. It was estimated that it would cost $100,000,000 to duplicate these plants. [illegible] will [illegible] added to the book value of the Carnegie properties, would make $142,000,000. An expert estimated that the coke plants alone were worth $30,000,000 to-day. The ore fields were really worth $35,000,000. They would add $15,000,000 to the total, making it $142,000,000. The Carnegie ore fields—including the Mesaba, Chapin, Norrie and Powadie mines—were bought for less than $10,000,000, but are estimated to be worth $40,000,000. This brings the entire value of the Carnegie properties secured by the United States Steel corporation up to $182,000,000. As the subsidiary Carnegie corporations were bonded for about $40,000,000, and the United States Steel corporation assumed this debt, the cash value of the properties was really $142,000,000.

It is estimated that the plants and business of the Federal Steel and all the other corporations, except the Carnegie company, which make up the United States Steel corporations, are worth about as much as the Carnegie properties, not including the ore fields. This should make all the properties together—except ore fields—worth $284,000,000. The Carnegie ore fields are estimated to represent about two-fifths of all the ore properties secured. So that if the Carnegie ore fields are worth $40,000,000, at a good valuation, all the ore fields owned by the United States Steel corporation are worth not more than $100,000,000 instead of $700,000,000, as Mr. Schwab has said.

WHAT CAUSED ALL THE TROUBLE.

It will be seen by these figures—estimates made by men familiar with the properties and their earning power—that the whole value of all the assets of the United States Steel corporation is about $384,000,000. A cash surplus of $50,600,000 makes the grand total $434,600,000.

On these assets $1,322,563,200 of stocks and bonds were issued. Counting the bonds paid to Mr. Carnegie and the $200,000,000 of preferred stock converted into bonds, the $434,000,000 of assets are covered by a little more than $501,000,000 of bonds.

And it must be remembered that the $40,000,000 of bonds of the Carnegie subsidiary companies are a first lien on the properties.

When I went over these figures with one of the recognized authorities on the steel trade to-day he said:—

"That is a sound estimate. I feel confident that under the worst trade conditions the United States Steel Corporation will earn the $27,000,000 fixed charges on its $340,000,000 of bonded indebtedness and pay four per cent. on its $310,000,000 of preferred stock. The $501,3633,800 of common stock is really worth nothing; and never was worth anything except for its voting power. The issue of that stock was an act of robbery. It was only an option on dividends in boom times. It was mere paper with no assets behind it.

"Although the assets of the United States Steel Corporation are not worth more than, say, $434,000,000, it would constitute the properties a good purchase for $600,000,000, because the company owns something like three-fifths of all the economical mining ore in the states, and with its coke and limestone, it occupies a position that will enable it to undersell and dominate the steel industry. Its control of cheap and good raw materials is an advantage that I count upon when I say that the property and purchase of the company is a good purchase at $600,000,000."

Every steel expert in Pittsburg has practically the same estimate of the "steel question." The business of the United States Steel Corporation is sound, but its management has ignored trade conditions and competition in its attempts to keep up the price of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of watered stock.

The colossal task imposed by the issue of $508,363,800 of common stock, representing no assets but requiring large dividends to sell it—not to speak of the $860,000,000 of bonds and preferred stock—paralysed the management. No other company, no other country, had or could have such supply of ore, coke and limestone, or more perfect or economical plants, with such convenient and economical relationships between its raw materials and its mills and furnaces.

If the United States Steel Corporation had to earn dividends only on the actual cash invested, or even on a liberal valuation of its properties, it could have undersold the markets of the world. It can produce steel cheaper than any other company.

A GIANT GAMBLING ENTERPRISE

But the giant gambling enterprise represented by hundreds of millions of watered stock based upon extreme earnings in a year of delirious booming, in a period of inflation, prevented the management from lowering the prices of its products to meet competition or altered business conditions. So long as the common stock was being unloaded on the public there could be no sign of reduction in prices, no closing of mills to avert over-production, no hint of a reduction in wages or other economies—or the public might suspect that dividends would not be paid.

Not so with the policy of Andrew Carnegie and Henery C. Frick. The stock-ticker had no terrors for them. In 1897 they delivered steel rails in Chicago at $15 a gross ton, and I beams at $1.15 a hundredweight. To-day the United States Steel Corporation asks $28 a ton for steel rails, and $1.60 a hundred weight for I beams. This in spite of the fact that it has greater facilities than Carnegie and Frick had. Increased wages cannot account for the change. The labour on rails under the Carnegie system averaged $8 a ton from the ore to the finished product. At present this labour averages from $4.50 to $8. The cost of transportation has slightly increased, but that would only represent a small fraction of the increased price of rails.

The real reason of the high prices charged by the United States Steel Corporation for its products, in the face of increasing competition and a lessening market, is clearly the necessity for earning dividends on watered securities.

It is believed here that Mr. Rockefeller has really taken hold of the steel situation, and that he will plow Mr. Frick to deal with it sweepingly and on the old lines. The reduction of the dividend on the common stock from 4 to 2 per cent. was the first signal of a change in policy. The second was the cut in steel billets. It is said that after the first of January there will be a general reduction of wages. Then will follow reductions in the prices of structural steel, and perhaps rails.

What will happen to the common stock no one can say. Those who have studied the matter and are close to the seat of authority say that all dividends on the common stock will be stopped and that it will be bought up and retired. This however is probably merely intelligent conjecture.

"MICROBES I HAVE MET."

English Scientists Tell About Different Kinds of Germs.

(From London Answers.)

On my first introduction to microbes their peculiar characteristics at once arrested my attention; and when I examined their methods of working I quickly discovered that many of them were useful members of society, while others were continually occupied in the production of disease.

I therefore determined to leave the one class to continue their kind offices to mankind, and to record my observations of the mischief-workers for the information of those who could not enjoy an equal privilege with myself. The study of these creatures is very properly reserved for the scientist, yet we need not fear being unduly inquisitive if we try to learn something of the tiny beings who cause so much trouble to mankind.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED ON A PIN-HEAD.

That they are actually living beings is not easy to realize at first, especially when we find that their average size is so minute as to require 25,000 of them placed side by side to cover a line one inch in length. It is on this account that they require the highest powers of the microscope to detect their presence. Because they are really living creatures they are called "organisms..." and, being so minute as to require the microscope to render them visible, they are generally spoken of as micro-organisms.

A micro-organism or microbe may be either animal or vegetable in substance, but so far as we know at present the animal ones are few in number. Probably the two best known microbes are the one which causes malaria, and that which gives rise to the disease known as dysentry. The vegetable microbes belong chiefly to a class of fungi, and they are very numerous. Collectively they are often spoken of as bacteria, but we need not trouble beyond identifying the term when we come across it in the newspapers. All the vegetable microbes (bacteria) are peculiar looking little fellows, some being long and slender, while others are short and fat.

Each variety has its own family name, to which a nickname is frequently attached, in order to describe some special characteristic. These, for instance, which I have referred to as long and slender bear the family name of bacilli, and their nickname is "rod-shaped," so that they are generally spoken of as the "rod-shaped bacilli."

HOW MICROBES WORK

They are a most energetic family and they work in the production of such things as tuberculosis (consumption), diphtheria, tetanus (lockjaw,) and leprosy. There is another large family forming a part of this strange race which one might fancy were accustomed to good living, for instead of being long and slender like the bacilli, they are more or less globular in outline, and bear the family name of cocci.

The work which this family turns out is recognisable as pneumonia, erysipelas, septicoemia, and the like. A strange feature in the habits of the cocci is the way in which they associate themselves together when engaged in the performance of their work.

Some of them start off on their labours in pairs, and this has secured for them the nickname of "diplococci;" others elect to go single file, a string of beads, and on this account they are generally called "streptococci." The rest of them appear to possess strong family sentiments tending to range them in more or less rounded groups, and in consequence of this procedure they have been termed the "staphylococci."

I must not forget to mention one other family of the race with which I had the honour to become acquainted. It is one which sustains the strange name of 'spirilla," which it gained in consequence of its corkscrew like appearance. It is to these wriggling gentlemen that we are indebted for the disease known as relapsing fever.

Most of these microbian families are capable of being cultivated outside the human body, especially if they are fed on such diet as solutions of potato, blood, or a jelly made of partly digested animal food and gelatine.

When they are bred in this manner their colonies develop in different forms, each one of which presents its own characteristic appearance; therefore the expert eye cannot immediately distinguish one micro-organism from another by the particular shape in which the colonies grow. By cultivating a family in this way we secure an opportunity for watching their little manoeuvres.

Another interesting matter is the methods which the microbian families adopt when they set to work on new premises with plenty of material to their hand.

HEALTH CONQUERS BACILLI.

Supposing, now, that a few of one of these families have located in some part of the body of a person the first thing they do is to look about for material which they can utilize in the manufacture of their special products. If the person whose domain they have invaded is in perfect health, this search is fruitless and the invaders die of exhaustion; but, if on the other hand, the body is in a state of ill-health, or below par as we say, the active little gentlemen quickly commences operations. Their methods of working are those of the scientific chemist; and being by no means idle creatures within a few hours they produce a powerful poison out of the material they find to hand, which poison is known to us by the name of toxin.

The results of the working of these industrious manufacturers may vary according as to whether they enter into the blood of a person, or merely distribute their poisonous productions. In both instances there is blood poisoning, but the symptoms and severity will differ. For instance the bacilli of diphtheria remain at the spot where they first locate—in the throat. There they set up a laboratory, and turn out their toxins from thence to be quickly absorbed in the blood. In such a case the symptoms of the disease will be in exact proportion to the amount of poison they can circulate, because poison itself cannot multiply.

WHEN GERMS COMMIT SUICIDE.

If therefore we can quickly remove or destroy the local colony of workers, the poison already circulating will become diluted and carried off, and the patient will soon recover. On the other hand some of these creatures are of an explorative turn of mind, and make it their business to get into the blood as soon as possible after entering the body and in this way they distribute themselves throughout the whole system.

When this occurs there can be no such proportion between the severity of the symptoms and the amount of the poison, for these microbes multiply with such rapidity that ever so few soon become thousands and the poison goes on increasing enormously in every portion of the body. On this account these cases are very much more serious; and because it is almost impossible to remove all the microbes themselves the disease will generally terminate fatally.

When certain of these mischief workers have produced their toxin in the body for a definite time, for reasons of their own they fall back on their chemical resources and start an altogether new production, which entirely neutralizes the poison they manufactured in the first place. This new product is circulated by them with such prodigality that even the workers themselves are soon killed outright by a kind of self poisoning. It is by this process that many specific diseases come to an end of their own accord after a certain number of days, if the patient's constitution permits of his surviving the process. The new substance which the microbe manufactures in these cases has been happily named anti-toxin. It is frequently prepared artificially outside the human body by cultivating these workers specially for the purpose.

Must Mention No Names.

Vienna, Nov. 26.—Reports received here of the trial at Kischeneff of persons connected with the massacres. ENGLISHMAN'S PATHETIC DEATH.

Lewis W. Clark Passes Away in a C.P.R. Train.

Montreal, Nov. 27.—A man was found dead in his seat on the Canadian Pacific train just this side of Ottawa yesterday morning by the conductor when collecting his tickets. The body was brought to Montreal, and found to be that of Lewis W. Clark, who boarded the train in Manitoba. Consumption was the cause of death, and was evidently expected, for in the man's pockets were found a ticket to Liverpool, via St. John, a description of his baggage, the address of his wife, who is in England, his will, and his instructions as to what should be done with two life insurance policies now held Brandon as security for a loan. The man was 33 years old. His will disposes of considerable property.

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK

Food Eaten is Worthless Unless Digested—Some Stomachs Must Have Help.

Food taken into the stomach which from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them they must be starved. It would be just as sensible for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man to starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them. They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good strong healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbance in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the sustenance and maintenance of the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means body and brain get all the good, nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry out his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some new fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a year-old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken limb, which is of course not used during the process of repair.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box and they are the one article that the druggist does not try to sell something in the place of that's "just as good." Their unqualified merit and success and the universal demand for them has placed them within the reach of every one.

AN I. C. R. COLLISION

An Open Switch Caused Accident to the Halifax Express.

ENGINEER STODDART MAY DIE

Right Leg Broken in Three Places—Fireman Ruel Also Badly Injured—Beyond a Shaking Up None of the Passengers Were Hurt—Express Collided With Freight Standing on the Siding.

Quebec, Nov. 27.—The Halifax express on the Intercolonial which passed Levis at noon yesterday on her way to Montreal, was derailed at DeLothbiniere Station, forty miles west of Levis, about 2 o'clock. It is thought that a switch was left open, causing the express to run into and collide with a freight standing on the siding. The engine and all the cars of the express left the track. Both engines were badly damaged, as well as the express and baggage cars.

Engineer Stoddard of the express was badly injured, having his right leg broken in three places, besides sustaining other severe injuries which it is thought will prove fatal. Fireman Ruel was also severely injured. Beyond a severe shaking up none of the passengers was injured.

Child Burned to Death.

Kingston, Nov. 27.—A sad accident occurred at the home of W. Randal, farmer, a few miles north of this city. Mr. Randal was in the city, and Mrs. Randal went to the barn to milk, leaving three children alone in the house. The clothes of one of the children, a boy, three years old, caught fire, and when Mrs. Randal returned she found the little fellow burned almost to a crisp.

He leaves a widow and two stepchildren.

Another Firemen Killed.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 27.—Fireman William Grove, was killed and several other firemen were injured while fighting a fire which destroyed the five-storey brick buildings of Smith, Myers, Schnier & Company, manufacturers of cigar box machines, here yesterday. Of the injured, two are probably fatally hurt. The men were on the second floor when it gave way with them.

CAUGHT IN THE ICE.

Grain Carriers Stuck in the Lachine Canal—A Long Mail Route.

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—Mr. C. J. Smith of the traffic department of the Canada Atlantic Railway, reported to the Department of Railways yesterday that three of the company's grain carriers had been caught in the ice in the Lachine Canal. Mr. Collingwood Schreiber, Deputy Minister of Railways, has instructed the canal employes to render any assistance they can to extricate the ships from their predicament. A lightship belonging to the Marine Department has yet to descend from above Prescott and orders have been given that she is to be got through at all costs.

A Long Mail Route.

The Controller of Mounted Police yesterday forwarded to Winnipeg three and one-half pounds of mail matter for the officers and men of the Hudson Bay expedition. It consists of letters from their wives, relatives, or friends. From Winnipeg the letters will be taken by a courier of the Hudson Bay Co., and a dog team to Fort Churchill on the southwesterly shore of Hudson Bay. Better Prices for Lumber.

The Hull Lumber Company, it was reported yesterday, have sold their cut for 1904 to Messrs. Watson & Todd, the Liverpool exporters. This cut covers about 20,000,000 feet, and, from what could be learned, the price paid shows an increase of about ten per cent. over that paid for the cut this year.

C. P. R. ATLANTIC FLEET.

Much Money Paid as Result of Loss of Lake Manitoba.

London, Nov. 27.—The underwriters of the C.P.R. Atlantic fleet have just paid £15,400 on account of the casualty list of the steamer Lake Manitoba. This is the first settlement and does not represent the whole claim. The loss on the Monterey is £70,000, so £85,400 has been already paid the current year on casualty account. This sum is considerably more than the premium in common on the whole fleet. The Board of Trade inquiry into the loss of the Monterey takes place in London to-day.

WAS TAKEN ILL IN WINNIPEG.

Mr. J. J. Turner Jr. Obliged to Return Home Before Completing his Trip.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., returned home from Winnipeg this morning, where he had been on a trip in the interests of the firm of J. J. Turner & Sons. The cause of Mr. Turner's return home is the fact that he was taken ill at Winnipeg, and was unable to continue his trip through to the coast, as had been his original intention, when he started out. Mr. Turner did an enormous business before he was taken ill, and his illness is therefore all the more to be regretted. It is hoped that it will be of short duration.

Not Necessary to Close Bars.

It appears that in elections such as that held yesterday, the hotelmen are not obliged to close their bars, and, although, in response to the request to do so by the police authorities, the bars in town were closed yesterday morning, a telephone communication with Mr. Jas. Haverson, K.C., gave the information that the law had been misinterpreted, consequently, when this word was received the bars were again opened.

Verdi Night.

The 57th Regiment Band assisted by Mrs. R. Eardley-Wilmot and Miss Helen Davies will render a programme of music from the operas of Giuseppe Verdi, on Friday, December 18th. Mr. J. Hampden Burnham will also assist, explaining the motives of the different numbers.

Tina Crawford Coming.

Some Old Country press notices of Miss Crawford:—

Greenock Journal says: The most notable item on the programme was the contralto vocalist. This excellent singer created quite a furror. Her first two items, "Queen of the Earth" and "Dark Lochnagar," were given with a power and feeling beyond description. No one could listen unmoved to this grand voice. It fairly thrilled the hearts of her listeners.

Birmingham Courier: — Worthy of special attention is the contralto vocalist, Miss Tina Crawford. This lady is the possessor of an extraordinary powerful contralto voice and during her exquisite rendering of "The Lost Chord" the deepest silence prevailed. Miss Crawford sings the songs of Scotland with heart as well as voice and is all together a charming vocalist.

FOR A GREATER MUNICIPALITY.

Ashburnham and Peterborough Vote in Favour of Union.

Majority in Former 20, While in the Town it was 168—Small Vote Polled in Peterborough—Sewerage Bylaw Passed in Ashburnham.

Yesterday the electors of Ashburnham and Peterborough, by an aggregate majority of 188, voted in favour of a union of the two municipalities, and the building up of a greater town, in the interests of all sections, and in January next the Town Council will have representatives from five wards, instead of four. The majority in favour of union in the town was 168, and in Ashburnham 20. It was thought by some that the village would vote against union, in which case, of course, the relative positions of the two municipalities would remain unchanged, because it required a majority vote of the smaller municipality before the union could be consummated. For this reason the vote in Peterborough was small, but a very small proportion of those qualified to vote availing themselves of the opportunity. There are on the list in Peterborough 3200 names, of these only 378, or 11.8 per cent., expressed their opinion on the question by their vote. In Ashburnham, where only freeholders could vote, the proportion was much greater, nearly all those qualified to vote doing so.

Now that the electors have registered their votes, a majority being in favour of the union, the two councils, who are in perfect harmony, on the question, will take the necessary steps to bring into effect the wish of the electors as expressed yesterday, and on January 1st, 1904, the town of Peterborough will take on 1781 additional population, making the total 13,588, making the new municipality of Peterborough by all odds, the largest town in the Dominion of Canada. The new addition will be treated as a ward, and will be given all the privileges of the other four wards of the town.

In Ashburnham the ratepayers were also asked to vote on a bylaw to authorise the council to raise $15,000 to provide for an outfall sewer from Elisabeth street to the Little Lake, with a septic tank. This bylaw was carried by a majority of 17. The north ward voted against it by a majority of 7, while the south ward gave it a majority of 24. Of course the vote on the bylaw will be of non-effect, since the union carried. The sewer will be constructed by the town, and it was only to provide against a vote adverse to union that the sewer bylaw was submitted to the people.

DETAILS OF THE VOTE.

In the different polling sub-divisions in Peterborough the vote was as follows:

A LARGE AUDIENCE AT THE OPERA HOUSE

First Night of "H. M. S. Pinafore" Highly Successful.

A Most Demonstrative House Miss Edith Lount's Complete Success.

The audience which crowded the Opera House last night to see "H. M. S. Pinafore" presented by over one hundred juvenile performers an costume, was most demonstrative in its expressions of approval and genuine delight. The entertainment was under the auspices of the King's Daughters of St. John's Church, while the production itself was directed by Mr. H. B. Telgman, who displayed true ability in so effectively training his youthful performers within the passing of a month. The caste was composed as follows:—

The Rt. Hon. Sir Joseph Porter, K.C.B. ... ...Herbert Sykes
Capt. Corcoran ... ... Walter Sager
Ralph Rackstraw... ... ...Frank Halpany
Dick Deadeye ... ...Howard Jeffs
Boatswain ... ... Arthur Blade
Boatswain's Mate ... ...Vernon Dredge
Midshipmite ... ... Lorne Conway
Josephine, the captain's daughter ... ... Lillian Dean
Hebe, Sir Joseph's First Cousin ... ... Nellie Graham.
Little Buttercup ... ...Edith Lount

The other participants were:—

Helen Darnley, Phyllis Hood, Mamie Cottingham, Marguerite Herridge, Emma Cox, Pauline Hayes, Olive Conway, Madeline Pearce, Gertrude Kirn, Nora Hatton, May Nelson, Isabel Nesbitt, Gladys Pentland, Dorothy Dobbin, Anna Wachter, Katherine Cox, Phyllis Denne, Marion Goodfellow, Jessie Spence, Margaret Stevenson, Nanon Hayes, Millie Lafferty, Isabel Morphet, Marjorie Hatton, Florence Edwards, Florence Mitchell, Maude Morris, Violet Gumpricht, Odee Dutton, Grace Burritt, Marjorie Lattimer, May Nesbit, Madge Graham, Alberta Gooding, Irene Herridge, Amy Clementi, Helen Rush, Lucretia Gibbs, Birdie Herridge, Marion Denne, Cecil Clementi, Mona MacClure, Bertha Latimer, Carrie White, Kathleen Kincaid, Nellie Graham, Pearl Morgan, Helen Blade, Peggie Lattimer, Agnes Pentland, Ethel Martin, Katheryn Burnett, May Callaghan, Eva Carr, Minnie Pearce, Huldah Dobbin, Muriel Burritt, Edith Scott, Lillian Cox, Eleanor Seward, Marguerite Burnett, Kathleen Wallis, Irene Sharpe, Gertrude McClellan, Kenneth Poole, Hugh Carmichael, Herbert McClellan, Romeyn Stevenson, Sam Mills, Gordon McFarlane, Alec Fortye, Nelson Blade, Hunter Godfrey, George Babcock, Gordon Matthews, Ross Cox, Douglas Jeffs, George Goodfellow, Wilfred Hall, Ralph Martin, Herbert Eastwood, Walter Parks, Hugh Burritt, Frank Patterson, Harold Goodfellow, Willie Lacheur, Carl Halpany, Edwin Hatton, Joe Hughes, Stewart Hayes, Harold Matthews, David Hatton, Walton Stevenson, Hugh Wallis, Bob Dutton, Vaughan Mitchell, Ross Little, Wilfred Cox, Bruce Mills, Walter Blackwell.

The scene is placed on board the quarter deck of H. M. S. Pinafore, a British battleship at anchor in the Portsmouth roads.

Of those who took part Edith Lount as "Little Buttercup" was decidedly the best. The role does not call, as is often too much the case in entertainments of this kind, for intensity of emotional impersonation and Miss Lount makes it delightfully fresh, girlish and winsome. She captured the audience on her first appearance and brought down the house. Herbert Sykes as Sir Joseph Porter, K.C.B., thoroughly understood his "official" rank and acted well up to it. He was repeatedly applauded for his hauty manner and stately bearing. Arthur Blade, who took the part of Boatswain of the crew, was excellent. There was no stiffness in his manner and he was a thorough sailor from top to toe. Lillian Dean as "Josephine" and Frank Halpany as "Ralph Rackstraw" both did very well, but seemed to be rather frightened of the audience. Nellie Graham as "Hebe" Sir Jos. Porter's first cousin, did well, her performance being anything but affected. She made a good leader for the chorus singing, which would certainly have been weak without her. Howard Jeffs as "Dick Deadeye" had a difficult part to play, in which, however, he did well.

The individual singing was not strong, but was much better than could have been, with justice, expected, any lack, however, in this respect was equalized by an excellent orchestra which provided some excellent music throughout the evening. The concert will be repeated this evening, when none should miss the opportunity of seeing it. The success of the first production has made it probable that a matinee will be held on Saturday.

Miss H. C. Wright, graduate of Scio College, and formerly physical director, in the Walker School, Buffalo, N.Y., will be at the Oriental on Tuesday evening, Dec. 1st, to meet those interested in physical development. Miss Wright will organize a class in physical culture for young ladies and children. 5d122

REVIEWED WORK OF THE PAST YEAR

Annual Meeting of Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association.

Col. E. B. Edwards K. C., Elected President for This Year—Officers and Department Present Reports—A Successful Record.

After a year's work that has been highly successful, the Y.M.C.A. held its twenty-second annual meeting last night, when the different departments reports were presented, and the offices for the coming year elected. The reports presented show that during the year the work in all departments has been well sustained, and that the membership is in a most satisfactory condition, the total number of members in the Association as shown by the secretary's report is 789, 7 less than the number reported last year, while the finances are in practically the same condition as last year, the amount to the Association's credit being $4.13, as compared with $4.56 a year ago.

The officers of the Association deserve great praise for the manner in which the affairs have been conducted during the year. In a period when extra heavy financial responsibilities had to be assumed by the officers, it is a matter for congratulation that the year has ended so satisfactorily. Mr. Madill, who occupied the office of President, has given considerable time to the work of the Association, and the excellent showing made in the reports is in no small degree due to his untiring efforts. The secretary, Mr. G. H. Williamson has also worked indefatigably, and, that has work has shown such excellent results is a matter for congratulation on the part of the Association.

The meeting last night was held to close up the business for the year ending October 1st. The president, Mr. Wm. Madill, occupied the chair, and opened the meeting by announcing a hymn, "Throw out the Lifeline," after which prayer was offered by the President.

REPORTS.

He called for reports from the different departments, the first to be presented was that of the Boys Work, read by Mr. Mann, assistant secretary. The report was as follows:—

We are pleased to report that the department has made progress in spite of the disadvantage of having no boys' secretary the greater part of the year.

The present membership is 104, the department being composed entirely of school boys over 12 years of age.

A change has been made in the management of the work, the committee being composed of the boys' executive of five boys and five senior members. There are four committees—membership, social, religious and foreign work.

The boys subscribed $40 for the Farquhar fund, made up in monthly contributions of from five cents up, which must be earned by the subscriber.

At the convention boys rally in February thirteen boys decided to lead a Christian life.

Six group bible classes were conducted on Sunday mornings from October to July with fifty-four enrolled, the total attendance being 1884.

The sixth annual boys' camp for two weeks in July was attended by fifteen. The camp, though small, was one of the best in results. The daily bible class was conducted, and attended by all in camp. The boys' library has over 260 volumes and is much used. New books are greatly needed for this work.

The boys' weekly paper, started in September, has been a success.

The department lost its chairman, Mr. Sanford Hall, who was transferred to Montreal. He is much missed in the work here.

The prospects for the boys' work were never brighter.

J. LAING,
Chairman.

The report was a most satisfactory one, showing a good increase.

GENERAL SECRETARY'S REPORT

To the officers and members of the Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association.

In presenting this, the 22nd annual report, we wish to express first of all our deep gratitude to God for all the blessings of the past year, and thanks to the members and friends who, by expenditure of time, energy and money, have made possible such a work for the young man and boys of our town.

The reports are merely outlines of what has been accomplished, since figures can never represent the influence of the work in the lives of the members.

The boys' department and physical department reports are dealt with separately, so we shall make no reference to them more than to state that the continued progress in every department has been shared in there.

1.—Religious. The visit of Mr. F. S. Goodman, of New York to the Association in November, 1902, when a conference on religious work was held, together with the influence of the Provincial convention held here in February, has greatly stimulated the religious work, particularly as shown in the holding of a series of large meetings for young men, the organization of Shop Bible classes and the beginning of the foreign work in the Association. Five opera house meetings were held, addressed by outside men. The total attendance was 2,250. Forty regular Sunday men's meetings were held in the building with an average of nineteen in the summer and sixty-eight in the winter.

Two shop classes were organized in March. There were thirty-nine sessions with a total attendance of 2,40.

One hundred and thirty men and boys were enrolled in ten classes in Bible study; total sessions, 315; total attendance, 2,217. Eight of the teachers in these classes were active members of the Association.

As a result of the religious work 23 have professed conversion. The board weekly prayer meeting held during the year has been a great stimulus to the officers and to the work.

$255 was pledged by the members toward the support of Mr. Farquhar, the representative of the Ontario and Quebec Associations in India.

2.—Social. The Strangers' Fellowship Club has been a most potent factor in welcoming strangers to the town by giving them visitors' privileges in the Association for their first month in town. 327 tickets were issued during the year. Six monthly strangers' teas were held with an attendance of 184.

3.—Educational. Seven subjects were taught in the educational classes, including arithmetic, reading and spelling, mechanical drawing, algebra, applied mechanics and orchestra music. The total enrolment was 88; number of lessons 149, with a total attendance of 1,537.

4.—Membership. We are glad to report that the membership has been more than sustained in spite of many removals and some deaths. The following is a statement of the membership:

Sustaining, 67.
Senior, full, 299.
Senior limited, 200.
Intermediate, 109.
Boys, 114.
Total, 789.

Of these 259 are active and 530 associate.

The following members have been removed by the hand of death: F. A. Waldron, W. A. Sanderson, Alex. Drummond, Adam Ferguson, Melvin Green, Innis Hamilton, George Lord and Jno. Fanning.

5.—Finances. We are glad to report that the year closes with the finances so satisfactory a condition and with the heavy budget of this year provided for.

We are grateful to the manufacturers and business men and friends for their continued confidence and support.

Much has been done; much more remains to be done; and shall we not look for even greater things in the future when we think of the great resources we have by faith in Him and in manhood consecrated for service for young men.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

G. H. WILLIAMSON,
Secretary.

In answer to an inquiry, Mr. Williamson explained the distinction between the different classes of members, Active and Associate, the former being composed of members of evangelical churches, and they only were eligible for election to positions on committees of management, the effect of which was that the management of the Association is where it should be, in the church, and to which it is designed to be a help. Speaking of strangers' tickets and teas, Mr. Williamson said that the results of their adoption had been most satisfactory, and the good effects, he felt had been far-reaching. It had brought a great many young men into the Association, and into companionship with the young men in it. Since the adoption of the plan some three years ago 1100 tickets had been issued to strangers coming to town, the tickets entitling the holders to all the privileges of the Association for one month. The Strangers' Teas had been held once a month, and had been productive of much good.

Mr. Bennett expressed himself as being in hearty sympathy with the plan. The first month's residence of a young man in a town usually determined what kind of a life he was going to live during his subsequent residence, and he thought the plan made use of here to interest the stranger in the Y.M.C.A. a most commendable one.

The president also added a few words in support of Mr. Bennett's views.

The report was unanimously adopted.

THE PHYSICAL DEPARTMENT.

Mr. J. H. Connal read report of the Physical Department, as follows:

The year just ended has been the most successful in the history of the work in this department of the Association.

The interest taken in the classes by the members has been most encouraging to the physical director, and the progress of the work most encouraging to the physical committee.

The total attendance at the regular classes, twelve each week, including two each for junior and senior boys, junior and senior, intermediate seniors and students, passed all five former records of class attendance. The total attendance was 6,613, a daily average of 38. A fencing class was organized under the leadership of Sergeant-Major Britton, quite a number taking advantage of the opportunity to take up this work which was new to most of the members.

Our physical director has been very much helped by the members of the leader corps. The thanks of the Association are due to these men who gave so much of their time to further the interests of the Association work in this department. The assistance rendered by these gentlemen to the director enabled him to undertake his work much more thoroughly than he would otherwise have been able to do. These men spent a great deal of extra time fitting themselves to take up this work and without remuneration of any sort. We think that they should be recognized in some way for the interest shown in the work. The class work taken up was of a general nature such as would be suited to the needs of the members to develop them physically and make them stronger men.

Basket ball was also taken up. A local league was formed amongst the members, composed of six teams. Two games were played each week from October 1st to January 1st, the team called "The Harriers," winning the championship.

The physical director got up an exhibition for New Year's night showing the work done by the boys of the intermediate and junior classes. The exhibition was a good one and showed marked improvement in these classes, and reflected great credit on Mr. Ayers for the efficient way in which they had been trained.

The attendance at the classes during the winter was most gratifying considering the number of counter attractions, being above the average.

Mr. Ayers, assisted by the class leaders, prepared a very creditable programme of events for the closing of the physical year, in gymnasium work, on the night of April 7th. The different classes were put through a variety of exercises illustrating the work taken up by them during the term, and Mr. Ayres and his assistants are to be congratulated on the showing made by the classes.

On May 1st Mr. Ayers, with about twenty members went to Lindsay to give an exhibition of physical work at a concert held in that town under the auspices of their association to raise funds for their gymnasium department.

The Brownie basket ball team visited Toronto and played with the Central West End Associations, winning both games, but were defeated in playing the Hamilton Association in that city.

The tennis club conducted courts at the building and also at Nicholl's Oval.

A baseball club was organized and entered the intermediate city league, winning the championship.

The senior football team won the championship for the Midland District. Six teams were entered for the league.

The annual field day was held in September, senior and junior intermediates and seniors taking part. Twenty-six entries were made altogether in the different events. Medals and buttons were presented to the winners, this plan being approved of by the physical committee.

As the light in the gymnasium was not at all satisfactory it was decided to put reflectors over the lights and it is a decided success, the room being much better lighted. The bath and dressing rooms have also been cleaned and painted. Early in July we had to part with Mr. Ayres, who had been our director for two years and during that time he gave the Association most satisfactory service. His genial matter and his willingness to always lend a hand to help where he could be of assistance made him many friends in our Association and in the town. We were sorry to lose him but glad to see him advancing along the line of work which he had taken up

A SLASHING ATTACK

Rosebery Advances Upon the Tariff Reform Leader.

CHANT 'GOD SAVE THE PEOPLE'

Great Ovation to Lord Rosebery at the Surrey Theatre—Skillful Transposition of the Mother Country and the Colonies—Devonshire's Followers a Strong Force and Men of Influence.

London, Nov. 26.—(C.A.P.)—Lord Rosebery received a great ovation at Surrey Theatre last night. The enthusiastic crowds chanted "God Save the People," and the building rang with cheer after cheer when Rosebery declared for a free Empire and a free loaf. He wondered what would happen if we went to the colonies and proposed in the name of the democracy of England that colonial workmen should have their food taxed in order that we might produce more grain and keep the Empire together. He objected to giving Mr. Chamberlain a commercial dictatorship, and said we were asked to give a mandate to the ex-Colonial Secretary or to some other vagrant Minister to go around and negotiate with the colonies. Referring to the plaint of the ironmen, that Canada dumped during the past two years as much iron as all the dumping countries together. He asked: "What are you to do with an Imperial dump?" Those who disliked dumping saw little difference between a dumping ground for Canada and one for the United States.

Col. Rhodes, a brother of Cecil, said at Balham yesterday, when leaving for Cape Town: "One of the ablest men in South Africa said to me, 'It's ten to one on Joe.'"

The News says: "Before we change the whole of our fiscal system to please Canada, might we not suggest she ceased to dump on us?"

Mr. Asquith, speaking at Bodmin last night, said Devonshire's followers contained an overwhelming proportion of the most responsible and influential men in England.

H. Cust, speaking at Bermondsay, said Cobden was the most unfortunate prophet that ever existed, not excepting Jonah.

Lord Halsbury, speaking at dinner of Welsh M.P.'s at Holborn last night, said Chamberlain's aims were not the goal of the Roman conqueror, but of a united people in all ends of the earth and liberty of free speech.

Canada "the Dumper."

London, Nov. 26.—(C.A.P.)—Earl Crewe, speaking at Harrington, said: "Canada dumps more steel on our shore than any other country. The bounty has enabled Canada to send us 103,000 tons of pig iron in the last three years. Germany, Holland, Belgium and the United States in the same period sent us only 124,000."

The Morning Leader cartoon represents Mr. Chamberlain as kicking bounty-fed sugar out of the room, and a foot note says: "Chamberlain rejoices at having turned bounty-fed sugar out of the country. In the meantime, Canadian iron, on which heavy bounties are paid, is extensively imported."

Study Business Details.

London, Nov. 26.—At the meeting of the Dudley Chamber of Commerce, F. W. Cook, who recently toured in Canada said: "If the market is to be won, the small details of manufacture will have to be closely studied. Either the principals or trusted representatives should visit Canada. Local agents are of little or no use, and sometimes they betray the confidence of the firms they represent."

A MAN CAN'T WORK

When He is Suffering With Piles.

He Can't Eat, Can't Sleep, Can't get Comfort any way but one—Pyramid Pile Cure Will Cure Him, Give Relief at once—Never Known to Fail.

Just a little pain may so distract a man's mind that it will cost him hundreds of dollars. Life is a battle. To succeed one needs all his energies and all his brain force to apply to the question at hand Even a corn will make him irritable, cross, angry—and an angry man seldom succeeds. The trifling pain of a corn is a pleasant feeling beside the agonising ache of piles. That is a pain which seems to pervade the the whole body. It communicates itself to all the parts near the seat of the trouble, and brings on a heavy, dragging feeling in the perineum. Those who have never so suffered do not know what it means. It racks the nerves, prevents sleep, prevents concentrated thought, and makes a man lose flesh as fast as he would with a virulent fever.

And yet piles are looked upon as a little thing. They are neglected—allowed to run on from month to month and year to year By and by comes a dangerous surgical operation. Maybe it cures—maybe it kills.

There is only one sure, safe and quick cure for piles. It is the Pyramid Pile Cure. It is a recent discovery, and its properties are such that it cleanses, soothes and heals the inflamed parts, reduces the inflammation at once, and with continued treatment removes all swelling and all trace of the disease. It puts the membranes in a healthy, active condition and cures completely and permanently.

From Samuel Victor, Detroit, Mich. "I have not written you sooner because the first box of the Pyramid Pile Cure I used helped me so much I wanted to wait until I was completely cured, and so it was after using three boxes of your Pyramid Pile Cure, I am entirely cured of the terrible disease from which I have suffered for six months, and now I am using Pyramid File Pills, which help me very much.'

From B. H. Palmer, Windsor, Ont. "I have been troubled for fifteen years with piles, and have tried different salves and ointments, but never came across anything like your Pyramid Pile Cure. I used two 50 cent boxes three months ago, and they have made a complete cure, and I am recommending them to everyone I know to be afflicted. Thanks for the cure."

From Thomas A. Nixon, 254 North Rambrey street, Philadelphia. "It is now time that I should let you know that I am cured of bleeding piles. If you only knew how I have suffered from them for the last nine years in pain. Last April I went to the drug-store, and bought a 50 cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure, and I found at last a good cure. I had spent dollars trying to get cured of my piles; all others have failed to cure me, and now I am happy to have a good sleep and be able to work also."

Pyramid Pile Cure is sold by druggists generally. If yours doesn't keep it he will get it for you if you ask him. Book on the cause and cure of piles sent free. Address Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich

When they came in from their beats they were asked to hand in their uniforms, and were told that their services were no longer required on the force.

U.S. AND BRITAIN.

Senate Ratifies Treaty Regarding Zanzibar and Pemba.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The Senate yesterday ratified the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, the latter acting as the representative of the Sultan of Zanzibar, permitting the imposition of a slight tax upon American vessels entering the harbor of Zanzibar and Pemba, to be used in maintaining the harbors at those places and providing lights for them. The treaty amends the treaty of 1833, which makes no provisions for harbors and lights.

NO TRUTH IN CEDRIC RUMOR.

No Vessel of Lampart Line Goes Within Miles of Her.

London, Nov. 26.—(C.A.P.)—Manager Ismay of the White Star Line, issues an emphatic denial of the rumor of the sinking of the Cedric in mid-Atlantic by collision with a Lampart steamer. He says no vessel of the latter line goes within many miles of the Cedric's track.

Dr. Freeborn For Parry Sound.

Parry Sound, Nov. 26.—Parry Sound Liberal-Conservatives met at Emsdale yesterday and George McCormick, M.P., the present member, was tendered the unanimous nomination for the next election. He, however, regretted inability to accept, owing to the pressing nature of business affairs and withstood all the strong persuasion that was brought to bear to induce him to alter his decision. Dr. Freeborn of Magnetawan was then tendered the nomination and accepted.

The Glow of Health.

When the blood is rich and pure there is a healthful glow to the complexion which speaks of the vigor and vitality of the system. There is no more certain way for pale, weak people to attain the glow of health than by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great food cure which forms new, rich red blood and creates new nerve force.

On His Mind.

Long—Have you forgotten that $10 you borrowed of me some time ago.

Short—Oh, no, I still have it in mind.

Long—Well, don't you think this would be a good time to relieve your mind of it?

A Hustler.

"Do you think Skinner can make a living out there?"

"Make a living! Why, he'd make a living on a rock in the middle of the ocean if there was another man on the rock."

You find yourself nervous and irritable, worried over little things, unable to rest or sleep, subject to spells of indigestion and headache and losing energy and ambition, but do you ever stop to think that these symptoms indicate nervous disorders which are likely to result in

Paralysis or Locomotor Ataxia

No diseases are more dreaded than those of the nervous system, because none lead to such complete helplessness of mind and body.

You may stop a headache if you use powerful drugs, produce sleep by morphine, or whip up the action of the heart by means of stimulants, but by so doing you are merely consuming the remaining vitality at an enormous rate and physical bankruptcy must overwhelm you sooner or later.

The natural and rational way to restore the wasted and exhausted nerves is by means of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great food cure, which actually forms new, rich blood and creates new nerve force.

There is no such thing as failure known when this great medicine is used, for it is composed of nature's most powerful nerve and blood vitalizers and is bound to do you good. The main thing is to be regular and patient in its use and you will not be disappointed in the results.

As the nerve force and vigor is again restored to the system by this treatment, you will feel again the vitality and energy which accompany health and strength, and by noting your increase in weight can prove that new, firm flesh and tissue is being added to the body.

MR. DEAL

Mr. James A. Deal, a respected resident of Bridgewater, N.S., writes: "About a year ago I suffered a stroke of paralysis, which left me in a very bad state of health. To add to my troubles last winter I took la grippe, which completely exhausted my nervous system. I could scarcely walk or talk, my legs and arms were partially paralyzed my blood did not circulate properly, and I could not do any work. In fact I was so bad that the doctors gave me up and thought I could not live through the summer.

"I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and persevered in the treatment, until now I am at work again. The change in my condition has been most remarkable. It is a surprise to everyone to know that I am able to be around again. My nervous system has been built up wonderfully by this remedy. I am able to rest well, my circulation is normal and my general health good. My appetite is first-class, and I have gained considerably in flesh.

"The results I have obtained from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food have been most gratifying, and I have no hesitation in stating that I believe I owe my life to this preparation. I am willing that you publish this letter, with the hope that it may be the means of helping others to regain their health."

THE DRAGON.

St. George's Antagonist—Did Such Monsters Exist?—Authorities Are Much Divided in Their Descriptio ns.

The dragon was a most important animal in ancient and mediaeval natural history. Until comparatively recent times, says The Times of India, no scientist ever thought of questioning the existence of this most formidable of beasts. The annals of Winchester for 1177 gravely state that "in this year dragons were seen of many in England." Gesner, Professor of Natural History at Zurich, gives a detailed description of the dragon, while Aldrovandus, in his "History of Serpents and Dragons," published in 1640, devotes fifty pages to the monster, discoursing upon its Differentiae, Forma et Descriptio, Mores, Locus, Antipathia, and Usus in Medicina.

In spite of this, it is no mean task to attempt to describe the anatomy of the dragon, for the more one peers into the musty mediaeval literature on the subject the greater becomes one's bewilderment.

Different Versions.

Scarcely any two authors agree on the form of the fell monster. Some deny that it has wings, others would confine its legs to two.

However, a good specimen of a dragon would seem to have been a beast about the size of a sheep, encased in a coat of scales which shone like silver. Its back was serrated like a saw. It possessed a long tail, a pair of bat-like wings, four heavily clawed feet, a wolvine head, the jaws of which were armed with very formidable teeth. The tongue was barbed, and fire and fury issued from the monster's mouth, and the head bore a crest.

Dragons were the most wicked and vindictive of creatures. They seem always to have been in a towering rage, and spent the greater portion of their time in rushing up and down the earth destroying everything that came in their path. Their appetites were voracious. Small wonder then that these monsters became the emblem of everything that was horrible in the world.

Celestial Ideas.

In China and Japan, however, the dragon seems to have been a most amiable creature, belonging evidently to another species. In those countries the "bob-tailed dragon" is held in great veneration. The Indian dragon, true to the traditions of the gorgeous East, was supposed to bear a carbuncle on its head; the natives used to steal this gem from the animal when dead. The origin of dragons was a disputed point among mediaeval naturalists. Some maintained that these animals were generated by the heat of India; others were of the opinion that the volcanoes of Ethiopia used to belch forth the monsters. One scientist, John Leo by name, declared the dragon to be a hybrid, a cross between an eagle and a wolf.

ALIEN INDOOR SERVANTS.

London Magistrate Says Many Are Thieves in Disguise.

The remarks of a London magistrate in sentencing a young Hungarian valet to imprisonment for robbing his employer have reawakened interest in the foreign servant question in England.

According to the Westminster magistrate these aliens obtain employment often without references, and they are able to run away whenever they choose, and are difficult to trace. The result is a great increase of robberies.

During the last two years London police courts have had to deal with a considerable influx of these foreign criminals, male and female, who obtain footholds in private houses as domestic servants, and either ransack their employers' premises themselves or admit confederates who are also burglars.

The officials at one of the northern metropolitan courts yesterday recalled a case where a German servant girl had been convicted for admitting two male compatriots, who practically looted the basement. In this case the girl had been engaged with the fullest character, so that her employer can hardly have been accused of contributory negligence.

On the other hand, the head of a large west end employment agency declared that the foreign servants who turned out badly were only a very small percentage of the ever-increasing numbers that find places. According to this lady, it is idle to deny that the foreign manservant has many advantages over his English competitor. He will do more work for less money; he is generally far more sober, and he is always more contented As a valet, the Swiss or Frenchman is claimed to be far superior

A RICH TERRITORY.

STRIP OF LAND GIVEN TO UNITED STATES HAS VALUE.

What Uncle Sam Got by the Alaskan Boundary Award—The Portland Canal, Which Belongs to Canada, a Magnificent Waterway—Some of Its Advantages—The Timber Value Exaggerated.

The strip of territory awarded to the United States by the Alaskan Boundary Commission contains gold, vast tracts of timber and valuable furs and fisheries, writes a correspondent in the Boston Transcript. Moreover, it is a country capable of great development in other ways, and the waterways which lead up to it, now practically all under our control, are the most beautiful in the world. From Seattle to Juneau is about a thousand miles, and the entire trip by steamer is along these inland waterways. The route lies around and between islands, through a labyrinth of channels, some of which are scarcely a quarter mile wide, yet so deep that no ship can anchor in them. A vessel can graze the cliffs at either side and yet have under her keel waters of wonderful clearness and half a hundred fathoms deep. Right from the water spring the mountains a thousand to eight thousand feet high, while behind them, inland and seaward, on the larger islands are peaks that top the timber line and lift crowns white with perpetual snows. Some of the Norwegian fjords approach them in beauty, but are far behind them in sublime grandeur.

Route Fairly Well Charted.

The route is fairly well charted, but as yet scarcely lighted at all, and in some places sufficiently perilous to add the thrill of danger to the other delights of traveling it. One of these danger spots is Seymour Narrows, between Vancouver Island and Valdez, hence in Canadian territory, before you reach the lower limit of Alaska. Peril Straits, north of Sitka and well within our own territory, is a similar spot, similarly dangerous, so that we break even with Canada on the matter of perils. The memory of a trip on the former United States cutter Corwin through these narrows and the thrills which I received there are yet fresh in my memory. It is unwise to attempt the entrance to this passage with the tide running full either with or against you. If against you, you simply cannot make it; if it is with you the chances of being slammed against the cliffs of the craggy entrance and rolled under are great. You must go through with the tide, but it is best to make the entrance at slack water. The Corwin, coming up from the south, made the spot an hour or two before the turn of the tide and anchored in a convenient bay on the Vancouver side. Here we found a crew of loggers at work in the magnificent primeval forest, getting out fir logs that were five and six feet in diameter. The month was May and the warm waters were full of ducks. The loggers told us that deer and wild game of all kinds abounded in the woods, and we could well believe it, for nowhere is a wilder or more untrodden forest. Shortly before the time for the tide to turn the steamer's prow was set toward the cavernous pass, and we approached it under a full head of steam. The tide had been running against us, and should now rest for a moment and then turn with us.

Perilous Navigation.

But in our care not to be too late we were just a little ahead of time, and as we approached the pass the swirling current began to play with the steamer as a child might play with a toy boat. In spite of her powerful engines and the efforts of two men at the wheel, it was impossible to keep her head straight. She yawed to and fro, yet crept up by taking advantage of the back water near the shore till the point was reached where it was necessary to send her into mid-stream. Here the rush of water caught her, spun her upon her keel and sent her whirling down stream again, baffled. On either side terrifying eddys appeared, holes in the water like those which an oar blade leaves, only a thousand times as large. The force careened her wildly, and from the slanting deck one could look down these water holes to a seemingly unknown depth, and it took a stout heart not to fear that the vessel herself might be dragged under in the whirlpools. Three times we breasted this silent, mighty, whirling force, and each time the ship was spun about like a boy's top. Then a little later we tried again and passed up through placid waters. The tide was at the turn, and the commotion was quelled for a brief space. Then we went on for hours through this winding narrow canon, with the quickening tide chasing us ahead at torpedo-boat speed.

Could Not Anchor.

The sun sank and night came on, thick with fog. You could not tie up to the sheer cliffs, you could not anchor. There was nothing to do but speed on. The channel widened somewhat and all landmarks vanished in the gray of the mist. Then it was that the wise captain felt his way by a trick well known to the Alaskan pilot. He kept the whistle sounding at intervals of a few seconds, and by watching the echo knew which shore was the nearer, and shaped his course accordingly. It was an exciting trip, and no one cared to sleep that night. It was too fascinating to listen to the echoes and bet even money which shore we were to be smashed up on. Yet the night passed, the fog lifted and the morning found us still in the middle of the widening channel. We had made the pass in safety and all bets were off.

The Portland Canal.

Alaskan waters begin at Dixon's entrance, when half the trip from Seattle has been covered. Here, in latitude 54.40 north, you find the Portland Canal, so-called, in reality a waterway of much magnificence, running forty miles inland through timber-clad mountains that rise abruptly. It has a splendid depth of water, and as the commission has decided that this belongs to Canada it will give her an ample channel to the Pacific for the trade which will in future years come to Port Simpson, at its head, the terminus of the projected Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

As you go north from this place you enter between the Alexander Islands and the mainland. Everywhere you find the same marvelous scenery in description of which volumes have been written that can yet not do justice to the reality. The mighty hills on either side are scarred by frequent paths of avalanches, and the melting snows of the white peaks tumble from the cliffs in cascades that sprinkle rainbow spray upon the passing steamer. On the left are islands in a chain 800 miles long and over a thousand in number. Some of them are as large as the State of Massachusetts and most of them practically unexplored by the white man. That they are rich in mineral wealth is already proved by the miners who have touched here and there on their shores. I have tramped for a day in the fascinating fastnesses of one of the smallest of them. The only route was by deer and bear paths. All else was such a tangle of riotous growth as one does not hear of outside the jungles of India. Fallen tree trunks interlaced in inextricable confusion, through which sprang the standing growth of fir and hemlock. The even tempered moist climate accounts for the luxurious growth of conifers. The swamps were tangles of cottonwood, elder, virburnums, and alder.

Productive Virgin Soil.

These are dwarfed in the main and snarled with smaller growth of vaccinium, ribes, and the thorny Echinopanax Horridum, a peculiarly devilish stinging brier. Under foot the mucky soil is covered with a heavy moss in which the traveler sinks to the knee and which is wet the year around. When these forests are cleared by pioneers the sun will be let in on a wonderfully productive virgin soil which will bear enormous crops. The climate is such that anything that can be grown north of Chesapeake Bay on the Atlantic coast should thrive in this new land of the West.

Yet in spite of their luxurious growth, I believe that the timber value of the forests of this portion of Alaska has to bear that it is an inexhaustible forest reserve. Truly, it should furnish pulpwood for generations yet unborn; the growth is rapid and the timber suited for pulp. But as lumber, it seems to be another matter. Here and there you find an individual tree that reminds you of the giants of the Puget Sound country, yet a good deal of the growth is not close set enough to furnish the mighty limbless boles that are the lumberman's delight. In many more places the branchy trunks are not pleasing to the timber cutter's eye and would make poor lumber.

Large Percentage of Hemlock.

The growth seems to be a large percentage of hemlock with a considerable proportion of what is known as Sitkan spruce. The trees cover the hillsides of the mainland and inlands to the height of say two thousand feet, and in many places reach the snow line. Here and there one finds scattered groups of the Alaskan yellow cedar, which is a most valuable wood, large, fine of grain, and easily worked. The Indians use it in the making of their carved totem poles, paddles, etc. The country seems to lack the most important timber of the Puget Sound country, the red fir, or Douglas spruce. It lacks pines, and none of the firs of the Sierra and coast range, so common in Oregon and California, are here to be seen. The conditions for lumbering are such that in the towns already established lumber is more cheaply brought from Puget Sound than from the nearby forests. In the building of the Yukon and White Pass Railroad ties and trestle and bridge timber were brought from Seattle and Victoria rather than cut them near by though the road runs through a timber country. At Orca, on Prince William Sound, the canneries import their lumber; though there is a sawmill in the neighborhood. For some reason it is unable to compete with the freighted timber. There are sawmills in operation, however, at Sitka, Metlakahtla, Wrangel and Douglas City.

Quebec Barbers Must License.

Step up Mr. Barber; you're next! In the Province of Quebec the day of the unlicensed tonsorial practitioner has gone by. Like the physician, the lawyer and the dentist, the barber must have a license to do business, and the license can be secured only after he has appeared before the Board of Examiners and demonstrated that he is qualified to practice his art. Under the go-as-you-please conditions which prevailed before the barber's license law was enacted many men worked themselves into the profession who were unfit to wield the lather brush and razor and whose ideas of hygienics were perverted. Others who were amply qualified showed their disregard for the dignity of their calling by cutting prices as well as hair and cuticle, to the detriment of men of genius. The barkers who advertised "a shave, a glass of beer and a sandwich for 15 cents," and those whose combination barber and butcher's shop netted them a neat revenue, will probably lose the privilege of doing business in the old way. They will be compelled to choose between the two trades, and the mixing of foam and lather will become a lost art. The Graeco-Roman and shave-as-shave-can barber, who depends on his strong right arm for results, will also be debarred from practice, and the bald headed barber with an infallible hair tonic or a sure tip on the races may also fail to secure a license.

Dated a Long Way Back.

Some curious relics, says The Western Morning News, believed to date from the Civil war of the seventeenth century, have recently been picked up on the rocks below Dartmouth Castle, having been washed up by the heavy gale on Sunday week. These are some leaden bullets of various sizes and ages, but evidently trace back for over two hundred years. Judging from the shape of the bullets and the position in which they were found, they must have been fired from God-my-Rock Castle and Mount Ridley, on the Kingswear side of the River Dart, two strongholds which were held for the Parliament by Sir Thomas Fairfax and Sir Henry Cary respectively, in that historic struggle.

A Story of Young Dan Webster.

"Little Dan and his younger brother," said the legal light, "had each been given some money. They started out gleefully, and it was evening before they got back home.

"'Well, Dan,' said the senior Webster, 'what did you do with your money?'

"'Spent it,' the boy answered sturdily.

"'And how about you? What did you do with your money?' the father asked the younger brother.

"'I loaned it to Dan,' was the reply."

Scotch Coolness.

Speaking of Scotch characteristics, an Englishman traveling in this country told a story illustrative of Scottish coolness under trying circumstances.

"A number of Scots," he said, "were working on a fifteen story building. One up near the roof lost his foothold and fell. But even in his swift descent through the air he remained quite cool and calm. In fact, as he shot past a friend on the twelfth story he sang out:

"'Eh, Saundy, man, sic a fall as I shall hae!'"

WHY CUBS ARE KILLED.

Prison Life Often Robs Animals of Maternal Spirit.

Among the huge cages of the carnivorous animals—the lithe tigress, the treacherous and soft footed leopardess and frequently even the generous lioness herself—the life of a baby wild animal becomes sometimes a tale of bloodshed and tragedy. Nagged and galled by prison bars, by narrow confines that make exercise impossible and by the excitement of throngs of sightseers, these naturally nervous and high strung brutes become overwrought to a pitch where they satisfy an unnatural cannibal appetite on their own flesh and blood.

Like little bundles of sunshine the kittens of these ferocious brutes appear, mewing plaintively with tight shut eyes and groping in the darkness. Thousands of them have been born behind the bars of menagerie cages—no fault lies with the stork himself—but most frequently the irresponsible, crazy mothers pounce upon and devour them or else injure them beyond hope of recovery. When the watchfulness and a pitchfork of a keeper succeed in rescuing one of these kittens, it is given in charge of some big mother dog, which adopts the stranger and rears him.

Now and then, however, some strong, healthy, intelligent member of this ferocious family ceases to worry and fret at captivity, and, the maternal instinct cropping to the fore, the care of a litter of cubs becomes a welcome relief from the stern monotony of prison life.—A. W. Rolker in McClure's.

When Beards Were Barred.

In the early part of the last century a social tyranny prevailed which regarded the beard as an outrage, says an English writer. At one time only four men in Birmingham had courage to wear beards. They were followers of Joanna Southcott. They did it in imitation of the apostles and were jeered at in the streets. George Frederick Muntz, one of the first two members elected in Birmingham, was the first member who ventured to wear a beard in the house of commons, and he would have been insulted had he not been a powerful man and carried a heavy Malacca cane, which he was known to apply to any one who offered him a personal affront. The Rev. Edmund R. Larken of Burton rectory, near Lincoln, was the first clergyman (that was as late as 1852) who appeared in the pulpit with a beard, but he shaved the upper lip as an apology for the audacity of his chin. George Dawson was the first nonconformist preacher who delivered a sermon in a full blown mustache and beard, which was taken in both cases as an unmistakable sign of latitudinarianism in doctrine. In the bank clerk or the workman it was worse. It was flat insubordination not to shave.

The Natives Had Scruples.

There is an amusing story told about an old time south sea trader. He had been in the habit of carrying all sorts of tinned meats, which the natives bought with avidity. Each tin was branded with a colored picture—a cow for beef, a sheep for mutton, and a fish for sardines.

It happened that the firm who furnished the mutton thought it a good plan to change their labels, that their goods might be more easily distinguished from others. The mark chosen was a red dragon.

The natives came with their copra to trade as usual. The new tins were shown them, but they recoiled with horror and gave the trader to understand that they had had some religious instruction and were not to be deluded into eating tinned devil.

The trader was forced to eat his stock of mutton himself, for not a native could be persuaded to touch the accursed thing.

Exchange of Compliments.

A village sexton in a Pennsylvania town, in addition to being gravedigger, acted as a stonecutter, carpenter and furniture mover. The local doctor, having decided to locate in another county, employed the sexton to assist in removing his household goods. All went well until it came to settlement, when the doctor deducted an old account due by the sexton. He wrote at the same time objecting to the charge made for removing his furniture, using these words: "If this was steady it would pay much better than gravedigging."

In a few days back came this reply: "Indeed, I would be glad of a steady job. Gravedigging is very slack since you left the county."

Why can't we come over to your house and play any more?
Because papa gets so mad when we make a little bit of noise.
What makes him that way?
Mamma says it's dyspepsia makes him act so crazy.
That's about the way it strikes the small boy. The dyspeptic has no idea of his own unreasonableness or harshness. Little things are magnified and seem to justify his quick anger.
There's health for the dyspeptic and happiness for the family by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and restores perfect health and strength, by enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food.

CHICAGO POLICE ARE IN TROUBLE.

Wounded by Desperadoes Supposed to be Car Barn Murderers.

Messrs. McMillan & Maguire, stock brokers, Hunter street, have received the following despatch over their private wires:—

"An extra edition of the Chicago American says:—'Two men supposed to be members of the Chicago police force were wounded to-day in battle with a twain, believed to be Peter Niedemeyer and Harvey Van Dine, the fugitive car barn murderers, who have been surrounded by a posse of detectives and farmers near Miller's Stone, Ind. Armed with Winchesters and heavy revolvers. Fifty police officers are bearing down on the scene. A call for help was wired to Chicago Chief of Police by detectives, who had trailed the men to Miller's Stone, and 20 minutes after the telegram was received at the City Hall, relief was on its way.

A Creditable Organization.

Those who were at the opera house last night, and listened to the production of "Pinafore," were delighted with the music provided by the orchestra of twenty pieces under the direction of Mr. Rupert Gliddon. That the town possesses such a creditable musical organization must be a source of satisfaction to all who are anxious to see the cause of good music promoted. Mr. Gliddon is now at work on a number of new selections which he has just received, and many of them will be used for the first time at the Albany Club ball.

A NEW ASPECT IN DEFLECTION PLAN.

C. P. R. Will Operate a Line if it is Built by the People.

Municipalities on Grand Trunk in Earnest About Securing Connection With C. P. R. Will Raise Money if Necessary.

(Special to the Examiner.)

Bowmanville, November 27th. — The agitation of the frontier towns to secure connection with the C.P.R. has taken on a changed aspect, according to the following despatch from Whitby to the Toronto Star:

"The Keystone this morning publishes a column letter from Mr. F. Howard Annes, in which the transportation question as it affects the country between Toronto and Montreal, is discussed. On the authority of a Canadian Pacific Railway Director, it is stated that in reply to the delegation from the recent Bowmanville conference of municipalities from Cobourg to Whitby, wanting connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway by a new line leaving the Ontario and Quebec Division at Warkworth, and running through the frontier towns to a junction with it again at Agincourt, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy will say the Canadian Pacific is willing to operate such a line if built and handed over to his company, the same as the Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and Pontypool Railway, now in course of construction."

The plan as outlined in the above despatch is one which had not been contemplated by the recent conference of the different municipalities interested, held here, and it has had the effect of raising the discussion as to whether the plan as above enunciated would commend itself to the towns which are advocating for the deflection of the line.

Mr. J. J. Mason, one of the members of the town council here, and one of those who are most deeply interested in the proposal, as being for the benefit of the towns on the Grand Trunk, when spoken to this morning, gave it as his opinion that should the Government grant the usual subsidy to the proposed line, he felt sure an effort would be made by the business men and capitalists in the towns which the new line would serve, to raise sufficient money to provide for the cost of construction of the line. The feeling among the delegates to the recent conference, which was a thoroughly representative meeting, was that a determined effort should be made to secure this connection, even at the expense of considerable sacrifice, as it is felt that unless this additional railway shipping facility is secured, the towns along the front will not be in a position to offer necessary advantages to manufacturers wishing to locate here.

The conference had not considered the question of endeavouring to finance the road, their thought being that the C.P.R. should build it, in its own interest, for the sake of the traffic that would be secured. But the plan now proposed will doubtless receive consideration, and Mr. Mason expressed his opinion that should Sir Thomas Shaughnessy reply to the deputation as it is suggested he will, the municipalities will at once interview the Government and press the claims of the road for a subsidy, similar to that given to the Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and Pontypool Railway.

The above despatch indicates that there is more probability of the C. P. R. deflecting its line than many in Peterborough have thought, and, if the line is to be so deflected it should be seen to that the interests of Peterborough are not prejudicially affected. The men at the head of the proposal to secure connection are in earnest, and the governing bodies of Peterborough should recognise this fact.

New Serial.

The Examiner, on Monday begins the publication of one of the best serial stories that has ever appeared in these columns. Probably no novel in recent days has created more criticism than "The Strollers," by Frederick S. Isham, and the readers of the Examiner are extremely fortunate in being able to get this complete story in the columns of this paper. The interest begins right at the commencement of the story, and continues unabated to the end, so that no copies should be missed. Be sure and read the first instalment in the issue of Monday, Nov. 30th.

REVIEWED WORK OF PAST YEAR.

His call to the New York Association was a decided advance in the work.

Mr. Aplin, whom we have been most fortunate in securing in Mr. Ayers' place, is doing good work and has made a very creditable showing for so early in the season. He is thorough and conscientious in the performance of his duties and takes great interest in the work.

J. H. CONNAL,
Chairman.

This report also called forth some observations on the part of the members present, in which regret was expressed at the departure of Mr. Ayres, but it was agreed that in Mr. Aplin the department was in very capable hands and was making most satisfactory progress. Confidence in the ability of the Physical Director was expressed by the President and others.

The motion to adopt was carried.

R. S. MERRILL,
Auditor.

The President took occasion to congratulate the association on the state of the finances. In view of the additional expenditure this year he thought the report was a very creditable one.

Mr. Williamson commenting on the report, said that it had been a real pleasure to him to present the claims of the association to the consideration of the business men of the town, and said that he had been met everywhere with great cordiality, and could not expect more generous treatment than he had received in the majority of cases. He said, that speaking from a somewhat thorough knowledge of the conditions prevailing throughout Canada in Y.M.C.A. work, there was no association in the country to which more general support was accorded than to the Peterborough Association.

THE NEW OFFICERS.

Mr. R. P. Dormer, presented the report of the Nominating Committee, which was on motion adopted, the officers for the year being:

President—Mr. E. B. Edwards, K.C.
1st Vice-President—Mr. J. O. Shook
2nd Vice-President—Mr. J. J. Howden.
Treasurer—Mr. W. D. Campbell.

The following were elected to the Board of Directors, to retire in 1906: Messrs. R. E. Harding, A. E. Dixon, J. C. Shook, E. B. Edwards, K.C., Chas. McFarlane, W. D. Campbell. To fill the vacancy on the Board, Mr. J. J. Howden.

Mr. Bennett, as a member of the Nominating Committee paid a high tribute to the efficient service which the retiring President had given the Association, and said the committee had endeavoured to induce Mr. Madill to allow his name to stand for President for this year. This he had not consented to do however, and, the committee after looking around for the best man available had persuaded Mr. Edwards to accept the nomination. Mr. Kidd, also had found that his time was so fully occupied that he could not continue longer in the office of Treasurer.

Mr. Madill, the late President, in retiring from the office took occasion to thank the Board, and the members of the Association generally, for the support that had been accorded him during the year. He appreciated the confidence that had been reposed in him, and felt that he had done his best to fill the duties of the office. It had been a great pleasure to work with the other members of the Board, and he paid a high tribute to the faithfulness of the General Secretary. The work had been unusually heavy this year because of the extra financial obligations ,and he fully appreciated the work of Mr. Williamson in this direction. He referred to a new feature which had been introduced this year, that of Shop Bible Classes; these, he said had been attended with good results. Speaking of the physical department, he felt, he said, that the work was most prosperous in the hands of Mr. Aplin, who was giving entire satisfaction to the Board. He hoped the members would support the incoming President as they had supported him. Col. Edwards, in taking the chair, thanked the members for the honour they had done him by electing him to the office, which he had accepted with diffidence. His attitude towards positions of this sort was, he said, that if a man wanted to serve his Master he should be willing to do what his Master required, even at a personal sacrifice, if necessary. He hoped the Association would still continue to exert an influence for good upon the young men, and the town generally. The reports presented had been most encouraging, and he hoped to see the work well sustained.

Mr. R. E. Harding, a member of the Board for many years, said he would like to congratulate the Association on its choice of a President. He had learned with great pleasure the changing feeling on the part of many young men in town, with reference to the Association. It was no trouble to get them to become members now that they could see the great benefits coming to them from such membership. He believed that the Peterborough Association was better equipped than was the Central Association in Toronto.

Mr. J. J. Howden, the newly elected 2nd Vice-President, thanked the members for electing him to the office and the honour they had shown him.

Mr. J. C. Shook, 1st Vice-President, also spoke briefly, saying that he recognized the position as being an honourable one.

The meeting closed with singing, "Blest be the Tie that Binds," and prayer by the President.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR LUMBER CO

Big Bend Lumber Company in Which Local Capitalists are Interested, is Prosperous.

"Mr. R. R. Hall, of Peterborough, who recently went to British Columbia to examine the Big Bend Lumber Company's property and prospects, has written to Mr. George Jordan, of town, a director of the company, his impression of the proposition. Mr. Hall says that his best expectations have been exceeded by the property. He finds that the mill is the best in the mountains in that it is thoroughly up to date, of ample capacity, and located as few mills there are, above high water, so that it can be operated all the year round. He finds moreover that the demand for lumber is very strong at prices that yield a very handsome profit. Being 400 miles nearer the Canadian Northwest, which is the chief customer for western lumber, than are the Coast mills, the Big Bend Company's mill will have a heavy advantage over them in freight rates. Besides that, the company's timber is not so large as that on the coast, and hence can be manufactured at from $2 to $5 less cost than that handled by the coast mills. Mr. Hall has bought a very large block of the Big Bend stock. In his opinion Mr. Hall agrees with Mr. J. D. Flavelle of town, who recently visited the mill and has since become a shareholder. Mr. W. Flavelle is a director in the company and a holder in it. Mr. Jordan is enthusiastic over the prospects of the Big Bend proposition."—Lindsay Watchman-Warder.

CONSERVATIVES NOVEL SCHEME.

How a Huge Campaign Fund Promoted Political "Purity."

MORE MONEY FOR TORY CANDIDATES

Hypocrisy Joins Hands With Humbug to Advance Conservative Party Interests—Some Artlessly Apologetic Explanations.

For years the Conservative party leaders and newspapers of Ontario have not ceased, day nor night to attack the Ross Government and the Liberals of Ontario by raising with monstrous hypocrisy and flagrant inconsistency the outcry of corrupt political methods. It is persistently charged that the Ross Government keeps itself in power by the bribery and fraud alleged to be practiced by Liberal party workers. Anybody who knows anything at all of the political history of this country knows that the Conservative party is the father of corrupt political methods—knows that this country never knew of corruption reduced to a system, represented by ballot stuffing, ballot switching, etc., till these and allied crooked methods were introduced and practiced by Conservative party workers. Yet in face of the fact that these refined corrupt methods were practiced in secret years and years before the Liberal party even heard of them, the parrot cry of "corruption" is raised as freely as if the Conservative party was composed of angels of purity and the Liberal party was hopelessly corrupt. This cry is raised to divert attention from the complicated political crookedness and corruption practiced by, and in the interests of, the Conservative party in Ontario.

Another move in this direction is represented by a remarkable document which appeared on November 14th in the Toronto News, an organ devoted to the interests of Whiteyism slangwhanging the Ontario Government and whitewashing the Conservative party. With this latter object in view, the following article was printed in the News, and the reader is invited to peruse it carefully for when dissected, it will be found to be one of the most prodigious political "Fakes" ever exploited by a party of humbug and hypocrisy. It reads:—

"During the bye-election campaign in Muskoka recently, the Hon. Geo. W. Ross made some remarkable references to the corruption which, according to decisions in the courts, existed in both parties. The Premier naturally defended the record of his own party, and attacked that of his opponents. In part proof of his charges against the opposite party he referred to the fact that a central fund had existed during the last Provincial election, and that candidates were supplied from headquarters with a portion of their expenses.

As the statement of the Ontario Premier was based partly on admissions made in evidence by two members of the Legislature, it may be instructive as well as interesting to tell the story of this central fund. As a political episode it is probably without precedent in Canadian politics, and calls for some notice both on this account and because its purposes were really designed to prevent corruption, and not in any way to encourage it. An account, therefore, of this movement and the money raised by its means may be of value at the present time to those concerned in improving the political methods of the country. The narrative is intended to be strictly impartial, and is believed to be accurate in details.

THE COST OF ELECTIONS.

That elections in Canada, and especially in the Province of Ontario, have of late years been growing more costly, so costly indeed as to appal old and hardened politicians, is a fact but too well known. That this excessive costliness is accomplished in too many cases by corruption is a still more lamentable truth. THE PRESENT NARRATIVE IS THE HISTORY OF AN ATTEMPT WHICH WAS MADE BY A FEW MEN TO RELIEVE POLITICS IN THIS PROVINCE OF THE CORRUPT BURDEN THEY HAVE COME TO BEAR—AN EFFORT BASED ON THE BELIEF THAT CORRUPTION IN POLITICS IS NOT ONLY EXPENSIVE AND DEMORALIZING, BUT IN THE LONG RUN FUTILE. The more cynical politicians, if they are at all intelligent, realize that political parties in the past have paid too dear a price for the retention of power. Retribution, though it may be delayed, is certain, and when it comes the defeated party is penalized, and pays for its past sins by long periods of Opposition.

By way of preface it may be taken for granted that it is easier for the party in Opposition to inaugurate a movement for clean elections, than for the one in power, for the reason that it is more difficult to get campaign funds, and that the natural-born corruptionists drift by instinct into the fold of the party which has tangible favours to bestow. THE ORGANIZATION TO WHICH REFERENCE HAS BEEN MADE WAS KNOWN AS THE ONTARIO CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION. IT IS BUT LITTLE MORE THAN THREE YEARS OLD, and its history, considered from a wholly non-partisan standpoint, is a MOST CREDITABLE EPISODE IN CANADIAN POLITICS. THE ORGANIZATION MUST NOT BE CONFUSED WITH THE LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION OF ONTARIO, WHICH HAS CHARGE OF THE GENERAL PARTY ORGANIZATION OF THE PROVINCE, and of which all Conservative legislators, candidates and officers of the local associations in the various constituencies are members. The Ontario Conservative Association was a comparatively small group of representative men, vitally interested in Canada's advancement and in maintaining the institutions of this country on a sound basis.

GENESIS OF THE PLAN.

It had its genesis in September, 1900, two months before the last general election for the Federal House. One evening eight or ten prominent citizens of Toronto, naturally of Conservative party leanings, met to talk matters over. It was believed that a general election was pending. Some of the gentlemen who met together, had not previously to the initiatory steps taken to bring about the meeting, known each other by sight. NOT ALL OF THEM HAD BEEN ACTIVE POLITICIANS, AND THE PURPOSE THAT BROUGHT THEM TOGETHER WAS THE DESIRE TO COMBAT CORRUPTION. THE GENERAL CONCLUSION ARRIVED AT WAS THE FIRST STEP WAS TO MAKE THEIR OWN HOUSE CLEAN. It was pointed out that elections were becoming so expensive as to make politics a very costly business for the honest man, and tempting only to the "grafter." IT WAS MOREOVER THE BELIEF OF THE GENTLEMEN PRESENT THAT ONLY A FRACTION OF AN ORDINARY CAMPAIGN FUND WAS REALLY EXPENDED FOR LEGITIMATE EXPENSES, AND THAT EVEN IN CORRUPT ELECTIONS THE MAJOR PORTION OF THE FUNDS SENT TO A CONSTITUENCY FAILED TO REACH THE ELECTORATE, AND WENT INTO THE POCKETS OF A FEW INDIVIDUALS, WHO ARE "NOT IN POLITICS FOR THEIR HEALTH." The gentlemen present undertook to raise a campaign fund to enable the Conservative party to fight the Federal Campaign in Ontario, and which should be expended solely for legitimate purposes. It was also agreed that protective measures to secure the proper disposal of the money raised must be adopted.

(Special to the Examiner.)

Norwood, Nov. 28th.—The death of Mrs. Minta A. Ford, wife of Dr. S.P. Ford, of this village occurred on Tuesday, Nov. 24th, at her residence, Ridge street, after a long illness.

The funeral service was held in the Methodist church on Friday, Nov. 27th, at 1.30 p.m. The service was conducted by former pastors of the church, Rev. J. A. McCamus, Wellington; Rev. R. Mrs. Ford was the daughter of Mr. Robert Connor, of Niagara-on-the-Lake, and came to this village as a bride over 38 years ago. During that time she has lived among and gained the respect and esteem of the people here. She was an active member of the Methodist church until recent years when her health failed.

There were two children, the late Mrs. (Dr.) Jory, St. Catharines, and Prof. H. E. Ford, of Jefferson University, Washington.

The bearers were, Messrs. W. E. Roxburgh, P. W. Stevenson, J. D. Pearce, R. W. Waters, W. B. Stephenson and P. W. Reynolds. THE LATE MRS. FAIR LAID AT REST.

Large Funeral Yesterday at St. Thomas' Church Millbrook.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Wm. Fair on Friday, was very largely attended, the services being conducted in St. Thomas' church, Millbrook, by Rev. Ven. Archdeacon Allen, assisted by Rev. W. O. Allen, and Rev. Mr. Spencer. The favourite hymns of the deceased were sung at the service, and Rev. Archdeacon Allen took advantage of the opportunity to pay a tribute to the Christian character and consistent life led by Mrs. Fair, whom he had been associated with for fifty years. She was among the first to welcome him to the parish, and had ever since been a valued member of the church, which, with her bereaved family, would feel her loss very keenly.

The pall-bearers were six nephews of the deceased lady: Messrs. Robt. McCamus, Jas. McCamus, R. H. Wood, Jas. Wood, Thos. Wood, and Wilfrid Brown. Interment took place at St. Paul's church cemetery.

STORY OF A BIG POLITICAL "FAKE."

"The object of the said association is to promote and advance the principles of the Liberal-Conservative party in the Province of Ontario, and for this purpose to print, or procure to be printed, and disseminate literature advocating those principles; to hold and pay the expenses of public meetings for such purposes; to see that elections are pure and free, and for such purposes, if necessary, to employ detectives and others to prosecute election criminals and frauds, and to put down bribery and corruption in elections; to protect or give assistance in protesting elections believed to have been carried wrongly, illegally or corruptly; to assist financially or otherwise, local Conservative riding associations or candidates advocating the objects and principles of the association; to engage and to pay organizers and others for the purpose aforesaid, or any of them, and generally to do such acts and things as shall be conducive to the due attainment of such objects, or any of them; to obtain, if possible, and if desired, a Provincial charter of incorporation, empowering the association to carry out the objects and purposes above indicated, and other objects and purposes of a kindred nature thereto."

It may be remarked in passing that it was never deemed necessary to obtain the charter referred to. The constitution in all contained some fifteen clauses, defining the details of organization, and providing for a council to take charge of its affairs, of which five members should constitute a quorum.

(As illustrating the practical side of the organization, it will be seen that the members realized the necessity of a campaign fund for the assistance of candidates.) They did not hold the theory that elections could carry themselves, and that even with a fair field, the best man must of necessity win. It was recognized that the educational work, the holding of public meetings, the dissemination of literature, was a costly matter, in some ridings much more so than others. Moreover, all candidates are not rich men, or even well-to-do, although a certain section of the electorate is prone to think so. Very frequently the most "available" man is poor. The question of "availability" in politics is one of the most difficult of problems. Daniel Webster was time and again disappointed in his ambition to become President of the United States, because he was not believed by the leaders of his party to be as "available" as men of mediocre ability. The ablest man is often the most difficult to elect; while a poor man often makes a much better candidate than a rich man in certain constituencies. A central campaign fund is therefore an absolute necessity in any political party. In England, where Parliamentarians are not paid out of the public purse, the institution is well recognized. A certain portion of the party fund is set aside to provide incomes for men who otherwise would not be members of Parliament. In Canada it frequently happens that a candidate cannot of himself afford to make the necessary sacrifice of time and money involved in an election, and is obliged to look to his party for assistance. This is especially true of a body like the Ontario Legislature, where many of the members are farmers of moderate means.

THE TWO-FOLD PLEDGE

It was, as has been said, the resolve of the gentlemen constituting the Ontario Conservative Association that the campaign fund to be raised by them should be expended solely for legitimate purposes, and for that reason a form of receipt was drawn up, which took the nature of a two-fold pledge, to the effect that not only would the candidate spend none of the money so received, but would use none of his own means either for corrupt purposes.

The text of this pledge was as follows:—

"I beg to acknowledge the receipt of ———— from the Ontario Conservative Association, which is received by me upon the distinct agreement and my personal pledge that no part whatever of that sum is to be expended improperly or contrary to the provisions of the Election Law, and that I shall to the fullest extent of my ability conduct a pure and clean election. I will also undertake to return to you any portion of the sum which it may not be necessary to use in the legitimate expenses of my campaign."

The total sum raised by the association to fight the Federal elections of 1900 in this Province was $19,673, and after the election was over there was a surplus of $1,950 still unexpended. This is said to have been practically the only fund which the Conservative party in this Province had to fight that campaign with. THE RESULT WAS A MAJORITY OF UPWARDS OF TWENTY IN THIS PROVINCE FOR THE PARTY'S CANDIDATES.

There was no uniform rate fixed as to the amount of money which should be given to each candidate. The needs of each constituency were carefully considered by the Treasurer, assisted by an advisory committee of two or three gentlemen. The extent of the territory to be organized, the facilities therefor, the personal circumstances of the candidates, all were taken into consideration. The association refused even to recognise as a legitimate practice the bringing of absent voters home to cast their ballots. The result of this careful policy was, as has been seen, a surplus after the election was over. One of the candidates actually returned a considerable sum of unexpended money. In the clause of the constitution quoted above it will be seen that provision is made to expend money on detective work. This function of the association afterwards assumed large importance, but in the Federal campaign only $348 was expended for this purpose.

THE PROVINCIAL CAMPAIGN.

When the general elections for the Legislature last year (1902) were pending, Mr. Whitney, the leader of the Opposition, had a conference with the members of the association, and asked them to undertake charge of the campaign fund in connection therewith. This was assented to, and, including the surplus of $1,956 left over from 1900, a fund of $28,895, all told, was raised. As will be remembered, that fight was one of the bitterest in the history of the Province, with a considerable group of new constituencies in the outlying districts to organize. YET ON ELECTION DAY THE TREASURER STILL HAD IN HIS POSSESSION $6,737, WHICH COULD HAVE BEEN PAID OUT TO CARRY THE ELECTION, but which, under the searching system by which the fund was administered, had been unexpended. The two-fold pledge exacted of the recipients of funds was precisely the same as that used in the Federal elections, and quoted above.

As is already known to the general reader who follows political affairs in this Province, a LARGE SUM WAS EXPENDED IN DETECTIVE WORK—SOME $4,633 IN ALL. The officers were chiefly supplied from one agency, and sent daily reports to their chief, who transmitted them to the association. The detectives were also instructed to keep themselves pretty well in evidence so as to frighten off wrongdoers, and no doubt by this method alone accomplished a good deal in some ridings. Their reports in certain cases revealed a serious state of affairs amply justifying the charge that politics in Ontario are rankly corrupt. The bona fides of this measure has been questioned, but the proof is absolute that this branch of expenditure was wholly as represented.

An interesting feature of the matter is the fact that two men returned at the last general election for the Legislature swore that they had not expended the sums sent to them, but had merely put the funds in their pockets. This is a good illustration of the original theory held by the members of the association, that but a fraction of an ordinary campaign fund is actually used for election purposes.

Of the unexpended sum of $6,737, a portion has since been spent in connection with protests, but the mere existence of such a surplus at the close of a campaign so bitterly fought as that of 1902 is a token of the earnest resolve of the association to maintain a clean election that speaks louder than words. The group of founders who undertook to demonstrate that elections could be won without corrupt expenditures do not claim that no corruption was practiced by Conservative workers in the last campaign, but in the main they are satisfied with the result of their labours, and they are satisfied also that only by such measures will politics be placed on a cleaner, saner and more economical basis—that is to say, by Reform from Within.

The "Narrative" says:—

"The present narrative is the history of an attempt which was made by a few men to relieve politics in this Province of the corrupt burden they have come to bear—an effort based on the belief THAT CORRUPTION in politics is not only expensive and demoralizing, but in the long run futile."—Toronto News.

This beautiful "narrative" of the efforts of noble men to achieve a noble aim strikes a high key at the outset. It begins with a charmingly frank confession—the confession that the purifiers of the political Augean stables have tasted of the fruit of political corruption, which turned like Dead Sea apples to ashes on their lips. Hence the confession that they have found corruption in politics not only demoralizing, but what is worse, expensive.

* * * * * * * *

The "Narrative" continues:—

"This organization (the result of an attempt to relieve politics of corrupt burdens) was known as the 'Ontario Conservative Association. It is but a little more than three years old."—Toronto News.

"But a little more than three years old"—and it never will be any older for we are told with pathetic brevity and simplicity that "by the way, it has ceased to exist." It has performed its sweet mission of purifying politics by throwing dust into the eyes of the public and posing as having made a gallant effort to purify politics—the greatest game of bluff ever put up — the hollowest political "fake" of its kind ever worked.

* * * * * * * *

Then we read:—

"The organization must not be confused with the 'Liberal Conservative Association of Ontario' which has charge of the general party organization of the Province."—Toronto News.

Certainly—no connection with the "Opposition" shop over the way. The angel-brand Association was quite distinct from that "child of sin," the veteran, long established, possibly rather tired, regular Liberal-Conservative Association—the practical business end of the combine, the Association which made no pretensions to a purifying mission—but whose mission was to "get there." This vulgar worlding, the old Conservative Association was composed of a numerous and not select membership, consisting merely of creatures of common clay, such as "Conservative legislators, candidates and officers of local associations," while the Simon-pure Association was composed of "eight or ten" chosen vessels—prominent citizens of Toronto"—the GOOD. But this was not the only distinction. The purity wing of the Conservative organization claimed to have a campaign, or corruption fund—in Conservative methods the terms are largely interchangeable—of only "$28,895, all told." What was that among so many—as 92 candidates? A mere flea bite. Does the writer of the "narrative" who puts his unblushing "fake" on the public expect the public to believe that was all the fund available for the campaign of 1902? If they do believe it, then the assertion that the moon is made of green cheese becomes a self evident proposition. No; that's where the old, sinful, ordinary, practical "business" Association came in. Can one think that in a fight in which Mr. Whitney threw his whole strength and that of his party, was put up without the help of the old warhorse, the bona fide—not the bogus, not the "fake," not the three year old Association? Would the party which went into the general elections of 1898 with a fund said to be as large as $75,000 go into the election of the century—from an Opposition point of view—the election in which the Conservative party after a generation of chilly vegetation in the "cold shades," was to get into power, if money and effort could accomplish it, be satisfied with so small a fund? Would the sinews of war be limited to a paltry "$28,895 all told," to be disbursed by an Association with goody-goody methods? By no means. The "Fake" Association came to the front with Mr. Whitney's approval and blessing, so that he could play the purity "racket," while the business end of the Association—the possum partner, the real power behind—the vis—or rather—the vice a tergo, provided the substantial stack of ducats and saw that they were placed where they would do the most good. The two Associations, the "fake" and the bona fide, worked a beautiful double game on the confiding public.

* * * * * * * *

Again we read:—

"Not all of them (the chosen vessels) had been active politicians and the purpose that brought them together was the desire to combat corruption. The general conclusion arrived at was that the first step was TO MAKE THEIR OWN HOUSE CLEAN." — Toronto News.

Here is another bright spot in the "narrative"—another bit of truth,—another confession. Mr. Whitney has been shouting "corruption" for years and condemning Liberals as guilty of it, while at the same time he was standing knee-deep in the stream of corruption of his own party, which flowed about him like the muddy swirl of a storm freshet. He has never been known to utter one word of condemnation of it. But then we have the "eight or ten prominent men of Toronto, the chosen vessels," "speaking out in meetings" and declaring that their "own house" was dirty—this is a bright spot, "a most creditable episode" in Conservative politics, the first authoritative party admission, (outside the evidence of the election and criminal courts) that corruption even existed in the Conservative ranks. Mr. Whitney also knew it, but he hypocritically ignored it, though he secretly became a party to the attempt of a "fake" Association to blind the eyes of the public and pretended to be interested in the purification of political methods—to play the goody-goody game, while the wicked partner Association did in another way its share—possibly the lion's share — of the corrupt work and the results went to the credit of the common account.

Further on we read:—

"It was the belief of the gentlemen that only a fraction of the ordinary campaign fund was really expended for legitimate expenses and that even in corrupt elections the major portion OF THE FUNDS SENT TO A CONSTITUENCY FAILED TO REACH THE ELECTORATE and went into the pockets of a few individuals who were not in politics for their health."—Toronto News.

Here we have more charming frankness from the guileless "eight or ten gentlemen of Toronto." Conservative campaign funds had been wasted—they "HAD NOT REACHED THE ELECTORATE"—the right spot. They were not, however, so guilelessly innocent as they seemed. Even in the holy work of purifying politics they had an eye to business and they undertook to raise a campaign fund that should go to the spot and worldly wise precautions were taken to provide that corruption funds should not be frittered away or "grafted." A constitution was adopted with fifteen high sounding clauses—presumably—to judge by the only one which thee "Narrative gave to the world. The rest no doubt related to "family affairs," "ways and means," confidential instructions, etc., which could not be made public with any more consistency than a Masonic secret.

The "Narrative after stating that $19,673 was spent in the Dominion election of 1900 by the "fake" purity Association, goes on to say:—

"The result was a majority of upwards of twenty in this Province for the party's candidates."—Toronto News.

That is, they claim to have carried the Province with a corruption fund of less that $20,000 including an expenditure for "detectives" of only $348.

Yet though that was enough and more for a big, Dominion-shaking contest, and though the purifiers claimed that too much money was spent in elections, they proposed straightway to raise more money. And they doubtless knew where to go for the members of the Association, who proposed making it a "corporation" would naturally know where to apply. At any rate for the Ontario elections of 1902, the sum of $28,895 was raised a sort of "side bet," quite distinct from and "not to be confused with" the funds of the orthodox and permanent Association—"the Liberal-Conservative Association of Ontario."

They, however, failed to carry the elections, and undoubtedly for very good reasons. Out of the sum sent out to help candidates, in two or three instances investigated in court, the candidates declared, under oath, that they kept the money, and put it in their pockets, while one verdant and misguided candidate actually sent the "missionary" money back. How stupid! How discouraging to the purifiers! How frail is our fallen human nature! The very men the purifiers trusted, and who subscribed to a solemn pledge that they would see that the money was properly used, defeated the noble intentions of the purifiers, who, according to the "Narrative," had deplored the fact that "OFTEN THE FUNDS FAILED TO REACH THE ELECTORATE," and this, after they had, in their guileless simplicity, thought they had taken effective means to prevent the funds going astray.

* * * * * * * *

Then the "Narrative" tells us:

"A large sum was expended in detective work, some $4,633 in all. The detectives were also instructed to keep themselves in evidence so as to frighten off wrong-doers."—Toronto News.

This detective work as it was done, was a patriotic thing to do. It was very nicely in keeping with the stainless character of a political purity association, to import from the slums of American cities alien thugs and plug-uglies, bullies and pimps, to assist in the great work of purifying the political air of Ontario—men of such marked appearance and demeanour that they had only to "keep themselves in evidence" to act as scarecrows.

* * * * * * * *

One more gem from the "Narrative:"

"Yet on election day, the treasurer had in his possession $6,737 WHICH COULD HAVE BEEN PAID OUT TO CARRY THE ELECTION." — Toronto News.

"IT COULD HAVE BEEN USED TO CARRY THE ELECTIONS," but was not used, it is claimed. Is this another evidence of a distrust of human nature so sad to see in eight or ten gentlemen of Toronto who have a mission to purify things. This money, this surplus, the only surplus known to history under Conservative management — is "not lost, but gone—elsewhere." May not this $6,737 lying round loose, serve a useful purpose—may it not serve to throw light upon a deep mystery. The grand riddle of the Gamey investigation was, "Where did the money come from?" There was, the "Narrative" says, $6,737 left on election day. If we could see the pile now there might haply be found a hole big enough to bear some not very obscure relation to the missing leaves which so mysteriously disappeared from the Crossin Piano Company's day book.

According to the "Narrative" the founders of the "fake" association claim that their experiment with the "Come-Along-John" way of "putting down corruption"—with "lots of money" was successful. They were "satisfied with it in the main," and regarded their work as a creditable episode in Canadian politics."

Let us give a moment's attention to showing what success the "fake" association achieved in purifying politics. We may look a little into the ground of satisfaction of the purists. It must be remembered that a special campaign was inaugurated to promote purity which, like charity, began at home, for the "Narrative" says that "the general conclusion was that THE FIRST STEP WAS TO MAKE THEIR OWN HOUSE CLEAN," and goodness knows, it needed making clean.

* * * * * * * *

Now, note what the result of this great purity campaign was. For four or five years the cry had gone forth that the Liberals were corrupt, and that they must be watched and circumvented in their designs on the purity of the electorate, and to do this a fund of $28,895 was raised, $4,638 being expended in "detective" work.

What was the result?

After the last Provincial election, in which the purifiers especially operated, thirty protests came before the courts, and of these eight cases went to trial, and of these SIX WERE CONSERVATIVE AND ONLY TWO were Liberal seats. There seems to have been some hitch in the working of the party machine. We were told that the Liberals only were corrupt, and that continually, that the purifiers had entered the field to secure an honest verdict and yet the result was that ONLY TWO LIBERAL SEATS went to protest, while six Conservatives seats came under trial.

The net result was that FOUR CONSERVATIVES WERE UNSEATED and ONLY ONE LIBERAL.

Then, what about the workers operating under the wing of the Ontario Conservative Association, the new, elect, chosen organization to promote purity of elections—to expose corrupt "Grit" methods, and insure pure "Tory" methods. Would you believe it? Of the men reported, or convicted by trial for corrupt practices, SIX WERE CONSERVATIVE WORKERS and ONLY ONE LIBERAL!

How does this record justify the organized outcry of corruption against the Ross Government, as the party of wickedness overcoming by fraud and sharp practice the innocent Whitney party, the party of righteousness?

Such arrant humbug, such nauseating hypocrisy, cannot be fittingly described in parliamentary language.

In the face of all this we have the "Narrative" of an 'Election Fund Properly Used," one of the most remarkable examples of a "pious fraud" ever given to the public. And in the face of all this, accept this little comparative table of facts as an answer to the political "fake":

MEMBERS UNSEATED—GENERAL ELECTION.

Conservatives	4	Liberals...	1

PARTY WORKERS CONVICTED OR REPORTED.

Conservatives...	6	Liberals...	1

TOTALS.

Conservative majority	8

If the Conservatives can't win a majority at the polls, they don't seem to have much difficulty in winning a majority in the matter of corrupt methods. And still we have in default of a policy the cry of 'corruption." He that runs may read.

It would be interesting to know, if our candid friend would supply the information, who contributed those funds? How much was sent to each county? What did they do with it? If it was a purely legitimate fund for the purification of election methods, there can be no reason for not giving the details. Since the public have been taken into the confidence of the Association by the News to a certain extent, there can be no impropriety in suggesting that the names of the philanthropic men who entered into this great undertaking should be made public. It is due to them that such philanthropy, such self-sacrifice in the interests of political purity, which terminated with the expenditure of about $30,000, in the unseating of four Conservative members, should be fittingly recognized by a grateful public. Their names should be engraven in lines of light on the scroll of fame, as well as on the record of the "Association."

Mr. Whitney, the political purist, whose cross-eyed political vision can only see corruption in the "Grits," evidently placed himself in the hands of eight or ten practical politicians, themselves wealthy or having a "pull" with wealthy corporations. If these gentlemen had succeeded and brought Mr. Whitney to power, could he refuse them any favour or "graft" they chose to demand? There is nothing in Mr. Whitney's windy career which so emphatically stamps him as an unsafe leader, as this acknowledgment, through his special newspaper organ, that he went hat in hand to a little clique of rich men and delivered himself and any office or legislation he might control, to their tender mercies. If good, honest, up-standing Conservatives are honestly concerned as to the good government of the province and honestly anxious to purify political methods they can readily see that a gentleman who enters into such a compact with the men representing the mammon of unrighteousness—who leagues himself with a scheme to choke the monster of political corruption by cramming money down it's throat—is unfit to be a political leader.

CAN WALK THE SLACK WIRE NOW

Experience of Frank Cromwell, of Galt' with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

He had Kidney Troubles That Threatened to Disable him Permanently—The Great Canadian Kidney Remedy Cured Him Completely.

Galt, Ont., Nov. 27. (Special.). — Mr. Frank Cromwell, the well known slack wire performer who left here recently to fill an important theatrical engagement in Chicago, at one stage of his career had few hopes in deed of ever again appearing on the wire. In relating that experience, he said:—

"I had been troubled with my kidneys; I had a severe headache and my limbs were swollen. I used several medicines but none did me any good, and I had given up all hope of getting well.

"One day a Dodd's Magazine was left at my house and I read it carefully and my case was there. I bought Dodd's Kidney Pills and began to use them. Before I had finished one box I got relief and four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me completely."

That Mr. Cromwell's cure was complete and permanent is shown by his return to a profession that requires strength and steadiness. But if the disease is of the kidneys, or from the kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to root it out entirely.

Later he practiced law at Merrickville, Ont., and twice unsuccessfully contested Leeds County in the Conservative interest for the Commons.

Hon. Mr. Foster Delivers His Speech on Preference.

FARMERS NEED NOT FEAR.

Germany Mad Right Through Over the Preferential Tariff Policy of Canada—Disagreeable Surprise Over the New Zealand Preference—Varying Opinions By Organized Labor Bodies—Canada's Neutrality.

London, Nov. 28.—(C.A.P.)—Hon. George E. Foster made his first London address yesterday. He said it was not possible to have reciprocity between Britain and the colonies on the free trade basis. Canada desired the preference earnestly, and it would attract more emigrants from America. Under the present arrangements 2,000,000 able Britons had been lost to the Empire in less than twenty years. The colonies, as consumers of British goods, compare with other countries as 20 to 1.

The Army Office has issued an order that in future all frozen mutton supplied to the army shall come from the British colonies only.

German Invasion of Britain.

A prominent German manufacturer says that German manufacturers so strongly believe in the success of Mr. Chamberlain that negotiations are already on foot to purchase land in this country so as to be ready to lay down plants in the event of hostile duties being imposed against German goods.

Mr. Wyndham's View.

George Wyndham, speaking at Edinburg yesterday, said in the matter of manufactured articles, he would rather see England the fountain than the sink. He would prefer to do a brisk business with his brothers over the seas and unify the Empire than to exist as islanders on the sufferance of other countries. He said the free fooders were losing ground in their constituencies.

Farmers Need Not Fear.

The Hon. T. A. Brassey, addressing his constituents at Rye yesterday, said that farmers need not be anxious that Chamberlain's policy would raise the cost of agricultural machinery.

The Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress contradicts Chamberlain's assertion that the condemnation of protection is by leaders and not by the rank and file.

Makes Germans Mad.

The Berlin Tages-Zeitung attacks the German Government for its weakness in dealing with the preferential tariff policy of Canada. The paper says Germany must play with the utmost rigor the game against Canada, South Africa and New Zealand. New Zealand's preference has created the most disagreeable surprise throughout Germany. The Zeitung says it is impossible to ascertain the damage done to Germany.

DEFENDS LANSDOWNE.

Premier Balfour Speaks, and Blames Liberal Government For Deliberate Policy of Starving the Army.

London, Nov. 28.—Premier Balfour, presiding at the annual banquet of the United Service Club last night, delivered a speech which was devoted entirely to the reforms instituted by the War Office and which avoided the fiscal question. He said he hoped that the War Office Advisory Committee would quickly evolve a satisfactory result from its investigations. Mr. Balfour defended the Secretary of State for War, who, he said, had to face a more complex problem than that now before the War Minister of any other nation, on account of the vast scope of British territory.

He blamed the Liberal predecessors of the present Government for their deliberate policy of starving the army, which policy had resulted in the difficulties experienced in the South African war, notwithstanding the efforts of the present Government, which did its utmost to bring the army up to an efficient standard. He contended that the army as framed by the Unionist Government operating through Lord Lansdowne and Lord Wolseley, had performed a feat in South Africa that no nation had ever attempted, or had ever carried out, but, he said, no enthusiastic gratitude had been displayed to those who were responsible for this result. If the army in the condition in which it had been left by Lord Rosebery's Administration, said the Premier, had to go through the South African campaign, it would have met with illimitable disasters.

Mr. Balfour said it was not his intention to apologize, because he did not consider that an apology was necessary, but when he found Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Lord Rosebery denouncing the present Government's military policy and thought of their own conduct of military affairs, he "felt his gorge rise." He thought that for very shame the members of the Rosebery Government would have preserved a discreet silence. He did not wish to minimize the magnitude of the miscalculation which had been made in South Africa, but it was a miscalculation of which the whole military profession was alike guilty, if guilty was the word, and it was not due to the maladministration of the War Office.

In regard to the future, Premier Balfour said he did not believe that a large army was required for home defence. The great military problem was defence of the large Indian frontier against the great, and he was glad to think, friendly Empire of Russia. For that reason he emphatically replied to those who wanted Lord Kitchener in London at the head of the army that the Himalayas was where the General ought to be.

In conclusion, the Premier maintained that conscription never had been and never could be used to defend outlying possessions. In the ultimate resort Great Britain must depend upon the free will of a free people.

LIVE STOCK AT CHICAGO.

Dominion Leads in the Number and Quality of Their Animals—Canadian Entries Number 2,175.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Canadians are much in evidence around the big pavilion where the International Live Stock Exposition opens to-day. Hundreds of stalls hold the fine animals from all parts of the Dominion, and the Maple Leaf and the Union Jack are gracefully entwined amid the decorations. While Ontario and Manitoba have the largest number of exhibits from Canada, the Dominion generally is well represented. The sheep of Canada are here in the largest number, but carriage and harness horses, heavy draught animals and blooded cattle are well represented from Canada.

Over 13,000 Exhibits.

In the number of animals and in their high-bred quality, exporters freely admit the Dominion leads. There are over 13,000 exhibits from all parts of the world. W. S. Ferguson of Scotland, who is here to judge the bullocks, goes hence to the Guelph show to act in that capacity. Many of the exhibits here are to be sent to Guelph, and many of the officials from other countries will go with the crowd to Guelph following the close here next week.

Hon. Mr. Dryden, Hon. Sydney Fisher, Mr. Hodson, and other Canadian officials are expected to participate in the opening to-day. Many Governors of states are here and live stock associations from many sections of the world will hold meetings during the Exposition. The Secretary of Agriculture for the United States is here, and said last night that he expected to be in Guelph with several other American officials. He added that his inspection of the Canadian animals filled him with amazement. He knew Canadian breeders were alert, but he did not think they were so far in the lead of the boasted blooded herd books of the States.

The Canadian Entries.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—As representing the Dominion Shorthorn Breeders' Association, there left this morning for the western metropolis President William Linton of Aurora, Robert Miller of Stouffville, Arthur Johnston of Greenwood, W. D. Flatt of Hamilton, W. G. Pettit of Freeman, and Henry Wade, secretary of Toronto.

The grand total of entries on all stock to be shown on the hoof is smaller than in 1902, but the difference is almost all in fat sheep. The total figures of the exhibits as promised for this and last year are:

Let Others Experime n

There is always something new in the way of medical treatment and you are constantly invited to try new-fangled improved remedies. Let others experiment and so risk health and loss of time. It is my experience as a specialist of 30 years. In the book I tell how at last I found a way to reach difficult, deep-seated diseases. Thirty years of earnest, ardent toil in hospitals and at bedsides, made it possible for me to write these books.

The books tell how I perfected my prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. How by scientific experiment I traced out the cause that bring on chronic diseases.

I found invariably where there was a weakness, that the inside nerves were weak.

Where there was a lack of vitality that the vital nerves lacked power.

Not the nerves commonly thought of, but the vital organs nerves. The inside—the invisible nerves.

This was a revelation.

Then my real success began.

Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen—that would vitalize these nerves.

That prescription I called a restorative. It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. After that I did not fail to cure one case in each hundred. In the extremely difficult cases, my failures for five years were one in each forty treated. I found cancer incurable. Cancer is for surgery, not medicine.

Then how to get this prescription to the sick ones everywhere was my thought.

I must announce it in the public press. But, thought I, will they realize the truth of my discovery—The real power of Dr. Shoop's Restorative? Then a way came to me—like a revelation.

"I will offer it to the sick on trial," said I. "Then they will know I am sincere."

I wrote a reliable druggist in each city and village in America. I got their consent to co-operate with me

Now to Any Sick One

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Can Be Taken on Trial.

For a full month I will let you you use it entirely at my risk.

Send no money. Just write me for the book you need. When I send it I will tell you of a druggist near you who will permit the month's trial.

Use the Restorative a month. Then decide. If you say to the druggist, "It did not help me," that will relieve you of any expense whatever. He will bill the cost to me.

This is my way of clearing your mind of all doubt as to what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do.

No matter how prejudiced, you cannot dispute this absolute security I offer.

You cannot resist an offer like this if you are at all sick.

If you have a weakness, write me.

If you can't do things like you used to do them, tell me about it.

Write in confidence. As a physician I will tell you a way to help.

Get my book now—to-day.

SUDDEN DEATH OF DR. HUGH SPEARS.

Former Peterborough Resident Found Died in Bed.

The Toronto News last night contained the sad intelligence of the death of Dr. Hugh Spears, at one time a resident of Peterborough. The article reads:—

"Dr. Hugh Spears, aged 69 years, a well-known figure in the East End, was found dead in his bed, at 15 Hamilton street, this morning. The discovery was made by Alex. Devitt, inspector for the Consumers' Gas Company, who called at the house about half past ten to take the meter registration. The room was full of gas and on investigation it was found that the deadly vapour escaped from a tube which had become disconnected from a tiny gas stove on which the deceased had evidently been boiling a kettle of water. The body was propped up on pillows, and a German grammar rested on a stand in front, as though the deceased had been reading. The supposition is that he fell asleep and did not notice the gas escaping.

"Dr. Spears owned considerable property in the East End. For the past few years he has lived alone. His wife and two daughters reside with the son, Norman Spears, at 238 Bolton avenue. Mrs. Watson, who resides in the rear part of the house in which the body was found, has but recently arrived from Montreal, and knew nothing of her landlord's habits. She remembers that she heard nothing of him all day yesterday.

"Grocer Wright, whose store is at the corner of Hamilton street and Queen street, recollects having noticed the doctor walking up the street yesterday. He appeared to be in the best of health and spirits. The deceased was a duly qualified practitioner but had not practised very much of recent years.

"Policeman Barney took charge of the premises and notified Chief Coroner Johnston. Mr. Norman Spears has notified Undertaker Ingram to take charge of the remains."

Dr. Spears, before removing to Toronto, lived in Ashburnham, and kept a drug store in the Market Building. Before living in Ashburnham, Dr. Spears resided in Peterborough, on Homewood avenue, and at one time was a candidate for a seat on the Board of Education. His family, which besides himself, consisted of his wife and two daughters, Dora and Constance, and one son, Norman, and with whom his mother and sisters have lived recently, was one which during his residence here was highly respected. They removed from here to Toronto about eight or nine years ago, where they have lived ever since.

MASTER OF "EMERALD" FRIEND OF MR. TURNER.

And Mate was Captain on Mr. J. J. Turner's Boat the "Wave Crest."

A despatch in another column of the Examiner gives the information that the steamer "Emerald" is reported to be lost on Lake Ontario. In connection with this report, Mr. J. J. Turner gave some interesting facts. Mr. Turner is well acquainted with the captain of the "Emerald," and John Slight, the mate was master of Mr. Turner's boat, the "Wave Crest," when it was wrecked about this date two years ago, while carrying coal for the same port that the "Emerald" was heading for, and a peculiar coincidence is the fact that the cargo was consigned to the same company, the Toronto Electric Light Company. The "Wave Crest," was lost with her cargo, but the crew fortunately was saved.

CHURCH CENSUS GIVES POPULATION OF 13,799.

Reports of House to House Visitation Committees Received

Shows Adherents of Various Churches in Town—Tabulated Returns to be Presented Later.

The census of the town made by the committees working under the direction of the Peterborough Sunday School Association, for the purpose of ascertaining the church affiliations of all the residents, has been reported, and shows that the total population of Peterborough, including the new Fifth Ward, is 13,799, while the assessors' returns show only 13,588, 211 less than that of the church census.

A meeting of the Sunday school Association, was held last night in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, when the reports of those engaged in the House to House visitation, were received. Rev. J. A. Wilson was in the chair. Two resolutions moved by Rev. J. G. Potter and seconded by Rev. J. P. Wilson, were presented and adopted, as follows:

"That the association places on record its most hearty appreciation of the work done by the visitors in the House to House Visitation, implying, as it did, much sacrifice and patience; that we express our gratitude to the press for the favours shown; to the Y.M.C.A. Board and Secretaries for their great help, and to the town officials for the necessary information and help received.

"That we receive the report of the committee as presented by the president, and in relieving the members from their arduous task desire to thank them most heartily for the very efficient manner in which the many tedious details were carried out, for the magnificent enthusiasm aroused and displayed in the mass meeting of workers, and for the completion of the returns, due to a large extent to the definite and wise arrangements made, and under the direction of the various chairmen, carried out. In relieving the committee we would direct the secretary to give in detail the total Sunday school population, dividing the ages as arranged in the forms.

The summarized results of the canvass, as it gave information of the church inclination of the population, are as follows:

Bethany...	297
Salvation Army.....	188
Baptist.....	806
Methodist.....	3729
Roman Catholic.....	3567
Presbyterian.....	2590
Church of England...	3013
Other denominations...	141
Unclassified.....	129
	14,430
Less outlying districts...	631
	13,799

Outlying districts are as follows:

Douro, east of boundary...	117
Smith, north east of Chemong Road.....	116
Smith, west of Chemong Road	185
Monaghan, west of boundary	106
Monaghan, south of boundary	107

The cards will be handed to the different pastors as soon as the returns have been tabulated.

New Serial.

The Examiner, on Monday begins the publication of one of the best serial stories that has ever appeared in these columns. Probably no novel in recent days has created more criticism than "The Strollers," by Frederick S. Isham, and the readers of the Examiner are extremely fortunate in being able to get this complete story in the columns of this paper. The interest begins right at the commencement of the story, and continues unabated to the end, so that no copies should be missed. Be sure and read the first instalment in the issue of Monday, Nov. 30th.

A RUNAWAY THIS AFTERNOON.

Mr. D. Belleghem Met With Mishap and Horse Returned to Town.

Mr. D. Belleghem left town this afternoon about 2 o'clock, to drive to Warsaw on business, and about three o'clock his horse, covered with perspiration and with the shafts detached from the wagon, dashed down George street and was stopped at the corner of George and Hunter streets. No particulars of how the accident occurred are available at the time of going to press. At Hunter street the horse crashed into the Chemong stage driven by Mr. Dan Whetung, and a passenger, Zacheriah Knott, was injured, the injuries, however, were not serious.

AN OPERA HOUSE FOR PETERBOROUGH.

Why not have a good opera house in Peterborough? There is no earthly reason why we should be lagging behind the times, without one of the invariable accompaniments of advanced civilization considered necessary by every progressive town of 4,000 or 5,000 inhabitants. Yet, perhaps, there is an "earthly" reason. Are our aspirations so earthly that we are content to be shamed every day by the reproach that we are without an opera house? Are there not public spirited men enough in a public-spirited town to bring about a consummation so devoutly to be desired? The first reason we should have an opera house, is because we have none now. All will admit that there is pressing need of a place of amusement and place of meeting, to accommodate a larger gathering than a country school house; we want an opera house worthy of a town—or, as it will be when the fifth ward is added to the town—a city of 14,000 inhabitants. The absence of an opera house is a loss greater than that of mere opportunity for amusement and entertainment. From lack of a respectable building of the kind, no good theatrical or operatic companies, or great musical organizations will think of visiting Peterborough. Therefore the large numbers of our citizens whose tastes run in these directions, and whose means permit it, are compelled to, or at least they do, go to Toronto to get what, with a properly built, equipped and managed Opera House, they could get at home. This is expensive and takes good money out of the town and not only that but those visiting the city under these circumstances are more than likely to spend considerable sums in purchases from the city shops, not only leaving Peterborough money in Toronto, but depriving Peterborough merchants of the profits they would get on sales, they would otherwise make. We should have an Opera House so that we may not have to bear the perpetual reproache of being in this regard unprogressive and behind the times. We have had fun enough made at our expense over our "underground" street railway. The ground of that reproach is likely to pass away soon, and it would be well if at the same time we could remove the reproach of not having, like Lindsay, Port Hope, Belleville and other places far inferior to Peterborough in every respect but this, an excellent Opera House. We can't get a decent theatrical or operatic company to come to Peterborough, we can't have a big meeting of any kind, civil or political, without holding it in a barn or skating rink, and it cannot be denied that it is time something better was provided. Who will be the first public-spirited citizen to take action? With a very little enterprise and co-operation the affair might be easily managed, and we have clever business men amongst us who could easily finance such an enterprise.

ADVANCING PETERBOROUGH.

Now is the time for our Board of Trade and Aldermen to take all steps possible to have a new era of advance for Peterborough date from the November of 1903. With the addition of the Fifth Ward to the town, we now have the material status of a city, and should rise to a new sense of responsibility. This fact becoming known abroad, will give us a better standing in the country. The special industrial edition of the Examiner issued on Tuesday, has been very favourably commented upon by the press, who through it have gained new ideas of the industrial possibilities and importance of the town. It now remains for the Council and the Board of Trade to supplement in a practical way, what has been done in making the advantages of Peterborough as a manufacturing centre take a practical direction; and not only that but spread abroad beyond the limit of circulation of a local journal, the preeminent possibilities that Peterborough possesses of becoming one of the foremost industrial centres of the province. The superior advantages of Peterborough as a centre of industrial operation are emphasized by the fact that some western towns find it necessary to take some such action as this. A guarantee fund of, say, $100,000, is organized, with the understanding that each guarantor is bound to take a certain amount of stock in any new concern seeking location. In Peterborough everything is ready for the really solid and established industry—the cheapest power in the Dominion, the cheapest sites, etc. This fact has its lesson. To strike while the iron is hot, is a venerable, but very apt injunction

From the Firm of Bennet & Wright, Plumbing, Heating and Electrical Contractors, Toronto.

This is to certify that Duncan McGregor has been in our employment steady for about fifteen years and, during that time we have found him to be steady, honest and trustworthy. He has given every satisfaction as a practical mechanic in each of the following branches: Plumbing, steam and gas fitting, also electrical and conduit work, and for some time has had charge of some of our largest contracts with satisfactory results.

From Illsley & Horn, General Contractors, Toronto.

The bearer, Mr. Duncan McGregor, had charge of the electric wiring at the King Edward Hotel Building. The job was a large and complicated one and by the way Mr McGregor handled the work he proved himself a mechanic of more than ordinary ability. We unhesitatingly recommend him as a first-class mechanic to anyone needing his services.

From Mr. J. Ross Robertson, of the Evening Telegram.

Mr. Duncan McGregor, who has been connected with the Bennet & Wright Co. for some years, and who has superintended the work of plumbing and heating for the Bennet & Wright Co., is not only in my opinion, but also that of my architect, a fully competent mechanic. His work, my architect informs me, has been most satisfactory. Anything that has come under my own supervision has been likewise satisfactory.

An Extract Taken from the June Number of Domestic Engineering.

During the recent convention of the Canadian Electrical Association held in the King Edward Hotel, a thorough examination was made of all the electrical work in the hotel, and it was pronounced second to none on the continent. Therefore, great credit is due Mr. Duncan MacGregor, who superintended the entire conduit, electrical and power system for the firm of Bennet & Wright, of this city, who were the contractors for all the different branches of the electrical work in the new hotel.

20,000 PERSONS DRIVEN OUT.

Old Inhabitant Tells of Recent Flood in St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 27.—The flood which has caused so much damage here was the biggest since 1824. The intense cold is causing much distress among the homeless and the dwellers in cellars. In the factory quarter 20,000 persons have been driven into the streets, many of them losing their all. The authorities are doing everything in their power to relieve the sufferers, and there have been few fatalities.

West Indies Urged to Grow Cotton.

London, Nov. 27.—Addressing the West India Committee last night, the Duke of Marlborough strongly advocated the resumption of cotton growing in the West Indies. He pointed out that at the beginning of the eighteenth century the West Indies supplied an immense amount of cotton to the English industry. He saw no reason why the West Indies should not again make a profitable business of the cotton industry.

Her Engines Were Stiff.

Toronto, Nov. 27.—The new lightship Lurcher had a mix-up with the steamer City of Owen Sound yesterday afternoon, by which the latter's stern was rather badly mauled. The engines, which are brand new, and consequently stiff in action, were not as responsive to the engineer as they should have been, and the result was that the Lurcher gave a very good illustration of ramming an enemy's ship. In the opinion of marine men, from $200 to $300 will cover the cost of patching up the damaged parts.

Down by the sea.

Sydney Mines, Nov. 27.—At the Conservative convention here yesterday John McCormack, Mayor of this town, was nominated to contest North Cape Breton and Victoria in the Dominion elections. After the nomination speeches were made by R. L. Borden, M.P.; A. C. Bell, M. P.; C. E Tanner, M.P.P.; Dr. McKay and others.

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick is going to England shortly to appear for the Crown before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the appeal of Prince Edward Island against the reduction of its representation under the Redistribution Act.

THE THIBETAN QUESTION.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 27.—The newspapers here regard the British expedition to Thibet as an attempt to stir up a movement in China, under cover of which the powers will increase their spheres of influence, and they appeal to China not to permit the Empire to be deprived of Russian intervention, which saved it on other occasions.

The Novoe Vremya, in a recent article, declared that if the British succeeded in carrying out their plans, Thibet will be in their hands, as they will always be in a position to threaten Lhassa, and if they gain control of the holy land of Thibet, 500,000,000 of Buddhists will regard Great Britain as being the most powerful country in the world.

AN ACHING BACK.

The Trouble Usually Due to Impure Blood and Clogged Kidneys.

That weary dragging backache is more dangerous than you think. It points straight to deadly kidney trouble. Your kidneys ache because your blood is bad, and filtering through has clogged them with filthy inflammatory poisons. Common purging backache pills can never cure you. They only excite the kidneys; they can't possibly touch the cause of the trouble in the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the only positive cure for aching kidneys. They make new, rich, red blood. They conquer the inflammation and drive out the poison. They cleanse the kidneys and stimulate them to healthy action. Then your backaches vanish. Here is positive proof given by Mr. Geo. Johnson, of Ohio, N. S., who says:—"My son, now eighteen years old, suffered with kidney trouble, from severe pains in the back, and passed sleepless nights. We tried several medicines, but they did not help him. In fact he was growing weaker; his appetite failed, and he could hardly do the usual work that falls to the lot of every boy on a farm. Finally a friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and this was the first medicine that reached the cause of the trouble. He continued to use the pills for a couple of months and I am now happy to say that every symptom of the trouble has disappeared and he is now as strong and healthy as any boy of his age. There can be no doubt that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure kidney trouble, even in its most severe forms."

These pills cure not only kidney trouble but all blood and nerve troubles such as rheumatism, sciatica, partial paralysis, St. Vitus dance, indigestion anaemia, heart trouble, and the many ailments that make woman's life miserable. You can get these pills form any dealer in medicine, or they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WAS HANGED AT 8.02

Frith, Who Was Cool and Collected, Made No Confession.

HOW HE MURDERED BAILEY.

Story of the Cold-Blooded Murder of Jesse 27 at Royal Navy Yards at Esquimalt, B.C.—Told Police Constable That He Killed Bailey—Murderer and Victim Members of Same Masonic Lodge.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 28.—Alfred Frith was hanged at 8.02 yesterday morning by Hangman Radcliffe. The arrangements were carried out in perfect order. Frith was cool and collected. He made no confession.

Story of the Murder.

Alfred James Henry Frith murdered Frederick James Bailey, first-class naval storekeeper at the Royal Navy yard at Esquimalt, on the morning of Saturday, June 27, five months ago. Frith had been discharged from the naval yard, where he had been employed as a subordinate of Bailey, and told friends that he believed Bailey had been undermining him. Frith was preparing to remove with his family to Vancouver, and had asked Bailey for some packing cases. They had gone to the storehouse in the naval yard to get these, and, after putting some outside the door at one end—a door which locked on the inside—they were proceeding toward the other door through an alley of stacked up ropes, stores, etc., Bailey in the lead, when Frith drew a revolver, a heavy bull-dog of 38 calibre and shot Bailey down from behind, the bullet entering at the base of the skull and scattering Bailey's brains. Leaving the corpse in a pool of blood in the storeroom, Frith locked the door, threw the key away and walked down to the naval wharf, where he threw the revolver into the harbor. It sunk in the ooze and search divers failed to recover it. Then the murderer walked out of the yard, and meeting a police constable whom he knew went with him to a saloon in the naval village and they had a drink together.

Told a Police Constable.

Frith said: "I've killed Bailey," but the officer thought he was not serious, and did not believe him. Then, when the constable was about to board a street car for the city, the murderer said "You'd better stay around here, Dan, there may be something interesting. The car was waiting, and as the conductor started to ring the bell, Frith said: "Dan, I might as well tell you now I've killed Bailey."

The constable, Dan Campbell of Esquimalt, left the car, but he was still incredible. "Where's the body," he asked. Frith replied: "You'll find out later on."

Then while Frith went home to his residence near the naval yard the officer went to the yard and enquired if Bailey was missing. It was a holiday in the yard, and there were few men at work. Bailey could not be found, and gradually, it was learned that he had gone toward the store-room with Frith, then a marine saw the body through one of the storeroom windows and the door was forced.

Frith had gone home and eaten breakfast, saying nothing to his wife or family, though at the trial witnesses for the defence stated that he acted strangely, drawing a razor near his child's throat menacingly—he had shaved himself after breakfast—and speaking of wishing he had killed his daughter's young man. He put a flower in his buttonhole took his four-year-old son on his knee and waited. Then, while his wife went on with her routine work the officer came.

An Invitation to Jail.

"Frith," he said, "you'd better take a walk with me." The murderer understood. They went to the city by street car, and Frith made a confession to the superintendent of police, in which he claimed that Bailey had rushed at him with a club after some talk about undermining, and he shot him in self-defence. Examination of the building, though, failed to reveal anything that could be used as a club, and the appearances all went to show that Bailey had been shot down in cold blood.

Both murderer and his victim were Masons, members of the same lodge. Both left wives and families. Throughout the trials and until a few days before his execution Frith acted with remarkable nonchalance, but toward the end felt his position keenly.

Indians Kill Jops.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 28.—The Provincial Police have received word from Rivers Inlet from the Rev. Dr. Whittington of the murder of two Japanese by Indians. The crime is understood to have been the outcome of friction between the Northern Indians and Japanese excited by the latter replacing the Indians in the salmon fisheries.

Sir Robert Boak Resigns.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 28.—Sir Robert Boak, President of the Legislative Council, has tendered to the Government his resignation of that position. Sir Robert's resignation is due to his increasing years and the fact that his duties as President at the approaching session would be too heavy a strain. Sir Robert retains his seat in the Council. He has been President of the Council for 25 years, having been appointed on March 21, 1878. He was first admitted to the Council in February, 1872, so that his public service in the Council has now covered 31 years.

We Paid $100,000

For Liquozone—Yet We Give You a 50c. Bottle Free.

This company, after testing Liquozone for two years in the most difficult germ diseases, paid $100,000 for the American rights. That is by far the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery.

We publish this fact to show you the value of Liquozone. The most worthless product may have great claims made about it; but men don't pay a price like that save for a discovery of remarkable worth to humanity.

Kills Inside Germs.

Liquozone alone kills germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. It is so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. Liquozone destroys at once and forever the cause of any germ disease.

And there is no other way to do it. Any drug that kills germs is a poison to you, and it cannot be taken internally. Liquozone alone can attack a trouble that is caused by inside germs; and it cures diseases which medicine never cured.

Liquid Oxygen.

Liquozone is simply liquid oxygen—no drugs, no alcohol in it. It is the discovery of Pauli, the great German chemist, who spent 20 years on it. His object was to get such an excess of oxygen in staple form into the blood that no germ could live in any membrane or tissue.

Liquozone does that. Oxygen is Nature's greatest tonic—the very source of vitality. Its effects are exhilarating—purifying, vitalizing. Nothing else in the world is so good for you. But germs are vegetables; and this excess of oxygen—the very life of an animal—is deadly to vegetable matter.

We spend 14 days in making each bottle of Liquozone; but the result is liquid oxygen—a product which will cure diseases which no medical skill can cure without it. It is now employed in every great hospital, and indorsed by every medical authority, the world over.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone kills the germs wherever they are, and the results are inevitable. By destroying the cause of the trouble, it invariably ends the disease, and forever.

FEAR FOR 'EMERALD'

Hope For the Schooner and Her Crew is Almost Gone.

HADN'T GHOST OF CHANCE.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—In the opinion of marine men, there seems to be every reason to fear that disaster has overtaken the schooner Emerald, which left Fairhaven three weeks ago last Tuesday, with a cargo of coal for the Toronto Electric Light Company. Those on board were: Capt. McMaster of this city; his son Walter; John Slight, mate, of Port Hope; John Selkirk of Picton, 40 years of age, married, and with two children; John Bohrman of Picton, about 24, unmarried, a Frenchman from Ogdensburg, and the woman cook, Mrs. Wright of St. Catharines. The recent tempestuous weather on the lakes, it is thought, proved too much for the schooner. Harbormaster Postlethwaite said last night that while hope even yet might reasonably be entertained as to the safety of the schooner and those aboard, the chances were otherwise.

A man who has a practical and extensive knowledge of lake craft and lake navigation, said last night that he did not think the "Emerald" had a ghost of a show, unless she had managed to get in behind some island, or in some bay, and was wind bound. But this is improbable for thirteen days have passed since she was reported anywhere. There was a chance that the squall may have driven her so far out of her course, and that she was so much disabled that she might be able to only make slow headway, in case she was trying to make a port. But if she was so badly injured that she was leaking she would not stay afloat very long, owing to her heavy cargo.

Schooner Total Loss.

North Sydney N.S., Nov. 28.—The schooner Annie Allen, Captain Hurrin, went ashore at Brown's Cove, a mile west of Loy Point Light, about midnight Thursday night, and is a total loss. The captain and crew rowed to North Sydney, reaching here about 8 a.m.

ICE WAS FATALLY THIN.

First Fatal Accident of This Skating Season in Canada.

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—The first drowning accident of the skating season here took place in the Ottawa River, just above the inter-provincial bridge, Thursday afternoon, when Emile Beaudin, the 11-year-old son of Napoleon Beaudin, 161 Inkerman, Hull, lost his life. Young Beaudin, with other boys, was skating near the north shore of the river, in the vicinity of Murphy's Wharf, playing hide and seek among a number of barges, which are tied up for the winter there. When he attempted to skate across one of the spaces, where the ice was fatally thin, he plunged through and went to the bottom.

Drowned in Muskoka Lake.

Gravenhurst, Nov. 28.—On Tuesday evening last J. A. Walker, proprietor of the hotel at Island F., together with Morse Gardener and Dan Campbell, son of Capt. Peter Campbell, all of Island F. postoffice, were returning from a shopping expedition in Bracebridge, where they had gone in a gasoline launch. They did not arrive at Island F., and their friends became anxious. A searching party started out, which discovered the small boat towed by the gasoline launch and several lots of goods were found drifting against a small island. No trace of the unfortunate people can be found, and they are supposed to have been upset and drowned.

Fell Through the Ice.

Napanee, Nov. 28.—Luke Sharpe, a farmer about 30 years old, living about ten miles from here, was drowned in Hay Bay yesterday morning, while taking out fish nets. The bay had frozen over, but the ice was unsafe.

Iron Chest Exploded.

Berlin, Nov. 28.—John Hahn, an employe at Shantz's Foundry here, met with a painful accident on Thursday afternoon. He with several other workmen were testing a steam chest which goes to make up a felting machine. They had heavy pressure on at the time when the iron chest exploded, throwing him to the ground, and he received several bad wounds, breaking his leg in three places at the ankle, causing a compound fracture.

Fell Caused Death.

St. Thomas, Nov. 28.—John A. Eakins, one of the oldest residents of Sparta, died yesterday morning, in his 86th year. He fell down stairs on Wednesday last, and was unconscious to the time of his death. He had been in business in Sparta for over 60 years. He leaves to mourn his loss two daughters and three sons.

Lost His Left Foot.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—Stanley Crowe, an employe of the Oshawa Street Railway, was mounting his car, intending to go home, when the motorman, not noticing him, went ahead. Crowe missed his footing and got partially under the car and had his left foot badly mangled. He was sent to the Toronto General Hospital where amputation was found necessary.

Struck By a Train.

St. Thomas, Nov. 28.—The Grand Trunk mail train from the east, which arrived here at 1.20 yesterday afternoon, struck a wagon and team, driven by Henry McQueen, a farmer, near Courtland. The wagon was completely demolished, and McQueen was thrown some distance. He was badly injured, but it is expected he will recover. The horses escaped uninjured.

A WOMAN'S RISK

As a trapeze performer is greater than a man's. She must have a man's courage and a man's muscle to succeed. But she must also work under conditions of which a man knows nothing. Many an accident to women acrobats must be attributed to the sudden weakness to which all women are subject at certain times.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription heals the womanly diseases which cause weakness. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"With pleasure I write to-day in praise of Dr. Pierce and his medicines," says Mrs. Mary Conway, of Appleton, Lawrence Co., Tenn. "Was troubled with female disease; the back of my head hurt me so I could not lie in bed and I would have to sit up, and then I would have such pains from my waist down I could scarcely raise up. My feet and hands would feel almost like ice. Since taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I can sleep well all night. Could hardly drag around before I took your medicine, and now can do my housework and help my husband in the field. Words cannot express the thanks I owe to Dr. Pierce."

The Function

of the kidneys is one of the most important in the human economy. Into everything we eat and drink, no matter how "pure" the food is labeled nor how careful we are, poisons enter. Were we not provided with organs especially designed against these poisons, human life would soon perish. The kidneys are the filters of the blood. They catch the poison in the food and expel it from the system. To do this they must be healthy and vigorous. When they are weak, or overworked, or clogged, or handicapped by disease in even a slight degree, they work imperfectly, or nor at all. The best remedy for disordered kidneys is

YOUNG DESPERADOES.

Peter Niedermeier and Harvey Van Dine Confess Three Months' Career of Crime Which Includes Nine Murders.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Chained wrist to wrist, their hair matted with dried blood, their clothing covered with dust and dirt, two beardless boys, Peter Niedermeier and Harvey Van Dine, sat last night in the presence of Mayor Harrison and Chief of Police O'Neil, calmly confessing to their share in a three-months' career of crime, which has included nine murders, the wounding of five other men and a long series of robberies. The two young bandits, neither of whom is over 21 years of age, together with the companion, Emil Roeski, who is no older, were captured near Liverpool, Ind., yesterday, after a fight in which they battled against policemen, railroad detectives, railroad laborers and farmers. One man was killed, another fatally wounded and all three of the young bandits were wounded, but not seriously.

After the Battle.

The dead:
T. J. Sovea, brakesman on the Pennsylvania Railroad.
Wounded:
James Driscoll, detective on the Chicago police force; shot through abdomen and cannot live but a short time.
Matthew Zimmer, detective on Chicago police force; shot in head and arm.
Neidermeier was wounded in the hand by bird shot. Van Dine was similarly injured, and sustained, in addition, a flesh wound in the left thigh. Roeski was shot in the right hip. His wound is the most serious of any inflicted upon the three men, but was not sufficiently serious to prevent him traveling a long distance after receiving it.

Wanted For Murders.

The three men were wanted by the police for complicity in the murders at the car barns of the Chicago City Railroad Company, on Aug. 30, when two men were killed, a third badly wounded and $2,250 stolen from under the stove. He is badly burned. The loss will be several thousand dollars. Owing to a blinding snowstorm at the time the C.P.R. engineer could not see the semiphore, which was against him.

A CROSSING COLLISION.

G.T.R. and C.P.R. Trains Come Together at London Friday.

London, Nov. 29.—The C.P.R. express and a G.T.R. freight train came together at London Junction, at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. The two tracks cross each other at this point, and both trains were endeavoring to make the crossing at the same time. The C.P.R. engine was derailed, and several freight cars were thrown against the watchman's tower, completely demolishing it. James Pomery, the signal man, was pulled

NEW TAX BOARD.

Hon. J. M. Gibson on Provincial Assessment—Useful Day in Committee.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—The special Legislative Committee on Assessment had a day nearly to themselves yesterday, and canvassed the general bill until all agreed that much real though little visible progress had been made. Discussion centred for some time on the railways and other holders of special franchises.

The chairman, Hon. J. M. Gibson, said he was not as strongly in favor of a Provincial Board of Assessment as he had been, but thought the municipalities could probably attend to the assessment of real estate, railways and special franchises themselves. He cited an instance of special franchises, like power companies, who run along their own right of way. So far as the railways were concerned he would not take away from the municipalities any taxing power they had, but he thought the mileage rate of $5 which railways paid to the province should be increased. He would, however, make a distinction in favor of railways running through unorganized districts. So far as public services, such as the telephone, the municipalities should take a percentage of their gross receipts and distribute the amount among themselves. Special franchises had been taxed already, some under contracts made with the companies, such as the Toronto Railway, and others like the Hamilton Railway had not been taxed because no dividend had been declared on the stock.

Earlier in the day Mr. W. B. Doherty, City Solicitor of St. Thomas, was heard in objection to the bill. He condemned it as too complicated, indirect and roundabout, but could give no very specific evils when pressed by the Chairman.

The committee then adjourned till Wednesday morning next, when the farmers will be heard.

Woodstock Barrister Chosen.

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—Henry A. Little, barrister of Woodstock, Ont., has been appointed a Canadian commissioner to confer with the Russian representatives at a conference to be held in London next February, concerning the claims of nine Canadian sealers for compensation on account of a seizure in Behring Sea some years ago.

Fast Cablegs.

London, Nov. 28.—A cablegram from Australia by the new Pacific cable yesterday reached London in 21 minutes. A message from Christchurch came through in 25 minutes, while a cablegram from Wellington also reached London in 25 minutes.

A State That Breathes.

If ever a state might be said to breathe, that state is California. It has a magnificent lung action, says the Sunset Magazine. Deep and long drawn are the breaths of ocean air taken by the great valleys. And you can almost see this breathing if you will go to the top of any of the hills bordering the bay of San Francisco. In general, air movement or wind is initiated by difference of temperature. Therefore on summer afternoons while the broad ocean lies tranquilly sleeping at a temperature of 55 degrees F. the inland valleys are basking in the same sunlight, but the air a few feet above the ground is quivering at a temperature of 100 degrees F. In other words, there is a temperature gradient of 1 degree per mile, and this brings about a marked movement of the air, the motion being from the cool to the warm locality.

CATARRH.

What This Disease is and How it May Be Cured.

Remedies Applied Externally Only Dry up or Suppress its External Manifestations and Throw it Back on the System to Return When They are Discontinued or Find Vent at Some Other Point Perhaps in More Important and Vital Parts.

Catarrh is a conditional disorder usually manifesting itself in or finding vent through the outside or covering skin or most frequently by way of the inside or lining skin which is called mucous membrane.

When catarrh affects the outside or covering skin it is called "eczema." The location of a spot or patch of eczema or skin catarrh may be at most any point covered by integument, by which name the outside skin is known.

Eczema or catarrh of the integument usually takes a descriptive name from its regional manifestation as palmar eczema if on the palm of the hand, facial eczema if on the face, etc., these names being extended to every part of the body covered by the integument. This is said to be the regional name of eczema.

Eczema also takes a descriptive name from the character of its manifestation. With eczema there is an infiltration of the skin showing the catarrhal nature of the disease, just as in a catarrh of a mucous membrane there is an infiltration of its tissues. This fluid with which the eczematous skin is loaded oozes out and drying on the surface forms scabs, crusts, scales, etc. Thus eczema gets another name known as its "lesional name," from its external appearance, as "squamous eczema" where it seems covered with scales, etc.

Then eczema takes a third descriptive name due to its intensity and duration, as acute for a short but very severe attack; sub acute for a milder attack, and chronic for long-drawn out or lingering eczema, etc.

Thus one little patch of eczema may have several descriptive names attached to it, the regional name, the lesional name and the name descriptive of its intensity. A patch of scaly eczema on the face might be described as "chronic squamous facial eczema," and any other patch at any other location might receive as many but different descriptive names.

So it is with catarrh in a mucous membrane or the inside or lining skin. If in the lining of the nose it is called "nasal catarrh"; if in the lining of some of the pelvic organs of women it is known as "leucorrhea" or more frequently as "female weakness."

Bear in mind that this is all catarrh, a systematic disease, finding vent in either the outside or covering skin (integument) or the inside or lining skin (mucous membrane) and you will not get confused but readily see why one remedy can cure these seemingly separate ailments.

The difference in the integument and catarrh of the mucous membrane is because of a slight difference in their structure.

There is the same infiltration and thickening in both cases but the glandular supply being different there is apt to be more discharge from catarrh of a mucous membrane and owing to the distinct nerve supply of the outside skin much more irritation as burning and itching in eczema or catarrh of the integument.

It is, however, all catarrh; an afflicted woman may have leucorrhea, bronchitis, nasal catarrh and eczema and it would be only systematic catarrh finding vent in all of these ways or four places at once.

If we can cure catarrh in the system we do away with all manifestations of it. Cure it in the system and it needs no vent. There is nothing to come out. This is the correct and scientific way of treating catarrh.

For catarrh of the outside skin (eczema); for catarrh of the mucous membrane of the nose (nasal catarrh) necessitating blowing, hawking, and spitting; for catarrh in the lining of the eustachian tubes causing deafness and head noises; for catarrh of the wind pipes leading to the lungs (bronchitis) giving rise to chronic coughs; for catarrh of the pelvic mucous surfaces, called leucorrhea and female weakness for all kinds of catarrh, lurking in any nook or corner of the system or manifesting itself in any tissue, organ or structure, there is no known remedy that equals Stuart's Catarrh Tablets. An internal remedy, operating through the blood, they search out and cure catarrh in any part or tissue of the body and cure catarrh just as readily in one form as another, therefore they are as applicable and serviceable for eczema and leucorrhea as for bronchitis or for nasal catarrh.

The Rev. L. E. Palmer, Baptist Clergyman, of Caresco, Mich., makes a statement of interest to all catarrh and grip sufferers. He says: Stuart's Catarrh Tablets have certainly been a blessing to me. I have used them freely this fall and winter and have found them a safeguard against La Grippe and Catarrhal troubles from which I had suffered for years. I feel that I can freely and conscientiously recommend them.

Dr. J. J. Reitiger, of Covington, KY., says: I suffered from catarrh in my head and throat every fall, with stoppage of the nose and irritation in the throat affecting my voice and often extending to the stomach causing catarrh of the stomach. I bought a fifty-cent package of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at my druggists, carried them in my pocket and used them faithfully, and the way in which they cleared my head and throat was certainly remarkable. I had no catarrh last winter and spring and consider myself free from any catarrhal trouble.

Being in tablet form they are convenient to carry and take; being sold at all drug stores for 50c a box they are easy to procure and inexpensive; being a systematic remedy, they are equally good for all catarrhs; being of established merit, they are reliable and satisfactory. Use them and you will become their advocate and friend

GAULT'S COMEDIANS COMING.

Will Appear in the Opera House Here This Evening.

Gault's comedians gave an entertainment at the Opera House Friday evening to a large and appreciative audience, and to say they gave complete satisfaction is putting it very mild, as the audience were in a roar from rise to fall of curtain. Special mention may be made of Mr. Gault, who does one of the most clever acts in ledgerdemain ever seen in this place. McDonald and Hoffman, the clever sketch artists, pleased everyone with their wit and songs. Mr. McDonald also made a decided hit with his coon shouting. The Wrights, New York's famous buck and wing dancers, won much applause. Taken all in all these people put up a fine entertainment, and are worthy of the patronage of everyone."—Chatham Banner.

This company will show in Bradburn's Opera House to-night. Prices 10, 15, and 25c. 1d

HOCKEY.

President Kenner has called the annual meeting of the Peterborough Hockey Club for Tuesday night.

Applications for admission to the Trent Valley League continue to be received by the secretary, Mr. E. S. Clarry. The latest club to seek admission is Picton who are anxious to enter the district with Brighton and Colborne. The indications are that the Trent Valley will have the largest membership in its history this season. Clubs throughout this district who have been identified with the league in the past and any clubs wishing to join should correspond with the secretary at once advising him regarding the prospects of the game in their respective districts this winter. Application has also been received from Lakefield.

A WELL RECEIVED COMPANY.

The Peterborough Cold Storage and Provision Company, are meeting with the greatest success in disposing of their stock. This company will be engaged in the export trade of eggs, butter, cheese, poultry, live stock, lambs and hogs, and will carry on the business of cold storage and pork packing.

The trade in these articles is growing in this country in a really wonderful manner, and the farmers are fully alive to the large profits open to them in the export of these articles. They recognize the fact that companies of this character facilitate for them the carrying on of this trade and place them in a position to reap the great benefits of the British market. Consequently the stock is readily subscribed for in the agricultural districts.

So much is this trade growing that there is practically an unlimited field open to the company. The chain of industries that will be carried on by it places it in a most favourable position to meet the different demands and exigencies of the market from time to time. It is hard to imagine in this country any enterprise affording a more profitable investment for those having money to invest in commercial enterprises.

The directors, who are the following gentlemen, Messrs. Jas. Middleton, M. Carton, William Anderson, M.P.P., W. H. Jeffs, M.D., J H McClennan, Col. J. W. Miller, and the Manager, Mr. George Carton, are to be congratulated on the success with which they are meeting.

SECOND SUCCESSFUL "PINAFORE" PRODUCTION

Given Again Last Night to a Large Audience.

The second performance of H.M.S. Pinafore, given in the Opera House last night attracted a very large number of persons although the attendance was not as large as on the preceeding night. The entertainment was quite as good as on Thursday evening, all the players doing themselves much credit, which was noticed by the audience and loudly applauded. Little Buttercup, which was taken by Edith Lount, was perhaps the favourite, but the others did exceedingly well. Walter Sager as Captain Corcoran, was accidentally unnoticed in yesterday's report, on both days he did well and showed ed himself up especially last night acting with an air of almost western freedom. Sir Jos. Porter was as stately as was fitting to his high station in life, while Ralph Rackstraw and Josephine, the captain's daughter captivated the audience, displaying more spirit than on Thursday.

This afternoon a matinee, fairly well attended, was given.

The King's Daughter's are to be congratulated upon the complete success of their entertainment, which was only due in return for the trouble taken over it.

EMERALD WRECKAGE IS WASHED ASHORE

Near Gull Light in Lake Ontario and is Identified by Friends.

Scarcely any Doubt now That the Schooner Emerald has Been Lost—Capt. Van Vlack Last Spoke the Emerald on Sunday, Nov. 15, and was Saluted in Return—Night was Dirty.

Port Hope, Nov. 30.—Capt. Williams of Toronto, and Capt. Woodcock of Fesserton, two lifelong friends of Capt. McMaster of the missing schooner Emerald, came here yesterday from Toronto and searched the shore near this town. About one mile east of Gull lighthouse they found part of the schooner. The shutter of a cabin window and the top of a provision box were positively identified as portions of the missing vessel. The two captains fear she has been lost with all on board.

Last Faint Hope Gone.

Toronto, Nov. 30.—The last faint vestige of hope touching the safety and well being of the schooner Emerald has been destroyed. Yesterday a party composed of marine men, friends of Capt. McMaster, went down to Cobourg by the early morning train to examine the wreckage reported to have been washed ashore at that point, and their inspection sounded the death knell of the hopes that members of the family, and a large number of anxious friends, have been half-heartedly clinging to. Water sodden and defaced by exposure though they were, the fragments of wreckage conveyed their own ominous and fateful significance to eyes familiarized to the sight of the Emerald, and there is no doubt remaining in the minds of any member of the party as to the connection the driftwood bears to the disappearance of the ill-starred schooner.

What had drifted ashore was a portion of a cabin, and the color and graining of the wood are identical with those of the Emerald's cabin. Not only is there the verdict of the Toronto party to strike conviction home, but the testimony of Cobourg and Port Hope mariners who have seen the Emerald gives confirmation. They state positively that the pieces of wreckage formed a portion of the craft's cabin.

Evidence of Schooner's Fate.

The party returned to Toronto in the afternoon, bringing the melancholy evidence of the schooner's fate along with them.

Other local marine men will have the chance to look over the driftwood, but there is scarcely any ray of hope that such further inspection will bode anything but ill.

It is now a fortnight since the Emerald was due at the dock of the Toronto Electric Light Company with her cargo of 700 tons of slack. About a week passed after her non-appearance before any great apprehension was aroused.

Captain Van Vlack, as the last man to discern the missing craft, was plied with questions, but he has little to tell. About 5.30 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 15, a time when dusk was fast merging into night, he dimly perceived the Emerald, about nine miles out from Charlotte, from the steam barge Van Allen. Captain McMaster, a bluff, hearty type of skipper, had set sail from Charlotte before him that afternoon, with a laughing remark about clearing out while the wind was fresh, so as to save tug dues. As the Van Allen passed the Emerald, she saluted, and the latter returned the salute. That is all Captain Van Vlack has to say touching his last sight of the ill-fated craft. It was a dirty night and there was a sufficiently high sea running to jeopardize the Emerald's safety in the event of any mishap to her spars.

RUSSO-JAP WAR ANTICIPATED.

War Correspondents Arranging to Master in Japan or Manchuria.

London, Nov. 30.—The prolongation of the Russo-Japanese negotiations is accompanied by purchases of coal and military preparations on both sides. An outbreak of hostilities is expected at Fleet street, where war correspondents are making arrangements for wintering in Japan or Manchuria. War is also expected by many officers in the two services here, and the belief is commonly expressed that Japan will win on land and sea, owing to her superior fighting power in ships and armies and shorter lines of food supply.

VERDICT ON GODDARD'S DEATH.

De Lothiniere Jury Suggests Inquiry Into Action of I.C.R. Employes.

Quebec, Nov. 30.—The verdict of the coroner's jury which investigated the death of Engineer Goddard in an accident on the I. C. R. at De Lotbiniere station was to the effect that the accident was due to the negligence of the fireman, Charland, who closed the switch for the main line without locking it, and the jury are of opinion that the Federal authorities ought to make a very severe inquiry in order to ascertain the manner by which the employes of the Drummond section of the Intercolonial fulfill their duty.

Another Hunter Killed.

Winnipeg, Nov. 30.—While moose hunting Saturday in Portage la Prairie district, a young farmer named Albert Coates received fatal injuries from a bullet fired by his companion named Moffatt. Coates had just killed a moose, and Moffatt coming up shortly afterwards saw Coates beside the animal and fired.

THE FEELING IN CANADA.

London Express and Mr. Edward Farrer Do Not Agree—Program of New Imperial Labor Federation.

London, Nov. 30.—(C.A.P.)—Edward Farrer, writing in The Contemporary Review, says the French Canadians are dead against the new Imperialism, and 75 per cent. of the English-speaking Canadians will refuse to carry the burden of Imperial armaments.

He quotes Sir Charles Tupper and Mr. Borden in support of the view that both political parties in Canada are not satisfied with the preference to Canadian wheat; but in almost every line affected by the intercolonial preference Canada does a bigger trade with the city of Buffalo than with South Africa and Australia combined.

The theory of the new Imperialism was an unsafe doctrine, for once a colony always a colony. Canada is American now, and after the coming elections in the United States, New England and Minnesota will force the Republic to give better commercial terms to Canada.

He says: "Canada's destiny is independence. We are satisfied with the present existing British connection, but we are not going to allow the new Imperialism to degrade us nor break the faith and traditions of the New World to serve us as mercenaries in the Old."

Canada Favors Chamberlain.

The Daily Express says the strong feeling throughout the Dominion in favor of Mr. Chamberlain is reflected in a striking manner by the principal organs of the Canadian press, and quotes The Mail, Toronto News, Globe, The Montreal Star and Witness and The Ottawa Citizen.

The Times publishes a letter at the request of Mr. Chamberlain from the chairman of the Ebb Vale Iron and Steel Company regarding the dumping of German steel into England. He says the English industry is right up to date, but that the fault lies in the one-sided free trade, and the only remedy for the perilous condition is retaliation and preferential trade with the colonies.

Program of Labor Party.

The Imperial Labor Federation party program includes adult suffrage, payment of members of Parliament the abolition of the House of Lords, the eight-hour working day, the municipalization of the drink traffic, of hospitals and infirmaries, and the nationalization of lands, mines and railways.

The African Review says that Ripponite, the new explosive, called after the Canadian inventor, is eight times more powerful than dynamite.

H. Forster, M.P., Junior Lord of the Treasury, says that the Government is determined not to be rushed out of office, and no vote on the fiscal question will be taken until after the elections.

FOR HIS MISSPENT LIFE.

Daniel McDonald of Toronto Attempts to Commit Suicide.

Toronto, Nov. 30.—Dan McDonald, a tobacconist, at 274 Queen street west, shot himself through the chest, within half an inch of the heart, on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. The tragedy occurred at the Cornell Building, at the rooms of McDonald's friend, Lesslie, to whom he confided his intention and who endeavored to dissuade him. Lesslie left the room for a moment, and during his absence the man shot himself. McDonald had been drinking heavily for the past two weeks, and expressed great remorse for what he called his wasted life. The wounded man was taken the St. Michael's Hospital, where the bullet was removed. McDonald is the son of a once prosperous farmer at Woodville, Ont., who, when he died, left him a good estate.

This morning McDonald is doing as well as can be expected, and is said to stand a chance of recovery.

PROMINENT TOPICS.

The Financial Chronicle, under this heading, says: The Panama question is assuming the form of a great party issue in the United States, upon which the next presidential Election will to some extent depend. Whether justifiably or not, it is not questioned that before the revolution broke out which ended in Panama breaking away from Colombia, the preparations for it were known to the president of the United States, and aid given to the rebels by an United States force. The holders of Panama bonds are now anxious about these securities. As the new Republic was hatched under the auspices of the United States Government, in order to secure territory for its own enterprise, the Isthmus Canal, it is bound in honour to protect the bondholders whose property has been made practically worthless by the recent revolution.

Toronto seems to be having a return of the expansion fever from which it suffered so severely some years ago, and has suffered ever since. Then an enormous area was taken into the city, until there was room enough for a million of inhabitants. Streets were laid out, graded and sewered before there were any signs on them of human habitations. The project now is to extend the civic boundaries along the entire northern limits. This, it is said, "would give the city ample room to grow for twenty years." If we are not mistaken there is room in the present area of Toronto for double its present population. Further, extension ought to be the effect of pressure for more room; it is a wasteful business to have a city's area far in excess of requirements.

The House of Representatives, New Zealand, adopted the preferential trade act on the 18th inst. By this legislation a duty of 20 per cent. is imposed upon the following goods when imported from countries not in the British Empire: bicycle parts, wire rope, sheet, bolt and bar iron, steel rails, printing paper, etc. On a large list of goods the duty is raised when sent from outside the Empire, including potted fish, pianos, paper, paper hangings, etc. These goods are, or might be, exported from Canada. The measure is especially interesting just now as it is New Zealand's method of showing sympathy with Mr Chamberlain's policy.

Friday ended the season of navigation for 1903, so far as the Port of Montreal is concerned. It has been a busy season, but the development of this port is still seriously hampered by the lack of tonnage to bring grain here "en route" to the Atlantic. What the possibilities are may be judged by the volume of wheat shipped to and from this port having, for the first time, exceeded that of New York.

The citizens of St. Thomas will vote on 4th January next, on a by-law to be then submitted under which the city would be authorized to give a bonus of $20,000 to the Pere Marquette Railway, also exemption from all taxes, excepting school taxes, and furnish water to the railway works at a reduced rate. These grants are to be conditional on the railway expending $125,000 on the building and machinery of works to be used for the usual purposes of a railway establishment. If it is ever justifiable for a city to grant a bonus it is in a case like the above, for a railway is a permanent institution, it is not like an individual firm which depends on a bonus for its capital, and which may pull up stakes and move elsewhere at short notice. St. Thomas has had a hard row to hoe in financial matters of late, we shall be glad therefore if the new railway works bring grist to its mill and add to its population and prosperity.

AN OLD PAPER.

(Bobcaygeon Independent.)

An old copy of a newspaper always furnishes most interesting reminiscenses. No 7, vol. 1, of the Peterborough Gazette, published on Friday, September 25th, 1845, is an instance in point. The Gazette was published on the south-east corner of the market square for a company of proprietors, by J. H. Dunsford, and the price in advance was twelve shillings and sixpence, or one pound at the end of the year.

The art of advertising was not nearly so well developed as it is at present. From the advertising columns it is gathered that application will be made at the ensuing session of the Legislature, for an act to incorporate the town of Peterborough.

Mr. S. J. Carver, postmaster, announces that the mail for England via Montreal and Boston will be made up at this office on Friday, Oct. 10th. This was giving the public 15 days notice, which certainly ought not to put the business community in an unduly excited rush.

Mr. C. F. Orde was evidently pulling up stakes, as he advertises pew No. 57 in St. John's church to be sold or let, and Alex. McNeil, auctioneer, advertises a sale of household furniture at Mr. Orde's residence, including bedroom stoves, wire fenders, cut glass decanters, jelly and custard glasses, plated spirit and cruet stands, desert service, guns, gentleman's saddle, perfectly new, and London made, an open carriage on substantial springs, and two excellent cows.

William McBurney was clearly a trifle miffed with Lundy, as he advertised "To contradict part of the nine hundred and ninety-nine lies which have been told I hereby again state that I am willing to leave all matters in dispute between Wm. Lundy and myself to arbitration.

Mr. G. R. Hall had mill sites and water privileges to let with a head and fall of 14 feet and an abundant supply of water at all seasons.

The third annual fair of the Agricultural Society, was announced for October 7th.

A. S. Fraser, Esq., advertises a valuable property for sale in the township of Verulum, beautifully situated on Sturgeon Lake, consisting of 400 acres of excellent land, being the 11th and 12th lots in the 6th concession, 35 acres cleared and laid down in grass, a good cottage, log barn, etc.

Alexander McPhail, apothecary, chemist and druggist, had always a full stock of tar, pitch, rosin, varnishes, etc., and paid cash for Timothy seed, flax seed and beeswax.

As a proof of the rise in value of property in the town it is mentioned "that a little over half an acre of land, situated opposite the market square, was sold on Monday last by the Government agent, F. Ferguson, Esq., for 301 pounds.

The foreign news given by the Gazette was not quite so fresh as the readers of to-day are accustomed to. Its Hong Kong despatch is dated May 21st. The ship Rainbow had arrived in New York with startling news of a conflagration at Canton on May 21st. The steamship Britannia had arrived with the very latest news and brought accounts of the riots in Madrid on Aug. 19th.

In the editorial columns it is evident that Cobourg was the outlet for Peterborough, and that the best of good feeling existed between the two towns. An article speaking of the application of the town for incorporation, and the progress being attained, mentions the immense dam under construction by Mr. Hall, and concludes with, "We shall in time, have our Board of Trade, etc., and our grandchildren on arriving at years of maturity will find Cobourg a Liverpool and Peterborough a Manchester."

That a petition be forwarded to the Ontario Government, asking that Section 24 of the Municipal Amendment Act 1903, be rescinded, as it is the opinion of this council that the majority of the ratepayers throughout this county are in favour of the present system of county government as it is less expensive to the public and more advantageous to the several municipalities in the county than the system proposed by the above mentioned section.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

T. M. HUNTER,
Chairman.

On motion of Coun. Curtis the report was adopted.

The Glow of Health.

When the blood is rich and pure there is a healthful glow to the complexion which speaks of the vigor and vitality of the system. From the Firm of Bennet & Wright, Plumbing, Heating and Electrical Contractors, Toronto.

This is to certify that Duncan McGregor has been in our employment steady for about fifteen years and, during that time we have found him to be steady, honest and trustworthy. He has given every satisfaction as a practical mechanic in each of the following branches: Plumbing, steam and gas fitting, also electrical and conduit work, and for some time has had charge of some of our largest contracts with satisfactory results.

From Illsley & Horn, General Contractors, Toronto.

The bearer, Mr. Duncan McGregor, had charge of the electric wiring at the King Edward Hotel Building. The Job was a large and complicated one and by the way Mr. McGregor handled the work he proved himself a mechanic of more than ordinary ability. We unhesitatingly recommend him as a first-class mechanic to anyone needing his services.

From Mr. J. Ross Robertson, of the Evening Telegram.

Mr. Duncan McGregor, who has been connected with the Bennet & Wright Co. for some years, and who has superintended the work of plumbing and heating for the Bennet & Wright Co., is not only in my opinion, but also that of my architect, a fully competent mechanic. His work, my architect informs me, has been most satisfactory. Anything that has come under my own supervision has been likewise satisfactory.

An Extract Taken from the June Number of Domestic Engineering.

During the recent convention of the Canadian Electrical Association held in the King Edward Hotel, a thorough examination was made of all the electrical work in the hotel, and it was pronounced second to none on the continent. Therefore, great credit is due Mr. Duncan MacGregor, who superintended the entire conduit, electrical and power system for the firm of Bennet & Wright, of this city, who were the contractors for all the different branches of the electrical work in the new hotel.

GAMEY LIBEL SUITS

Barrister McEvoy Suing The London Free Press.

DAMAGES ARE LAID AT $10,000

Mr. McEvoy is Also Suing Mr. R. R. Gamey M.P.P., and Mr. A. W. Wright, Conservative Organizer, Each For Similar Amounts—The Libels Complained of Arise Out of the Famous Gamey Investigation

London, Nov. 30.—Three actions for damages for alleged libel, arising indirectly out of the Gamey investigation, may be heard at an early date in the courts of the land.

The plaintiff in each of these cases is John M. McEvoy, barrister, of this city, who was one of the counsel of the Government in the investigation, and the amount claimed in each instance is $10,000.

The London Free Press Printing Co. is named as the defendant in one of the actions, notice of which has already been served. It is alleged that The Free Press of a recent date contained a telegraphic report, throwing suspicion on Mr. McEvoy, in connection with the disappearance of the leaves of the Crossin cash book at the time of the investigation.

R. R. Gamey, M.P.P., is the defendant in another of the cases, and Alex. Wright, the organizer for the Conservative party in the province, is the defendant in the other. The actions against these parties are based on statements made, in speeches by them, also implicating Mr. McEvoy in the mutilation of the cash book.

VICIOUS ATTEMPT TO KILL.

Quebec Couple Escape Death to See Barn Burned to Ground.

Montreal, Nov. 30.—At the residence of Frank Miller, Roxham, Quebec, a vicious attempt at murder was made about 7 o'clock Saturday morning. A rap was heard at the door and Mr. Miller arose and opened it, when a shot was fired by someone outside. It passed through the panel of the door and lodged in the ceiling. Mr. Miller, who luckily escaped injury, closed the door, locked it and ran upstairs to procure his rifle. In the meantime his wife rushed to the window to watch for the assailants, when she was shot at, but fortunately the shot missed her, though it struck the glass close beside her head. A third shot was fired at Mr. Miller while upstairs, but lodged in the wall. When Mr. Miller returned downstairs he was amazed at seeing his barn on fire. He rushed to the barn, but was too late. All he saved was three horses and one cow. The rest of his large stock perished along with his farm implements and the products of a bountiful harvest.

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK

Food taken into the stomach which from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them they must be starved. It would be just as sensible for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man to starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them. They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good strong healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbance in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the sustenance and maintenance of the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means body and brain get all the good, nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry out his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some new fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a year-old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken limb, which is of course not used during the process of repair.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box and they are the one article that the druggist does not try to sell something in the place of that's "just as good." Their unqualified merit and success and the universal demand for them has placed them within the reach of every one.

Cleveland Will Not Stand.

New York, Nov. 28.—Grover Cleveland has written a letter to the editor of The Brooklyn Eagle, in which he says: "In the midst of it all, and in full view of every consideration presented, I have not for a moment been able, nor am I now able, to open my mind to the thought that in any circumstances or upon any consideration, I should ever again become the nominee of my party for the Presidency. My determination not to do so is unalterable and conclusive."

OUR CATTLE ABROAD

Significant Success at International Show at Chicago.

IN TREATMENT OF CANADIANS

Chicago Boots St. Louis in Justice and Our Live Stock Exhibits Are Welcomed in the Windy City—Not Afraid of Competition There, Even Though We Sweep the Prize List.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 30.—"Canada has been getting all the prize money in sight for sheep and swine, and now from the looks of the International Live Stock Exposition exhibits some capital prizes in draft horses, and other lines will go to the Dominion pure bred stock." This was the significant manner in which General Manager W. E. Skinner sized up the situation here, with reference to Canada's chance to carry away some of the hundreds of big cash prizes offered for the best product of the live stock industry. More than a million and a half of dollars are represented by the fine display of the thirteen thousand separate animals on exhibition here.

Canadian Marvels of Progress.

Continuing, General Manager Skinner said: "The exhibits from Canada are marvels of progress in the live stock industry. Without the Dominion contesting for these premiums we of the States would consider all awards faulty because they had not been won in competition with the blooded stock of the alert men of British North America. To that end the International Live Stock Exposition recognizes the herd and stock books of Canada. It is right. This is no compliment to the Dominion, but merely in line with expert opinion in promoting the breeding of the best blooded animals. Why the World's Fair at St. Louis ignored the Canadian stud and her books I can't say. However, there can be no larger exhibition of live stock on the western hemisphere than is to be seen here. If St. Louis wished to antagonize this great Canadian factor in the development of pure blood animals, the responsibility rests with them. For the International Live Stock Association does not propose to handicap such a lively competitor for all that is best in the live stock business.

Action to Remove Restrictions.

"I may say that we are even taking steps to remove some of the restrictions of the customs of the United States against the entry of Canadian live stock. A free competition is what we want, and what we live stock men prefer to accord Canadian breeders. I may say that I am now in correspondence with Mr. W. D. Flatt, of Hamilton, one of the leading shorthorn breeders of Canada, relative to this very proposition. This is an annual gathering of the foremost breeders of blooded stock from all parts of the world. If Canada can carry off the big money, as she has been doing in the past, we say good. Let every tub stand on its own bottom."

This is the tribute of General Manager Skinner to the modern methods of the Canadian live stock breeders and the industry generally. Incidentally it may be mentioned that Mr. Skinner is the general agent of the Union Stock Yards of Chicago.

Judges From Canada.

The Canadian end of the exhibits is so heavy that the Exposition concedes to the Dominion her share of the judges. In sheep T. H. Shore, of Glanworth, Ont., judges Cotswold; W. H. Beattie, Wilton Grove, Ont., Lincolns; in draft horses, Robert Ness, of Howick, Que., judges Clydesdale, and Robert Graham, of Claremont, Ont., shire and Belgian. This is another feature where the contrast between St. Louis' treatment of Canada and Chicago's shines. Canadians assert that they can't get their proportion of judges in St. Louis. This point is nearly as important as recognition of stud and herd books, which St. Louis arbitrarily refuses to concede. The discussion on this point is being carried on very warmly over the grounds of the International Exposition, with Canadians showing their resentment very freely.

Robert Ness observed yesterday: "The Canadian display here is most satisfactory, especially in sheep and swine. Draft horses, too, we are doing very well in, and there are some teams to be shown from Canada that any breeder might be proud of. The Dominion is receiving a very fair share of attention at this gathering, and here are to be found the big live stock fanciers of the whole world."

Swine and Sheep.

The judging of swine and sheep will commence Monday, and each day the sales of the prize stock will be held. Here is where Canada shines, for it is this inducement of fancy prices for the premium winning stock that induces the men of the Dominion to enter a foreign country and contest for blue ribbons, gold medals and cash prizes.

John Miller of Bulsam, Ont., was the only Canadian farmer's son entered in the stock judging contest of Saturday. This contest was for the sons of farmers residing in the province of Ontario, States of Ohio and Illinois. This is one of the practical features of the big fair, and on this subject is said to rest the future standard of excellence Ontario has paid more attention to this branch than any state in the union and her sons are said to be remarkably proficient. In this instance Miller, her representative, ranked with the first.

Some Canadians Present.

Some of the Canadians present with exhibits are: William Martin, Winnipeg, cattle, Lloyd-Jones Bros., Burford, Ont., sheep; J. G. Hanmer, Brantford, sheep (Shropshire); John Campbell, Woodville (Shropshire); Richard Gibson, Delaware, Ont., sheep (Shropshire); Telfer Bros., Paris, Ont., Southdowns; John Kelly, Shakespeare, Hampshire; R. H. Harding, Thorndale, Dorset; J. C. Ross, Jarvis, Ont., Cotswold; Elgin F. Park, Burgessville, Ont., Cotswold; J. T. Gibson, Denfield, Ont., Lincoln; Graham Walker, Ilderton, Ont., Lincoln; A. W. Smith, Maple Lodge, Leicester; John Orr, Galt, Leicester; Graham Bros., Claremont, Clydesdale; Robert Davies, Toronto, Clydesdale; Hodgkinson & Tisdale, Beaverton, Clydesdales. In several cases these gentlemen have dozens of exhibits in different classes and have more than a car load of animals on the grounds.

Monday and Tuesday some handsome sums will be paid out here for prize stock, much of the bonus money going to Canadians.

CHEESE MARKETS

London, Nov. 28.—The last meeting of the London Dairymen's Exchange for 1903 was held this afternoon at the City Hall. The season has been a satisfactory one for the factories. The prices for the past season were unusually good, owing to the demand in the Old Country for the Canadian cheese. The highest price paid was 12½c; the lowest during the slump in July, 9½c. The sales on the board this season amounted to between 16,000 and 18,000 boxes.

Dominion Coal and Steel Workmen Hand Out an Ultimatum.

Sydney, N.S., Nov. 33.—J. H. Plummer, manager of the Dominion Coal and Steel Co., has rejected the proposals of the Provincial Workmen's Association. The men accepted the general reduction of wages, but asked that the cut of five per cent. be not made in the case of the laborers. The company refused to agree to any proposals. The men have given the manager until Tuesday to reconsider his decision, and if he does not come to terms, then a strike will probably be called. The 5,000 coal miners in Cape Breton may also go out in sympathy with the steel men.

THE CHURCHES.

ALL SAINT'S CHURCH.

The Rector, Rev. W. L. Armitage, preached yesterday, his morning subject being the "Advent," the text being Gal. 5; 5. In the evening he spoke on the "Protestant." The choir at night sang "Seek Ye the Lord," Mr. J. Browne taking the solo.

GEORGE STREET METHODIST.

The pastor preached at both services yesterday. In the morning the text was the first verse of the first Psalm, while in the evening a song service was conducted, the sermon being on "God as a Protector, a Refuge and a Purifier," comparing Him to the mountains. The music at both services was of an especially pleasing nature. The morning anthem was "Thou Who Like the Wind Do'st Blow," while for the offertory "Hark, There Comes a Whisper." The evening music was:—

Anthem, "O Worship the King"
Duet, "Inspirer and Hearer of Prayer ..... Geibel
Mr. Davis and Mr. Mulligan.
Male quartette, "Still, Still, with Thee"
Messrs. Thornton, Maguire, Turner and Smedley.
Solo, quartette and chorus, "Hiding in Thee"
Mr. Davis.
Misses Metheral and Gray, Mr. Mulligan and choir.
Anthem, "The Peace of God" ...Buck
Solo, recit. Miss B. Parnell.

For the evening service the choir was re-arranged, bringing the different parts together, the effect being a decidedly improved ensemble.

ACCIDENT THE CAUSE OF MR. DONNELY'S DEATH

In an Attempt to Avert a Catastrophy, Mr. John Donnelly Himself met Death.

The death of Mr. John Donnelly, which occurred last night about six o'clock, at his late residence, 313 Bethune street, came as a sad surprise to the many friends which a long residence in town has made for him. The cause of Mr. Donnelly's death was an accident which occurred last Tuesday night about ten o'clock, while on duty as watchman on the G.T.R. crossing at Charlotte street. The usual coloured signal lanterns used on the gates were out of order and Mr Donnelly used an ordinary white lantern to warn pedestrians and persons driving of the approach of trains. It was while trying to save life and property that he sustained the accident which caused his own death. An engine, in charge of Engineer Young, was leaving the station coming north, and Mr. Donnelly was at his post, lantern in hand. He saw a single buggy coming west on Charlotte street and approaching the track, and he ran across the three tracks to avert what he knew would be a serious, if not fatal, accident, if the horse were not stopped. He signalled the driver with his lantern, and called to him. Mr. Walter Stocker, who happened near at the time, also called to the engineer. Seeing that the signal to the occupant had not been noticed Mr. Donnelly, as the horse came up, caught the bridle, to stop it if possible, and although he succeeded in stopping the animal, he was thrown down by the shock. One of the shafts struck him in the side, and, but for the quick work of Mr. R. Harding, would probably have been run over by the engine, which he struck in falling, the man in charge of it, however, brought it to a standstill as soon as possible. Mr. Harding, Mr. Stocker, and Mr. Harry Donnelly, son of the deceased, who happened to be near, carried the injured man to his home near by, and he was placed in bed, from which he never again arose. The injuries were not thought to be serious at first, but it was later found that his system had sustained a severe shock, from which he could not recover.

The late Mr. Donnelly was 68 years old, and had been a trusted employee of the G.T.R. for 25 years, enjoying to a more than ordinary degree the confidence and esteem of his employers and the public. He was a member of the Murray street Baptist church, and was a staunch Liberal.

The deceased left to mourn his loss besides Mrs. Donnelly, who is a sister of Mayor Urquhart, of Toronto, two sons and one daughter. The sons are, Duncan, in British Columbia, and Harry foreman of the press room of the Examiner. The daughter is Mrs Buckham, of Chicago, who, with her two children are now here. Mrs. Donnelly is confined to her bed suffering from inflammatory rheumatism.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, from his late residence, 313 Bethuen street, to Little Lake Cemetery.

An inquest on Mr. Donnelly's death will be held and at 1.30 o'clock this afternoon Coroner Dr. Grey together with the jury viewed the remains of Mr. Donnelly and adjourned the inquest until 7.30 O'clock, Tuesday night, in the Council Chamber. The jury is composed as follows, Messrs. C. N. Brown, foreman, F. M. Cobb, W. H. Dayman, W. H. Isaac, D. W. Little, G. A. MacPherson, M. L. Henry, S. A. Oke, John Irwin, D. Menzies, Jas. Mongraw, B. R. Poole, Frank Burdette and J. G. Hardel.

We wish her every success and trust to have her with us again at some future time.

IN MEMORY OF SAINT ANDREW.

Rev. J. G. Potter Preached a Sermon on Scotland's Patron Saint.

Sketch of Life of one of First Disciples of Christ—To-day is the Anniversary of His Death.

In St. Andrew's church yesterday morning, Rev. J. G. Potter preached on the life of St. Andrew. Rev. Principal Gordon was expected to have been present, but late in the week sent word that it would be impossible for him to be present.

To-day is the anniversary of the death of St. Andrew, and in recognition of this fact, the special sermon was preached yesterday morning. The text was St. John, h 40, and 41, "One of the two which heard John speak and followed him was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. He first findeth his own brother, Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messias, which is being interpreted, the Christ."

This, the speaker said, was the initiation of the great work of the redemption of the world, to be carried out by the disciples of Christ, and the inauguration of the reign of righteousness in the life of His followers. The first thought brought out by the speaker was the simplicity of the method made use of by St. Andrew, and the others of the six stalwart first disciples of Christ. They evidenced a tireless enthusiasm in their work of discipling for Christ. This was especially true of St. Andrew, who, although he did not shine as brilliantly as his brother Simon Peter in his after life, was the means of influencing the latter in the first instance to become a follower of Christ. Mr. Potter said that a very useful lesson for young men might be drawn from this circumstance. The lesson was that the influence should be upwards and not downwards. Speaking of St. Andrew he said that (1) his influence led to the personality of Christ, and not to any system; (2) the power of personal influence was a most important one, and should be carefully considered; (3) man had a personal responsibility in the expansion of the Gospel; (4) that Christ only can satisfy the heart's hunger; (5) that when a man knows the power and preciousness of the Christian's life, it is impossible for him to keep his interest from others. The speaker said that no matter what the profession was the character was bound to be revealed by the actions. The Kingdom of God with its power for good, could only be ushered in by the individual work of Christian people; No substitute could be secured to do our work for us. He gave expression to the thought that so long as those who heard the Gospel preached kept quiet they might not be any worse, but they did not get any good themselves, nor did they make the world any better.

Speaking of our duty, he said that it was to bring the world as we find it, near to the Christ who is able to transform the life. This is the guard and guage of Christian belief, and to feel no interest in the welfare of our fellow-men is to be out of harmony with God's plan. Nothing inspires greater courage than the belief in the imperialism of Christ.

At the evening service the choir rendered an exceedingly good musical programme. The anthem was "Hark! Hark! My Soul," by Shelley, with a solo by Miss Pedlar, and quartette by Miss Pedlar, Miss Miller, Mrs. Kerr and Mr. Jackson. Miss Florence Miller, during the offertory, sang very sweetly, Cowen's "The Children's Home. At the close of the service the choir sang the Post Benediction Sentence, "Now, Father, we commend ourselves to Thee this night. Oh, watch us, keep us, and defend us, till break of morning light."

St. Andrew, Scotland's patron saint, the celebration of whose death is being honoured to-day by Scotchmen, the world over, was one of the twelve apostles, and a native of Bethsaida, and a brother of Simon Peter. They became first disciples of John, and were afterwards prominent among the apostles. Very little is related of St. Andrew by any of the evangelists. One of the principal incidents with which his name is connected is feeding the five thousand. Tradition assigns Scythia, Asia Minor, Thrace and elsewhere, as the scene of his ministry. It is supposed that he founded a church in Constantinople, and ordained Stachye as its first Bishop. At length, the tradition says he came to Petrae, a city of Achaia, where Argeas, the pro-consul, enraged at his persistin in preaching, commanded him to join in sacrifices to the heathen gods, and upon the apostle's refusal, he ordered him to be severely scourged, and then crucified. To make his death the more lingering he was fastened to the cross not with nails but with cords. Having hung two days praising God and exhorting his hearers, he is said to have died on the 30th day of November, but in what year is uncertain. The cross is stated to have been of the form called crux decusata, and commonly known as St. Andrew's Cross.

Dear patron saint o' Scotia's Isle,
In honour o' the day
We meet thegither for a while
Wi' blithesome hearts and gae,
Tae talk o' that ault land that lies
(Dae we no ken her worth?)
A few leagues nearer tae the skies
Than any land on earth.

Tae sing her sangs o' luve and glee—
Sangs sweet as lilt o' bird—
Till tears come stealing tae the e'e,
And lilka heart is stirred.
Till mem'ry brings frae oot the mist
Fu' mony a tender scene—
The lichts o' hame, the cheeks we've kissed,
The dance upon the green,

The glint o' sunshine on the braes,
The lochs wi' murmur glad,
The sturdy pines, the purple haze
O' hills wi' heather clad,
Till seems tae ring throughout the glen
The pibroch's music clear—
We're a' John Tamson's bairn's, ye ken
This ane nicht o' the year.

St Andrew's day! St. Andrew's day!
Sae lang's the sun doth shine
Shall loyal Scots their homage pay
For the sake o' auld lang syne.
—Jean Blewett.

RECEIVED A PARCHMENT FOR SAVING HUMAN LIFE.

Mr. Fowler's Brave Act Recognised by the Royal Canadian Humane Society.

At a meeting of the Farmers' Institute, which was held in the County Council Chamber on Saturday afternoon, Mr. Edward M. Elliott, reeve of Smith Township, and president of the Farmers' Institute, presented Mr. Fowler of the same township, with a parchment awarded him for bravery by the Royal Canadian Humane Society. In June last, it will be remembered, for the incident appeared in the Examiner at the time, while Kenneth Poole, the young son of Dr. Poole, V.S., together with a number of other children, were bathing at Chemong Lake, the former, who was on a log, floated far out beyond his depth. When the other children saw his peril they ran to Mr. Fowler's house, a distance of fully 400 yards, and made him aware of the boy's peril. Mr. Fowler, although unable to swim, immediately waded into the lake, and with the help of a log, reached the now terrified child and brought him to the shore.

When making the presentation Mr. Elliott dwelt on the bravery of the act, relating the circumstances to the audiences present, who loudly applauded Mr. Fowler as he returned to his seat, with the coveted parchment in his hand.

Mayor Roger also spoke, beginning by stating that he thought it an excellent plan that such acts of heroism were rewarded in public. He was pleased to be present on such a happy occasion, and congratulated Mr. Fowler on his bravery, which he, without realizing that he was imperilling his own life, displayed in rescuing a child with all his future before him.

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

Several Interesting Meetings Last Week.

GOOD MONEY IN PARK.

First Meetings Were Held at Lakefield on Friday.

Were Well Attended—The Addresses Were Much Enjoyed—Synopsis of the Speakers' Remarks.

The opening meetings of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute were held at Lakefield Friday with afternoon and evening sessions. The meetings were well attended and were thoroughly enjoyed. On Saturday afternoon a meeting was held in the County Council Chamber in the Court House, which, although not very extensively attended, was very interesting, it being the occasion of a presentation to Mr. Fowler of a parchment for conspicuous bravery. In the evening a largely attended meeting was held in North Monaghan when three very interesting addresses were read.

The meetings have all been very beneficial and the Institute is doing a great deal of good for the farming community of Peterborough county.

THE AFTERNOON MEETING

The president, Mr. Ed. Elliott, opened the meeting with a short address. Although those present were not large numerically he was pleased to see them Mr. Elliott concluded by introducing Mr. Mason, of Staffordville, to the audience. The subject of Mr. Mason's address was "The Care and Feed of Dairy Cattle." He began by dwelling on the importance of that question. Continuing, he said that Canada was a great exporting country and exported a very large quantity of cheese to Great Britain, having now 78 per cent. of the trade. The value of the cheese exportation for this season, that is the year ending June 30th last, was $25,000,000. The last two years have been exceptionally good for cheese and he said that the butter had visibly decreased in quality. The value of the dairy industry was very great and it is recognized by the farmers generally. The first thing that has to be decided when one is going into dairy farming is to select dairy cattle. For a cheese factory district he recommended Ayrshires and Holsteins. Some farmers essayed to raise steers from dairy cattle. He did not think this was ever profitable. The man who wants to look after the "beef" end of the business should raise from shorthorned blood. One of the most important things, he said, was the selection of a sire, which should be traced back as far as possible through good breeders, for the better the sire the better the offspring. A bull for dairy purposes should be of a masculine character and should show dairy form. Some portions of this county, he said, practised too much the use of young immature animals. This, he thought, had done a lot to degenerate the quality of beefing steers. Notwithstanding all that has been said on this subject there are too many poor cows in the country. Every man, he thought, had at least one or two bad cows. Too much time was spent in weighing the individual milk twice a day. He deemed once a week sufficient, saying that it would give an approximate value of each cow. Thus the worse cows could be weeded out with less trouble. The speaker dwelt at some length on the feeding of a calf. He said that it should be fed on the best of milk at blood heat. When older a change should be gradually made to skimmed milk. A sudden change is apt to effect the digestive organs of the young animal. At an early age the calf begins to nibble at roots, while when older a little hay should be given. Thus when the cheese factory opens about May 1st the calf has got to be able to eat hard stuffs. Some claim that the calves should be kept in the box stalls for the first summer. He did not think it a good policy in raising a dairy cow; it might be better with beef cattle. During the very hot portions of the day the calves should be boxed, but when cool, should again be turned out. During the winter, clover hay, bran, oats will see them through. A great deal had been said in the agricultural press that the people of this country needed improved farm buildings. Most of the farmers of this province at least had good accommodation for stock but what was badly needed was a sufficient supply of good water. Another necessity for the cow was salt. This should not be given in excess and when the cow refuses to take it it should never be forced to do so. It should always be remembered that dairy stock as well as any other kind, should always be treated humanely. As to feeding the cow, he thought a good grass pasture with water was the best. For the summer months in the sections where droughts were experienced and good pasture not always available, silage was a good food, as was also corn. However with such food there is a tendency to deterioration of the milk. Mr. Mason concluded by showing the absolute necessity for care in both treatment and feeding for the success of the dairy cow.

The second speaker was Mr. Newman, of Ottawa, who spoke on the sowing of the very best grain for seed and the selection of high class grain. He spoke of experiments conducted at the Guelph agricultural college in which he had a hand. Individual seeds were selected minutely examined and the large, plump seeds gave the best results. Often, however, the same seed will not remain good on one farm. In the case of animals, the best are selected, yet year after year Canadian farmers unwittingly sow poor seed. Grain should always be selected from the best. An association called the Macdonald Seed Sowers Association had been formed which would pedigree the different seeds so that a farmer might get the best grain possible. However, the standard should be carefully kept up which should be done by systematic rooting of all weeds and spurious roots. In conclusion he said that good seed was the foundation of good farming and by this systematic selection of seed the better grain will finally be obtained.

The third contributor of the afternoon was Mr. Hughes-Charles. He began his remarks by stating that he took an interest in farming because Canada was essentially a farming country. The speaker said he had not chosen any special subject but would make a few general remarks. About cattle he pointed out the necessity of the cleanliness and lighting of farm outbuildings. Continuing, he said that the cattle and stock was generally too deficient as compared with the rest of Ontario. There was too much dairying in the district. The milking cow, when at a certain age became valueless. He believed that the fall fairs were very beneficial to the province at large, as there was keen competition and consequently preparatory care taken in the breeding of the stock. However most of the small fall fairs could not offer good prizes. This year the Peterborough exhibition had given prizes for stock and other things such as could not be offered by any other 2-day fair. He wanted the support of the farmers. Continuing, the speaker said that at a fall fair good weather was almost essential. Wet weather withheld spectators. For this reason he believed fairs should be four or five days in duration because it would not rain for more than two days of the five days. Farmers, he said, should be ambitious and be anxious to attend these fall fairs, for such competition is the only way to improve the quality of the country's stock.

THE EVENING'S PROGRAMME.

There was a large attendance at the evening meeting, when an excellent musical programme was furnished. The The president opened the evening with a few initiatory remarks. The programme was opened with a selection by the Lakefield orchestra, which was enthusiastically applauded by the audience. Mr. Mason was the first to deliver an address, he taking as his subject "The Changing Conditions in Canadian Agriculture." Mr. Mason, who comes from Western Ontario, said that out there some had a mistaken idea of the agricultural condition of eastern Ontario. The farming community of the west is comparatively unaware of the conditions in the east. Canada, as a new land with its manufacturing and mining industries practically undeveloped, depended to a very great extent on the agricultural prosperity. Agricultural history can be said to be divided into three parts. First the pioneer period, when the untilled lands were got under the power of the plow. The second stage was the grain growing stage when the farmer began to get into very affluent circumstances. The third stage was a change to a manufacturing period with regard to agriculture. Transportation became much cheaper during this period. This cheapening of transportation opens up markets which previously could not be reached. There has been a great change of late in the Argentine Republic of South America and to-day that country is taking a foremost place in the markets of the world. This time of the year is the harvesting season in Argentina and now the New York and Chicago wheat market rises or falls according to reports regarding the state of the harvest. The speaker dwelt with the continually increasing emigration from the States to Canada. He showed by statistics that there was room for improvement in Canadian agriculture. He said that the Canadian markets had greatly improved. There was now a great demand for anything made or grown in this country. The Northwest would soon demand eastern manufactures; thus before long we shall have a larger artizan class than ever before. Mr. Mason then showed that there was not the prosperity of the grain growing farmer as some years ago. This, he thought, was due to the fact that farm help was very scarce. He thought some portions would have to adopt western labour conditions and use more horse power than manual labour. However that had yet to be seen.

Miss Rutherford followed with a vocal selection which was well received.

Mr L. H. Newman followed with an interesting address on weeds, many of which were not generally known as such. Weeds, he said, were on the increase. A sufficient reason might be given in stating that a common thistle gave over 42,000 seeds. Very few of these tares were Canadian, most being brought from other countries. He next emphasized the importance of knowing the weeds by name and sight. He followed by an enumeration of the more lately introduced weeds. They are brought by natural and artificial ways; that is to say by the wind, birds, water and threshing machines, railways and commercial seeds. Weeds should not be allowed to grow about fences as is usually done. To eradicate the noxious plants a great help is thoroughly plowing the weedy places and growing clover which would smother such plants.

Miss Montgomery followed with a vocal selection. She has a good voice, which, if cultivated, would make her a good singer. The audience recalled her and Miss Montgomery graciously responded. This was followed by a dialogue in which Miss Rutherford and Miss Watson took part.

The next address was given by Miss Rose spoke on "A Rolling Stone Gathers no Moss." She said that the man or woman who stayed in one place did not get along. We, must, said Miss Rose, go along with the run of humanity. Some people who, like a stone, remain in one place, are generally stupid. Everyone tries to get away from home occasionally. It is necessary, for by it new ideas and knowledge are gained. The road to success was open to all who took it, but it could not be reached by staying at home. Everyone should feel contented but not too much so as it led to laziness. Miss Rose concluded with a humorous story which brought down the house. Mr. G. B. Hilliard followed with a humorous reading which received deserving applause. The next item on the programme was a vocal solo by Miss Doldge. This was followed by a violin solo by Miss Girvin whose selection was well received.

Mr. D. Hughes Charles made a very witty address on the condition of the Canadian farmer. Continuing, he dwelt upon the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition which, he said, had a great future before it if the management were backed up by the farmers. He proposed a great amalgamation of the district fairs into one large exhibition to be held in the "Electric City."

The programme concluded with a selection given by the orchestra, the evening being brought to a close with the National Anthem.

The Farmers' Institute meeting which was held in the County Council Chamber on Saturday afternoon was fairly well attended and was presided over by the President, Mr. Ed. Elliott, who opened the meeting with a few appropriate remarks.

Mr. Mason of Staffordville, was the first speaker, his subject being "The Feed and Care of the Dairy Herd." He began by speaking at some length on the value of the dairy exports of Canada. Continuing he dealth first of all with the feed and care of the dairy calf, following with a wider subject in the feed and care of the dairy herd.

Miss Rose, of the Guelph Agricultural Dairy Staff, was the next speaker, her address being on "Good Butter Making." The next best thing to good bread, she began, is good butter. The latter could immediately be distinguished by a decided aroma which it has, and, she said, an expert butter judge could tell good butter before it had reached his mouth by detecting this peculiar aroma. Speaking of butter judging, Miss Rose, suggested that no man who smoked should be allowed to act in that capicity at a Fall Fair, as tobacco to a certain extent killed both the smell and taste and consequently a smoker could not give good results in judging butter. The main thing in good butter is the flavour, for which in judging out of 100 points no less than 45 are given to it alone. She believed the greatest defect in butter is the butter-

Canadians Who Were Honored With Decorations on King's Birthday, Nov. 9, 1903—Sketches of Their Careers.

Louis Felix Pinault was born at Rimouski November 6, 1852. His father, a farmer, realized the value of a good education, and made many sacrifices to secure it for his children. Col. Pinault, after a course at the seminary of Rimouski, graduated B.A., and won the Prince of Wales prize. Having studied law at Laval, he secured the degree of LL.B., and was called to the Bar in 1879, and soon built up a lucrative practice. He joined the 9th Battalion, and had risen to the position of Major, when appointed to the present position, Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence. He was also M.P.P. for Matane from 1890. He was created Colonel on November 1, 1900.

Louis Philippe Hebert was born at Ste. Sophie d'Halifax, Megantic county, Quebec, January 27, 1850. Educated at the local schools, he became at fourteen clerk in a county store, and in 1871 went to Massachusetts, where he worked on a farm. He had always an inclination for wood-carving, and, having gone to Montreal, obtained a prize at the Provincial Exhibition of 1873 for a small bust in wood. Soon afterwards he was taken into the studio of N. Bourassa, sculptor and painter, and, after working there for five years, studied for a year in Paris. On his return he entered on his profession until 1886, when he removed to Paris, where he has since maintained a studio. Among his works are the statues of De Salaberry at Chambly, Sir George E. Cartier and Sir John Macdonald at Ottawa, Maisonneuve and Chenier in Montreal, and Champlain at Quebec. He has been a member of the R.C.A. since 1886.

Dr. Robert Bell, Director of the Geological Survey of Canada, was born in the township of Toronto in 1841. He was educated at the Grammar School, L'Orignal, Que., and McGill University. In 1857 he joined the Canadian Geological Survey. From 1863 for five sessions he was professor of chemistry and sciences in Queen's University. He was medical officer, naturalist and geologist in the Government expeditions to Hudson Bay in 1884, 1885 and 1897. Morgan says of him that during his connection with the Geological Survey of Canada he has had opportunities of making more extensive surveys and explorations throughout the Dominion than has fallen to the lot of any other man. These include the Mackenzie River region, the shores and country around Hudson Bay, the Labrador Peninsula, and part of Baffin Land. In 1895-96 he found in the territory southeast of James Bay an immense region of good soil and timber, and surveyed a great river all the way from the height of land to James Bay, now known as Bell River. He has been the recipient of many honors from various learned bodies and educational institutions.

J. George Hodgins, LL.D., is historiographer of the Ontario Department of Education, which department he entered as chief clerk in 1844, becoming Secretary of the Provincial Board of Education, 1846; Deputy Superintendent of Education, under the late Dr. Ryerson, in 1855, and Deputy Minister in 1876, a post which he held until 1889. He has thus been for sixty years, prominently connected with Ontario education. He was one of the pioneers in schoolbook literature in Canada, and is still engaged in important work on the historical side of education in this Province. He was also chief editor of the life of Dr. Ryerson, a graduate of Victoria University, an LL.D. of Toronto (1870), a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society (1861). Dr. Hodgins has also the French decoration of the Palm Leaf (1879). He also holds a confederation medal in acknowledgement of his services as a public officer and man of letters. Dr. Hodgins was born in Dublin, August 12, 1821. He is an elder brother of Judge Thos. Hodgins.

Lieut.-Col. Henry Robert Smith, Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Commons, was born at Kingston, Dec. 30, 1833. Educated at the Kingston Grammar School, he entered the public service May, 1859, and became Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms in 1872, and Sergeant-at-Arms, Jan. 11, 1892.

Lieut.-Col. Oddities of Doukhobors.

The Doukhobors have resumed their fanatical customs in the Yorkton district in Manitoba, where they are located in colonies, says a Winnipeg special. Six have recently been before the courts charged with having willfully set fire to a binder and a quantity of grain some weeks ago.

The prisoners were asked to select one of their number who would give evidence for them all. The prisoner chosen was the man designated during the last pilgrimage as "John the Baptist." He gave his evidence in the following words:

"The wheat we are accused of rolling down and injuring was ours, as well as the other Doukhobors. We helped sow it, and it was sown without animal labor; therefore it was sown in accordance with the new life. The binder also belongs to us as much as to the brethren, and we burned it to show the new life to the world. We think that everything invented by man is evil, because these inventions injure both man and beasts."

Army to Australia.

London, Nov. 27.—The Sydney, N. S. W., correspondent of The Daily Mail says that with a view to attracting population to West Australia the authorities have arranged with the Salvation Army to send emigrants, the Government undertaking to defray the passages and to pay the Army a substantial bonus for every immigrant settling there during the next six months.

It stops that tickling in the throat, is pleasant to take and soothing and healing to the lungs. Mr. E. Bishop Brand, the well-known Galt gardener, writes:—I had a very severe attack of sore throat and tightness in the chest. Some times when I wanted to cough and could not I would almost choke to death. My wife got me a bottle of DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP, and to my surprise I found speedy relief. I would not be without it if it cost $1.00 a bottle, and I can recommend it to everyone bothered with a cough or cold.

HOUSES OF SAND.

New Process Will Erect Houses as Durable as Granite—Perfected by an Englishman.

Houses built of sand, but as substantial and durable as granite, have been made possible by a process just perfected in England by Mr. L. P. Ford of Gresford.

Mr. Ford is well known in South Africa, where before the Boer war he founded Fordsburg, a suburb of Johannesburg, and also the Johannesburg waterworks and the Pretoria Electric Lighting Company.

A bed of clean sand and ground quicklime are all the materials needed for the new artificial rock. The ingredients are mixed in proper proportions mechanically and forced by a screw into a mold formed of a very strong steel cylinder.

After the mold is filled it is placed in a box, and the air it contains is sucked out by an air pump. Hot water is then admitted. The water rushes into every minute space and sets the particles of lime to slacking. The lime swells and causes a great pressure in the mold, while at the same time an intense heat is produced.

Under the influence of the heat and pressure the sand and lime are molded into a rock which has 60 per cent. as much strength as the hardest granite. It is ready for use in eight hours.

The rock is of the same composition as the old Roman cement, the most durable of building materials. The secret of making this Roman cement has been lost for ages.

The new building stone costs but 22 cents a cubic foot. The secret of Mr. Ford's success is said to lie in his use of a cylindrical mold. Others who tried to make silicate of lime building stone used square molds. They did not get an even distribution of the internal and external strains, and the stone produced was full of cracks.

Origin of Life Insurance.

"I don't have to have my life insured," said the business man to the agent, "but I do want to know how life insurance originated. Can you tell me?" "I can," the agent answered. "It originated in 1706 in London. In that year there was formed the first life insurance company. It was called the Amicable Society For a Perpetual Assurance Office. It was a mutual benefit concern. Each member, without reference to age, paid a fixed admission fee and a fixed annual charge per share on from one to three shares, and at the end of the year a portion of the fund accumulated was divided among the heirs of those who had died in accordance with the number of shares each dead person had held. Out of this company, with its crude and imperfect methods, life insurance as it exists today has grown."

A SONG FOR CANADA.

Oh! mother, men and women, for the nation bids you forth!
Your Canada demands it; yes, her children, are you true,
Are you faithful to the Empire and the old Red, White and Blue?
Some are boasting as true Briton ever wears the Maple Leaf;
Some would set the hardy Beaver on to fight his Lion Chief.
Let them hear our proud defiance—they may dry Niagara's flood
Ere our land forgets the Name for which our fathers shed their blood!

Let them say there's not a Briton in our dear Canadian home,
But the bond of blood is stronger than the laurier of foam;
A thousand leagues may separate—a thousand seas and lies will bind
Till the brotherhood of Britain is the glory of mankind.
We cannot and we will not have our Canada disclaim
Her portion in the Empire, in the Flag, the Roll of Fame;
Britain leads among the nations, she will set the people free,
She will march to man's redemption, but she needs the Maple Tree.

They would pilfer his allegiance from the strong Canadian heart,
And bargain for his heritage with diplomatic art;
They would hew our stately Maple into splinters in their spite
Till they left no branch in Canada to bear her emblem bright.
But her forests are not wider than the race of patriot sons
That will bless her, every acre, where grass grows or water runs,
That will love her, live and work for her, and die for her at last,
And sleep beneath her maples with the heroes of the past.

Let folly fill the shallow heart that lays his birthright down;
Confusion take the hollow heart dis'oyal to the Crown!
There's no excuse of vicious king or monarch led astray
To justify the traitor to the world's best hope to-day.
For England, mother England, still fights hard for right to be,
Her glittering Crown the symbol yet of valiant men and free.
Look, fellow Britons, look and judge what alien banners are,
For a brighter flag than England's you must seek another star!

Then rise and reign, Dominion fair, between the world-wide seas;
White Peace her mighty pinion spreads to cherish your decrees;
Strong as the North your sons go forth with Freedom for their dower,
To guard from blame your name and fame, to build you like a tower.
No destiny will daunt them, no adversity dismay,
The King of Kings will grant them wisdom with the power they sway;
And while their pride to Britain turns—the Empire of the Free—
For Canada their loyal love, their heart's desire shall be!

DRUNKENNESS AMONG INDIANS.

Dominion Naturalist Tells of Whiskey's Influence Among the Aborigines.

Mr. J. M. Macoun of the Canadian Geological Survey, who has returned to Ottawa from a summer's exploring trip to the Peace River district in the Northwest, makes some interesting comments on the demoralizing influences of liquor among the Indians and halfbreeds in the country, around Lesser Slave Lake, and to the north of that region. Mr. Macoun has traveled very extensively in Northern Canada from Labrador to Alaska, but nowhere, he says, has he noted such drunkenness as prevails in the districts referred to. The system of permits common to the Territories prevails there, and though infringements of the regulations are almost, if not quite impossible, owing to the vigilance of the Mounted Police, the system permits each resident to bring into the country 20 gallons of spirits each year, and few of them fail to avail themselves of this privilege. It is not, however, altogether, or even chiefly, to the permit system that Mr. Macoun attributes the drunkenness so apparent to everyone who visits the country. It is to the sale of essences and perfumes made specially for the northern trade and which are really little more than pure alcohol flavored so as to allow of their being labeled "essence of ginger," "Florida water," "peppermint," "eau de cologne," etc.

Clerks at some of the trading posts find it necessary to frequently refuse liquor to drunken Indians, but the latter are generally able to procure it through some intermediary so long as the money is forthcoming.

The missionaries and the police do all in their power to discourage this trade, but have about given up the fight as being hopeless unless the importation and sale of all essences and extracts containing alcohol be prohibited. An obvious remedy lies in the hands of the Hudson Bay Company and those who are trading in opposition to that company. They have simply to agree to sell no more alcohol and the thing is ended, but there is not a single trading post in the whole Peace River region where this has been done. The taste for alcohol has taken such a hold on the natives that at any sacrifice they will trade with the man who will satisfy the craving, and the traders have not the courage or lack the desire to put an end to a business that has already destroyed the natives morally, and will, unless stopped soon, render them physically unfitted to hunt successfully.

No language, says Mr. Macoun, could exaggerate the demoralizing influence upon the natives of the present condition of affairs. The missionaries and others who have the interests of the native at heart are in despair and all their efforts to improve the morals of the Indians and half-breeds, and teach them habits of thrift and industry, will count for nothing, unless something is done to make it more difficult, if not altogether impossible, for natives to procure drink.

THE STROLLERS

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM,

Author of "Under the Rose"

Copyright, 1902, by THE BOWEN-MERRILL COMPANY

PROLOGUE.

OLD Drury Lane rang with applause for the performance of Mme. Carew. Of British-French parentage, she was a recognized peer among the favorite actresses on the English stage and a woman whose attractions of face and manner were of a high order.

The bill for the evening under consideration was "Adrienne Lecouvreur," and in no part had the actress been more natural and effective. Her triumph was secure.

The player had every stimulus to appear at her best on this particular evening, for the audience, frivolous, volatile, taking its character from the loose, weak king, was unusually complaisant through the presence of the first gentleman of Europe. As the last of the Georges declared himself in good humor, so every toady grinned and every courtly flunky swore in the billingsgate of that profanely eloquent period that the actress was a "monstrous fine woman."

With rare discretion and spirit had the latter played, a queenly figure in that ribald, gross gathering. She had reached the scene where the actress turns upon her tormentors, those noble ladies of rank and position, and launches the curse of a soul lashed beyond endurance. Sweeping forward to confront her adversaries, about to face them, her troubled glance chanced to fall into one of the side boxes where were seated a certain foreign marquis, somewhat notorious, and a lady of insolent, patrician bearing. The anticipated action was arrested, for at sight of the nobleman and his companion Adrienne swayed slightly, as though moved by a new overpowering emotion. Only for a moment she hesitated; then, fixing her blazing eyes upon the two and lifting her arm threateningly, the bitter words flowed from her lips with an earnestness that thrilled the audience. A pallor overspread the face of the marquis, while the lady drew back behind the draperies almost as if in fear. At the conclusion of that effort the walls echoed with plaudits. The actress stood as in a trance. Her face was pale, her figure seemed changed to stone, and the light went out of her eyes.

She fainted and fell, and the curtain descended quickly. The woman by the marquis' side, who had trembled at first, now forced a laugh as she said: "The trollop can curse! Let us go." Together they left the box, the marquis regretting the temerity which had led him to bring his companion to the theater. He, too, was secretly unnerved, and when they entered the carriage they seated themselves as far apart as possible, the marquis detesting the lady and she for her part disliking him just as cordially.

Next day the critics referred to the scene with glowing words, while in the coffee houses they discussed the proposition, Should an actress feel the emotion she portrays? With a cynical smile, the marquis read the different accounts of the performance when he and his companion found themselves in the old stagecoach en route for Brighton. He felt no regret for his action—had not the Prince of Wales taught the gentlemen of his kingdom that it was fashionable to desert actresses? Had he not left the "divine Perdita" to languish after snubbing her right royally in Hyde park?

that the ties of affection which bound these two travelers together on life's road were neither strong nor enduring. Yet they were traveling together; their way was the same; their destination—but that belongs to the future. The marquis had been relieved in his mind after a consultation with a distinguished barrister, and, moreover, was pleased at the prospect of leaving this island of fogs for the sunny shores of France. The times were exciting; the country on the verge of proposed electoral reforms. But in France the new social system had sprung into existence and—lamentable fact!—duty toward one's country had assumed an empire superior to ancient devotion toward kings.

To stem this tide and attach himself closely to King Charles X. was the marquis' ambitious purpose. For this he had espoused a party in marrying a relative of the royal princess, thus enhancing the ties that bound him to the throne and throwing to the winds his Perdita, whose charms had once held him in folly's chains. Did he regret the step? Has ravening aspiration any compunction, any contrite visitings of nature?

As the coach sped over the road the lady by his side smiled disagreeably from time to time, and my lord, when he became aware of it, winced beneath her glance. Had she fathomed his secret? Else why that eminently superior air, that manner which said as plainly as spoken words: "Now I have learned what to do if he should play the tyrant. Now I see a way to liberty, equality, fraternity!" And beneath the baneful gleam of that look of enlightenment my lord cursed under his breath roundly. The only imperturbable person of the party was Francois, the marquis' valet, whose impassive countenance was that of a stoic, apathetic to the foibles of his betters; a philosopher of the wardrobe, to whom a wig awry or a loosened buckle seemed of more moment than a derangement of the marriage tie or the disorder of conjugal affection.

Not long thereafter the player left for America, where she procured an engagement in New York city, and, so far as London was concerned, she might have found rest and retiredness in the waters of Lethe.

CHAPTER I.

IT was a drizzly day in the Shadengo valley. A mist had settled down upon the old inn; lost to view was the landscape, with its varied foliage. Only the immediate foreground was visible to a teamster who came down the road, the trees with dripping branches and the inn from the eaves of which water fell to the ground with depressing monotony, the well with its pail for watering the horses and the log trough in whose limpid waters a number of speckled trout were swimming. The driver drew up his horses before the Travelers' Friend, as the place was named, and called out imperatively:

"Hello, there!"

No one appearing, he leaned over and impatiently rapped on the door with the heavy oak butt end of his whip. Still there was no response. Again he knocked, this time louder than before, and was preparing for an even more vigorous assault upon the unhospitable entrance when the door swung back and the landlord, a tall, gaunt individual, confronted the driver.

"Well, I heard ye," he said testily. "Are ye coming in or shall I bring it out?"

"Bring it out," was the gruff response of the disgruntled teamster.

Shortly afterward mine host reappeared with a tankard of generous dimensions. The teamster raised it, slowly drained it to the bottom, dropped a coin into the landlord's hand, cracked his whip in a lively manner and moved on. The steam from his horses mingled with the mist, and he was soon swallowed up, although the cheerful snap of his whip could yet be heard. Then that became inaudible, and the boniface, who had stood for a brief space in the doorway, empty tankard in hand, re-entered the house, satisfied that no more transient patronage would be forthcoming at present.

Going through an outer room, called by courtesy a parlor, the landlord passed into an apartment which served as dining room, sitting room and bar. Here the glow of a wood fire from the well swept hearth and the aspect of the varied assortment of bottles, glasses and tankards gave more proof of the fitness of the appellation on the creaking sign of the roadhouse than appeared from a superficial survey of its exterior and far from neat stable yard or from that chilly, forbidding room so common, especially in American residences in those days, the parlor. The ceiling of this dining room was blackened somewhat, and the huge beams overhead gave an idea of the substantial character of the construction of the place. That fuel was plentiful appeared in evidence in the open fireplace, where were burning two great logs, while piled up against the wall were many other good sized sections of hickory.

Seated at a respectful distance from this cheerful conflagration was a young man of perhaps five and twenty, whose travel stained attire indicated he had but recently been on the road. Upon a chair near by were a riding whip and hat, the latter spotted with mud and testifying to the rough character of the road over which he had come. He held a short pipe to his lips and blew clouds of smoke toward the fire, while upon a table, within arm's length, rested a glass of some hot mixture. But in spite of his comfortable surroundings the expression of his face was not that of a person in harmony with the Johnsonian conclusion, "A chair in an inn is a throne of felicity." His countenance, well bronzed as a weather tried trooper's, was harsh, gloomy, almost morose; not an unhandsome face, but set in such a severe cast the observer involuntarily wondered what experience had indited that scroll. Tall, large of limb, muscular, as was apparent even in a restful pose, he looked an athlete of the most approved type, active and powerful.

Mine host, having found his guest taciturn, had himself become genial, and now remarked as he entered:

"I hear things are kind of onsettled in France. I see in a Syracuse paper that Louis Philippe is no longer king; that he and his queen have fled to England. Perhaps now," inwardly congratulating himself on his shrewdness, "you left Paris for political reasons?"

The stranger deliberately emptied his pipe and thrust it into his pocket, while the landlord impatiently awaited the response to his pointed query. When it came, however, it was not calculated to allay the curiosity of his questioner.

"Is it your practice," said the young man coldly in slow but excellent English, "to bark continuously at the heels of your guests?"

"Oh, no offense meant! No offense! Hope none 'll be taken," stammered the landlord.

Then he recovered himself and his dignity by drawing forth a huge wine colored silk handkerchief set with white polkadots and ostentatiously and vigorously using it. This ear splitting operation having once more set him up in his own esteem, he resumed his attentions to the stranger.

"I didn't know," he added, with an outburst of honesty, "but what you might be some nobleman in disguise."

"A nobleman!" said the other, with ill concealed contempt. "My name is Saint-Prosper, plain Ernest Saint-Prosper. I was a soldier. Now I'm an adventurer. There you have it all in a nutshell."

The innkeeper surveyed his guest's figure with undisguised admiration.

"Well, you look like a soldier," he remarked. "You are like one of these soldiers who came over from France to help us in the Revolution."

This tribute being silently accepted, the landlord grew voluble as his guest continued reserved.

"We have our own troubles with lords, too, right here in New York state," he said confidentially. "We have our land barons, descendants of the patroons and holders of thousands of acres, and we have our bolters, too, who are making a big stand against feudalism."

Thereupon he proceeded to present the subject in all its details to the soldier—how the tenants were protesting against the enforcement of what they now deemed unjust claims and were demanding the abolition of permanent leaseholds; how they openly resisted the collection of rents and had inaugurated an aggressive antirent war against tyrannical landlordism. His lengthy and rambling dissertation was finally broken in upon by a rumbling on the road, as of carriage wheels drawing near, and the sound of voices. The noise sent the boniface to the window, and, looking out, he discovered a lumbering coach, drawn by two heavy horses, which came dashing up with a great semblance of animation for a vehicle of its weight, followed by a wagon, loaded with diversified and gaudy paraphernalia.

"Some troopers, I guess," commented the landlord in a tone which indicated the coming of these guests was not entirely welcome to him. "Yes," he added discontentedly, "they're stage folk sure enough."

The wagon, which contained several persons, was driven into the stable yard, where it was unloaded of "drops" and "wings," representing a street, a forest, a prison and so on, while the stagecoach, with a rattle and a jerk and a flourish of the driver's whip, stopped at the front door. Springing to the ground, the driver opened the door of the vehicle and at the same time two other men, with their heads muffled against the wind and rain, leisurely descended from the top. The landlord now stood at the entrance of the inn, a sour expression on his face. Certainly if the travelers had expected in him the traditional glowing countenance with the apostolic injunction to "use hospitality without grudging" writ upon it they were doomed to disappointment.

A rustle of skirts and there emerged from the interior of the coach, first, a little, dried up old lady whose feet were inclosed in prunella boots, with Indian embroidered moccasins for outside protection; second, a young woman who hastily made her way into the hostelry, displaying a trim pair of ankles; third, a lady resembling the second and who the landlord afterward learned was her sister; fourth, a graceful girl above medium height, wearing one of those provoking quilted silk hoods of the day, with cherry colored lining, known as "kiss me if you dare" hoods.

Then followed a dark, melancholy individual, the utility man, whose waistcoat of figured worsted was much frayed and whose toothpick collar was the worse for the journey. He preceded a more natty person in a bottle green, "shad belly" coat, who strove to carry himself as though he were fashionably dressed instead of wearing clothes which no longer could conceal their shabbiness. The driver, called in theatrical parlance "the old man," was a portly personage in a blue coat with velvet collar and gilt buttons, a few of which were missing, while the ruffles of his shirt were in sad plight, for instead of protruding elegantly a good three or even four inches, their glory had gone and they lay ignominiously flattened upon the bosom of the wearer. A white choker rivaled in hue the toothpick collar of the melancholy individual.

The tavern's stable boy immediately began to remove the trunks into the main hallway. This overgrown, husky lad evidently did not share his employer's disapproval of the guests, for he gazed in open eyed wonder at the sisters, and then, with increasing awe, his glance strayed to the young girl. To his juvenile imagination an actress appeared in the glamour of a veritable goddess. But she had obviously that tender consideration for others which belongs to humanity, for she turned to the old man with an affectionate smile, removing from his shoulders the wet Petersham overcoat and, placing it on a chair, regarded him with a look of filial anxiety. Yet their appearance belied the assumption of such relationship. He was hearty, florid and sturdy, of English type, while she seemed a daughter of the south, a figure more fitting for groves of orange and cypress than for this rugged northern wilderness.

The emotion of the stable boy as he gazed at her and the forbidding mood of the landlord were broken in upon by the tiny old lady, who in a large voice remarked:

"A haven at last! Are you the landlord?"

"Yes, ma'am," testily replied that person.

"I am pleased to meet you, sir," exclaimed the melancholy individual as he extended a hand so cold and clammy that shivers ran up and down the back of the host when he took it gingerly. "We are having fine tragedy weather, sir!"

"A fire at once, landlord!" commanded the would be beau.

"Refreshments will be in order!" exclaimed she of the trim ankles.

"And show me the best room in the house," remarked her sister.

Mine host, bewildered by this shower of requests, stared from one to the other in helpless confusion, but finally collected his wits sufficiently to usher the company into the taproom with:

"Here you'll find a fire, but as for the best room, this gentleman," indicating the reticent guest, "already occupies it."

The young man at the fire, thus forced prominently into notice, arose slowly.

"You are mistaken, landlord," he said curtly, hardly glancing at the players. "I no longer occupy it since these ladies have come."

"Your complaisance does credit to your good nature, sir," exclaimed the old man. "But we cannot take advantage of it."

"It is too good of you," remarked the elder sister, with a glance replete with more gratitude than the occasion demanded. "Really, though, we could not think of it."

"Thank you; thank you," joined in the wiry old lady, bobbing up and down like a miniature figure moved by the unseen hand of the showman. "Allow me, sir!" and she gravely tendered him a huge snuffbox of tortoise shell, which he declined, whereupon she continued:

"You do not use it? New fashions, new habits! Though whether for the better is not for me to say."

She helped herself to a liberal portion and passed the box to the portly old gentleman. Here the landlord in a surly tone told the stable boy to remove the gentleman's things and show the ladies to their rooms. Before going the girl in the provoking hood, now unfastened and freeing sundry rebellious brown curls where the moisture yet sparkled like dew, turned to the old man.

"You are coming up directly? Your stock wants changing, while your ruffles"—laughing—"are disgraceful!"

"Presently, my dear; presently!" he returned.

THE PRISONER

Who escapes from jail is by no means free. He is under the ban of the law and punishment is written over against his name. Soon or late he will be caught again and bear added punishment for his short escape from his cell.

Those who by the use of palliative powders and tablets escape for a time from the sufferings of dyspepsia are in the same condition as the escaped prisoner. Soon or late they will go back to the old condition and pay an added penalty for temporary release.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Its cures are lasting.

"For about two years I suffered from a very obstinate case of dyspepsia," writes R. E Secord, Esq., of 15 Eastern Ave., Toronto, Ontario. "I tried a great number of remedies without success I finally lost faith in them all. I was so far gone that I could not bear any solid food on my stomach for a long time, felt melancholy and depressed. Could not sleep or follow my occupation (tin-smith) Some four months ago a friend recommended your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' After a week's treatment I had derived so much benefit that I continued the medicine. I have taken three bottles and am convinced it has in my case accomplished a permanent cure. I can conscientiously recommend it to the thousands of dyspeptics throughout the land."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

When lying down at night I was almost afraid to go to sleep for fear I would never wake up. When I arose in the morning I would feel a little better, but as soon as I started to work my heart would start fluttering, my head would become dizzy, faint weak spells would come over me and it seemed as if black objects were floating before my eyes. I was growing worse every day until I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. When the box was half gone I could feel that they had done me good and by the time it was finished I was in excellent health and would advise all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles to try them."

CANADIAN BANKS PAY DIVIDENDS.

Over two Million Dollars Will be so Paid To morrow.

Tuesday next, says the Toronto News, witnesses the distribution of a considerable sum of money to shareholders of Canadian banks. On that day no less than thirteen of our leading chartered institutions pay their dividends for the half year. Over $2,000,000 is to be thus paid out by these thirteen banks on Dec. 1st. The large amount of $600,000 will be disbursed by the Bank of Montreal alone, and next comes the Bank of Commerce with $350,000. The combined capital of the banks in question runs over the $48,000,000 mark. The detailed figures follow:

Montreal	10	$668,962
Quebec	6	75,000
Toronto	10	135,000
Ontario	6	45,000
Merchants	7	210,000
Union	7	124,250
Commerce	7	350,000
Hamilton	10	100,000
Hochelaga	7	70,000
Ottawa	9	90,000
Imperial	10	150,000
Traders	7	52,500
Standard	10	50,000
		$3,155,612

It might naturally be supposed that the release of such a large sum of cash to the public would be followed by an increased volume of investment buying of Canadian stocks at the present level. It is doubtful, however, if any marked movement in this direction will be witnessed. As a banker put it to the News, this is not the usual effect of such disbursements in this country. The money paid out by the banks next Tuesday will probably go to meet obligations already incurred by the recipients. So, though the buying of small lots of premier securities may receive a slight impetus through dividend payments we do not expect to see the local stock marker greatly benefited thereby.

HOCKEY.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Hockey Club will be held to-morrow night at eight o'clock in the council chamber.

All of last year's champion Peterborough T.A.S. team, including McCoy, Meagher, Crawley, George, McGrath, Lynch and Parnell, are at home and will likely figure on the team which will endeavour to again capture the T. V. L. championship.—Lindsay Post.

A business meeting of the Lindsay Hockey Club was held last night in the Simpson House, but as Manager Parkin was absent very little was done. It was decided to join the Trent Valley League, and that Mr. Chris. Graham, of Peterborough, would represent the Club by proxy at the annual meeting of the league. As Mr. Parkin hasn't yet stated the terms on which he will allow the club the use of the rink for practices and games, a committee comprising Messrs. Simpson, Menzies and Cameron was appointed to discuss the matter with him. The absence of Mr. Parkin at last night's meeting was a disappointment to those who were present, as the boys fully expected he would be on hand to arrange about this year's team and talk finances. They are eager that he should have ice on the rink soon, so that they can do some practising. The boys are anxious that Canada's national winter game should boom this season, but if the manager is backward in assisting the club then our people can only hope to see a third rate team on the ice this winter. Another meeting will be held Monday evening and it is hoped Manager Parkin and all officers will be present.—Lindsay Post.

Lakefield has decided to put a team in the Trent Valley series. The club has several new players to choose from this season. Irwin Hamly who figured with Bowmanville last year; H. J. Stewart with Norwood team and Harry Moore, who won his spurs at point on a former team from Lakefield, are anxious to show what they can do again this season.

The skating rink on Brock street was flooded for the first time this season Saturday night and a good bed of ice formed. If the present cold weather continues there will soon be good ice for skating and hockey practice will soon begin.

The Globe this morning said: "There is promise of great activity this winter in Trent Valley Hockey League circles. This league, which was organized five years ago, has proved one of the most important factors in promoting the interests of the game in the Midland district. Every mail, almost is bringing to the energetic secretary of the league, Mr. E. S. Clarry, who has held that position since its organization, applications for membership, including new clubs. The frontier towns, Port Hope, Cobourg, Colborne, Trenton, Brighton and Picton will be in the league and it is likely that Peterborough being the birth place of the organization, will enter two or three teams. The annual meeting of the local club is on Tuesday next, and that of the league on December 12th."

Picton, Nov 27.—Boulter's rink was flooded this week for the first time this season and hockey will soon be in full blast. There is great excitement over the team, the fine rink and excellent prospects for the winter's sport. The rink has been very much improved this summer and is now the best one in this part of Ontario. An excellent bed has been prepared for the ice. The corners of the rink have been rounded; boards have been nailed on the scantling, and then these have been covered by matched upright boards five feet high, forming a smooth surface, which has been painted blue. Above this is a wire netting eight feet high, which will completely protect the spectators. At each end is an elevated box for the goal umpires.

A large balcony is put up on each side and galleries at each end; all of these are seated with chairs and will accommodate eight hundred spectators. There is standing room for more that 1,200. Above the front gallery is a large band stand. Roomy, well-equipped dressing rooms for the hockey teams are in the front and rear, also cloak rooms for the skating public.

The rink is well lighted by incandescent lights, each of 1,200 candle power. The sheet of ice will be 65 feet wide and 175 feet long. In addition to the front and rear entrances, one has been placed on each side so that the rink can be emptied in a few minutes.

The people of Picton appreciate the trouble and expense that Boulter Bros. have incurred in the construction of the arena and will turn out in large numbers this winter to witness the O.H.A. games.

The officers are: Pres., Geo. Squirrel; Vice-Pres., H. U. Tobey; Sec.-Treas., Geo. B. Boulter; Manager and Trainer, F.E.N. Boulter; the latter two were appointed delegates to the annual meeting of the O.H.A. Picton is desirous of seeing Oshawa and Lindsay grouped with Belleville, Peterborough, Port Hope and Picton.

BASKET-BALL.

A good crowd of spectators witnessed two good games of basket-ball on Saturday night in the Y.M.C.A. The first was between the Athletics Blue and Alerts and was won by the latter by the score of 27 to 11. The second was that between the Brownies and Arrows, the latter being victorious by a score of 20 to 18. This was a very interesting game, the score at full time being a tie. The line up of the teams was:

Athletics—Backs, Cameron and Sheridan; centre, Whitecroft; forwards, Morgan and Armstrong.

POLICE COURT.

In the Police Court this morning a number of returned hunters were charged by Chief Rossel, with being in Mr. Snowden's bar during prohibited hours—Sunday, Nov. 15th. The proprietor was fined $20 and costs, and two of the party were also fined $2.00 and costs each. It was contended by counsel who appeared for him, that Mr. Snowden, who was a member of the party of returned hunters, had asked the gentlemen to accept refreshments and that no liquor was sold, only given away as by a host to his guests. The Police Magistrate remarked that while no liquor had been sold, there had been a breach of the law, and though Mr. Snowden was a respected citizen and a large taxpayer, and though this was the first offence, he, (the Magistrate) had no option, and under the circumstances he would make the fine as low as possible.

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

milk flavour which is so general, and which is caused by irregularities in the churning. This can be remedied by churning at a lower temperature. If we wish to have nice butter we must have first of all sweet cream; then there would never be found that white curd which is to be seen so much in most butter. This is the worst thing possible for the butter as it decomposes first of all. Another source of contamination is the place where the cream is kept. It should be kept in a cool dark spot where it cannot absorb odours from other things. Many people, she said put their milk in the pantry, which is a bad place as it gives the butter the odour of onions or whatever happens to be in the pantry at the time. The speaker next dealt with the texture of butter to which in judging, 25 points were allotted out of 100. Texture is practically unheeded by the farmer, who pays too much attention to the quantity of salt put in, a consideration which is only one of the hand and not one of skill. The texture she said, is the feel of the butter. This can be detected by the thumb. If a cow is given linseed meal in winter she will give milk which will make smoother butter. When churning, hot water should never be added to the cream, for although it may make the churning easier, yet it will spoil the body of the butter. Greasiness is caused by the butter being worked in a "slidy" motion. Miss Rose believed that a great deal of butter was spoiled, by not being carefully worked. Butter should always be of a uniform colour with no streaks. Streaks are caused by the butter being worked at too high a temperature, and not worked quite enough. In winter she advocated the careful use of colouring. In salting butter nothing but the best quality of butter should be used. The speaker urged in conclusion that the butter be carefully and tidily wrapped up, as it would sell much more quickly than that which was carelessly done up.

The report of a presentation which took place at this juncture, of a parchment to Mr. Fowler, of Smith, from the Royal Canadian Humane Society, for bravery in rescuing Kenneth, the son of Dr. Poole, V.S., in June last, appears in another column of this issue.

The last speaker of the afternoon was Mr. Newman of Ottawa, who gave an address on the general production of high class seeds. First, of all, he said, seeds should be pure, that is, each should be able to produce a strong and vigorous plant. In considering purity of a sample it is necessary first of all to find the impurities, which consist mostly of noxious weed seeds. Besides purity, the vitality of a seed should be tested for. Age is probably one of the most important things which influences the percentage of vitality. In conclusion, he said that the best seed was none too good. He advised farmers not to purchase seeds without closely examining a sample and ascertaining the quality which he was purchasing.

The meeting broke up at the conclusion of Mr. Newman's address.

SATURDAY NIGHT'S MEETING.

There was an attendance of 75 at the Farmers' Institute meeting which was held in North Monaghan on Saturday evening, when the President, Mr. Ed. Elliott, ably occupied the chair, opening the meeting with a few appropriate remarks.

The first speaker was Mr. Mason, who gave an address on "The Hog as a Money Maker." The speaker began by instancing the very large amount of money which had been made in the last few years in the pork business, which as a source of revenue would continue and year by year become greater. He remarked that although prices were still falling, the decrease was, in his mind, only a temporary one. The export trade last year in bacon alone to Great Brittain amounted to $16,000,000, which trade he said would annually increase. The speaker next went on to describe the kind of hog required. The animal, he said, should be long, lean and fleshed, and should weigh from 160 to 200 lbs. He went on to describe the best way to raise young pigs, incidentally remarking that bacon could be raised cheaper per pound than beef, and was worth more money. During the first few weeks the animals should be fed on sweet milk and swils, afterwards on mixed grains. At 6 to 6 1-2 months they should be ready for the market. During winter time pigs should be put into good pens, with plenty of light and ventilation. They should always be kept as clean as possible and should have room to get a little exercise, as this will strengthen and straighten their legs. Mr. Mason recommended giving them soda during the cold weather. Before he concluded, a large number of questions were asked by those present and answered by the speaker.

Miss Rose spoke on "Dairying," and not on the subject for which she was billed. She began by saying that the first essential thing in dairying as in any other business, is a liking for that occupation. It requires a large amount of knowledge to thoroughly master this industry before the best results can be obtained. Dairymen must first of all be able to choose a good cow of a fixed dairy type, the speaker describing the needed animal. The cow is just a living machine to convert a large amount of food into milk. Whether you keep a Shorthorn, Jersey, Holstein, Ayrshire, or Guernsey, be sure, she said, that you keep the best of the kind. She advised the having of a record of the cost of keeping cows and the ambunt received from the sale of the butter or cheese. By this a farmer will know whether his animals are paying or not. She next dealt with the stabling, which should always be kept dry, and clean. The cows should always be given a sufficiency of pure water. Miss Rose went on to give a description of the best way to systemize the milking of cows. The best milking place is in the stable either in summer or winter. While milking is in progress the stable should not be cleaned neither should the men be allowed to shake down the hay or straw. It should be done as quietly as possible and the milk should be removed from the stables as soon as drawn. It should then be strained and cooled and not be allowed to stand where there are any odours, and should always be sent to the dairy in the best condition.

Mr. D. Hughes-Charles spoke on "Agricultural Fairs," showing the benefit to be derived from them. As the evening was drawing on he did not speak at any length.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

HON. GEO. W. ROSS AN IMPERIALIST.

In a Speech This Morning he Supports Chamberlain's Policy.

Is Opposed to Reciprocity With United States—Preference Would Stimulate Immigration and Increase Home Market.

(Special to the Examiner.)

Toronto, November 30. — Hon. G. W. Ross, Premier of Ontario, in a speech before the Canadian Club today, declared himself strongly in favour of Mr. Chamberlain's preferential trade policy and in opposition to any form of reciprocity with the United States. A preference in favour of Canada, he declared, would stimulate immigration to Canada, and thus increase the home market for manufactures, will compel an increase in transportation facilities, and thus reduce freight rates, would build up our cities and towns, and broaden our industries in every district where raw material is obtainable, and would cause our merchant marine to increase, and our seaports to grow in importance. The Premier commended the Chamberlain policy as tending to maintain the trade of the Empire, and said, that to do this, was to maintain the Empire's supremacy. If Canada would purchase from the British Empire the $69,000,000 worth of goods purchased last year from the United States, declared the Premier, she would be taking a patriotic course. Referring to relations with the United States, the Premier said that our experience so far had not been very satisfactory. In his judgment the commerce of Canada should never be placed at the mercy of the United States, or any other competing nation.

THE OPERA HOUSE QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I was very much pleased indeed, to read your article on the needs of an up-to-date Opera House in Saturday's issue, and fully concur with everything you have said. The citizens are beginning to realize what the loss of an Opera House means to the town, and it only requires a little agitation in the columns of the press to make this question a live one, and to spur all those interested to action. The town of Barrie, which certainly cannot be compared to Peterborough as regards population and enterprise, has an up-to-date Opera House which is said to be superior to many in the leading cities, and Lindsay also boasts of one which is the pride of the citizens of that town. Excellent companies have visited Lindsay so far this season, but have been compelled to pass Peterborough by. This fact has become widely advertised throughout the country, and is a decided set-back to our boasted enterprise and progressiveness. Let our citizens take the matter up. It is of the utmost importance and is a want demaned by the large majority of the people of the town. And when we decide to build an Opera House, let us have an eye out for the future. Let us build one in keeping with the dignity and importance of the town, or rather, city, and up-to-date in every respect.

Yours truly,
"TAX-PAYER."

SUGGESTS CHANGE IN TREATMENT OF CHILDREN

Youthful Offenders Should be Removed From Regular Police Courts.

All youthful offenders or homeless children should be removed entirely from the jurisdiction of the regular police courts and be dealt with by a specially organized children's court. In connection with this court there should be probation officers, usually ladies, to investigate charges of youthful wrongdoing and homelessness, etc., and submit to the judge a report of each case. Children charged with petty offences should be placed temporarily under the care of these officers, who would supervise the home life, help to procure employment, or take whatever steps might be necessary to remove the cause of offence. Judge Tuthill, who has charge of the children's court in Chicago, was asked what he thought about the born criminals and degenerates. He is quoted as replying, "There are no born criminals; if I felt that I would lose my faith in God. Society makes criminals, and environment and education make criminals, but they are not born so." He further expressed the opinion that if the best children in the world were submitted to the same influences as the children daily brought before him they would commit the same offences. The home surroundings and early training of children are all important factors in determining their subsequent career. When children get into conflict with the law it is rarely their fault and their cases should be studied in a kindly, parental way by persons whose love of childhood is greater than their sense of so-called justice.

ONTARIO PREMIER WITH CHAMBERLAIN

Hon. G. W. Ross Says His Policy Would do Much for Canada.

Premier of Ontario is Against American Reciprocity—Why it is Undesirable—British Empire Builder Would Furnish Unlimited Openings For Our Produce—Important Speech Before the Canadian Club.

Toronto, Dec. 1.—Premier Ross declared himself a stout Imperialist and believer in Mr. Chamberlain's Empire-building policy at the weekly luncheon of the Canadian Club yesterday afternoon. He was the speaker of the day, and his sentiments were loudly applauded by 350 club members, who occupied seats in the banquet hall. He also declared his unalterable opposition to reciprocity with the United States, asserting that Canada must be independent of any whim of Congress, which might abrogate any reciprocal arrangement on the smallest provocation.

Advantages to Canada.

The Premier foresaw immense advantages that would accrue to Canadian farmers by the imposition of a duty against foreign wheat, and the bonus of six cents a bushel to Canadian wheat would be substantial in his mind. England, he said, imported 400,000,000 bushels, of which 30,000,000 bushels went from Canada. The preference would stimulate immigration to our great unbroken areas in the west, and every province would benefit from the boom. The flow of immigration would increase the home market for manufactures, and we would not, as in the past, have to send over skilled workmen to the States for employment.

By creating a direct trade with Great Britain our seaport towns would be built up. He showed that during the past year the port of Montreal had, for the first time, handled more wheat exports than Buffalo.

Fresh Meat Illustration.

Dealing with the proposed preference of 5 per cent. to colonial meat Mr. Ross pointed out that at the present time Great Britain consumed 3,000,000 pounds of fresh meat, and Canada supplied only three days' fare. In the matter of cheese, although we commanded the British market, a little preference would do us no harm.

He said a preference of 10 per cent. to colonial manufacturers would help Canada to supply some of the $450,000,000 of manufactures which England imported. Canada's exports of manufactures amounted to only $20,000,000, but the manufacturers had to work at a great disadvantage, owing to distance and lack of transportation. The preference would overcome some of these disadvantages. Canada's manufactures were increasing, and we would soon require a larger market.

The speaker spoke of the $69,000,000 of manufactured articles imported into Canada from the States and observed that it would be a patriotic thing to import these from Great Britain rather than from the United States, which was a foreign country to us politically. It would be well if the Empire were independent of foreign countries.

Commercialism Makes For Peace.

Commercialism made for peace, observed the Premier in a burst of eloquence. Mr. Chamberlain's object was to secure the unity of the Empire by commercial advantages, and though some thought this was a sordid object the speaker thought not. The attitude of the Imperialist was to make the Empire self-contained commercially. Another object of Mr. Chamberlain was to prevent entangling alliances with the United States. The most entangling alliance that could be entered into with the States would be a treaty of reciprocity. He recalled the former reciprocity treaty with the United States, which was broken off just as soon as it suited Congress, and another treaty would place us in the same position. He would prefer not to be at the mercy of any foreign country or state. We should develop our trade along the lines laid down by Mr. Chamberlain. He did not set much store on the friendship of the United States. Australia and Britain bought our typewriters and bicycles, but the United States did not.

POLLING DEC. 26.

North Renfrew Election Writs Issued—Premier Ross to Visit Constituency.

Toronto, Dec. 1.—The election in North Renfrew to fill the seat made vacant by the death of Mr. J. W. Munro will be held on Saturday, December 26, with nominations one week earlier. The Liberal candidate will be Mr. L. Hale, and the Conservative candidate will be Mr. Dunlop.

The Premier, Hon. Geo. W. Ross, will visit the constituency before the date of polling and discuss the issues of the day.

SUCCESSFUL CANADIANS.

In Some Instances Almost Make a Clean Sweep of Prizes in the Sheep Classes.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Canadians were busy receiving congratulations at the International Exposition yesterday. It was the first day of stock judging. Some cases, especially sheep and hogs, every prize winner from first to last, belonged to Canadian herds. In the Shropshire sheep, for instance, in two classes, out of twelve prize winners, nine were owned by Canadians, and the three lost were at the bottom of the list, the first prizes entirely going to Ontario.

Significant Hunting.

Three hundred Canadians arrived in one train from the vicinity of Guelph, and they formed an enthusiastic party. The big judging stand of the pavilion was gaily decorated for the occasion. Significant of the warm feeling among the stockmen for Canadians, the biggest flag in sight in the centre was a very handsome silk standard of the United Kingdom. This was contributed by the ex-Canadians on the Stock Exchange. To each side was hung an immense Canadian flag, and the Stars and Stripes. All the Canadians were decorated with Maple Leaf buttons, every time the colors of their country would show on a new prize winner they would yell in unison.

One westerner hollered across the hall: "Say, you Canucks, you have got everything worth having from the prize list, you might as well take the pavilion. Let the tail go with the hide."

All the local papers devote much space to Canadian exhibits and Canadian affairs, and the Saddle and Sirloin Club sent an open invitation to every Canadian visitor to get around to the headquarters and become an honorary member.

John Campbell of Woodville, Ontario; Richardson Gibson of Delaware, and Lloyd-Jones Brothers of Burford, were the winners of the Shropshire prize lists for the first day for Canada. Campbell and Gibson got a first. This list is such a big victory, it is given in detail:

Sheep.

Fat sheep division, Shropshire, class 91—Wether, 1 year and under two, first prize, John Campbell, Woodville; second, Richard Gibson, Delaware; third, John Campbell, Woodville; fourth, Lloyd-Jones Brothers, Burford.

Class 92—First, Gibson; second, Campbell; third, Gibson; fifth, Lloyd-Jones Brothers; sixth, Lloyd-Jones Brothers.

In many other awards the names of Canadians were generously displayed.

During the six days' show it is anticipated that half a million people will visit the grounds, a majority of them interested in the live stock industry. The sales of prize winners in sheep, swine and cattle is expected to send not less than one hundred thousand dollars cash back to Canada.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE E. CASEY.

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—Mr. George E. Casey, ex-M.P., died at the Protestant Hospital at 9:50 last night from a complication of diseases. He was admitted to the hospital some days ago, being then in very bad shape. Since that time his decline has been rapid and for the past few days all visitors had been debarred access to him. The Prime Minister and his colleagues were constant in their inquiries after Mr. Casey, and were deeply grieved last night to hear of his demise. The late Mr. Casey had many sympathizers in Ottawa on account of what was termed his "hard luck." Since his failure in 1900 to secure re-election in West Elgin he had resided in Ottawa, where his cheery manner and buoyant disposition in spite of reverses, deepened popular admiration for him. Only a short time ago he was appointed to a position in the Parliamentary library, but had not enjoyed this very long when he became incapacitated by illness.

Mr. Casey was born in March, 1850, in Southwold, Elgin county, which was his home for many years. He was educated at the St. Thomas Grammar School and the University of Toronto, where he took his degree in 1871, with honors in classics. Entering Parliament as member for West Elgin at the general election of 1872, when only 22, he continued to represent the riding until defeated in a triangular contest in 1900. During the term of the Mackenzie Government he was Government whip.

Injured While Blasting.

Kingston, Dec. 1.—A serious accident occurred at Kingston Mills yesterday. The Bradden boys were engaged in blasting and had lit the fuse and gone off. As the explosion did not take place they went back and began to drill out the holes to put a fresh charge in. While they were doing so the first charge exploded, and Ed Bradden was seriously hurt about the eyes and mouth. The injured man was brought to the Hotel Dieu.

Canadian Victim is Dead.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Detective Joseph Driscoll died at the Mercy Hospital on Saturday. Deceased was a native of Pilkington township, near Guelph, and had served for years on the Chicago police force. His brother, Michael, left for Chicago Saturday evening, but Joseph was dead before he reached there.

YOUNGHUSBAND EXPEDITION.

British Government Says It Has No Designs on Tribet or Capital.

London, Dec. 1.—It was announced yesterday that the British Government has no present intention of pushing the Younghusband expedition through to Lhassa, the capital of Thibet, or even to permanently occupy Gyangtse. This repudiation of designs on Lhassa or of a permanent stay in Thibetan territory, is understood to be an outcome of the discussion of the British Cabinet last week when the attitude of Russia in relation to the expedition was among the principal matters debated. The Russian press has been loud in its protests against "British aggression" in Thibet, and there is reason to believe that the protest voiced the feeling of the British Government.

A Dundas Constable Shot.

Dundas, Dec. 1.—James Peaire, constable here, was shot by burglars yesterday morning about 6.30. He and Chief Twiss had chased them from Grafton & Co.'s store to the Halfway House on the Dundas road, about two miles from the town. While the chief was searching a shed at the hotel, Peaire caught up to the two fugitives, who tried to keep him off with stout sticks. The constable closed with them, and one of the burglars drew a revolver and shot him through the hip. Another bullet struck the handcuffs in his hip pocket and glanced off without doing any harm. The robbers fled to Hamilton, and have not yet been located. Constable Peaire is in a somewhat critical condition

The Best Remedy for Croup.

From the Atchison, Kan., Daily Globe. This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighbourhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of his children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost in case of croup as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old-fashioned remedy for croup known as hive syrup, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw off the phlegm quicker and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as a croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to use. For sale by all druggists.

CANADIAN PACIFIC.

Winter Work for the Elder Dempster Fleet Owned by This Company.

During the winter season the thirteen ships owned by Canadian Pacific in the Atlantic Ocean service will be divided into practically three fleets, one section going on the service between British and continental ports, another division running between St. John, Halifax and Liverpool and the third running between Liverpool an dNew Orleans, says the Wall Street Journal.

The usual course of procedure for the winter season on the part of this fleet when owned by the Elder-Dempster and Beaver companies has been somewhat similar to the service tthat will be undertaken by Canadian Pacific. St. Lawrence navigation is impossible in the winter and the ships in this route are taken off, as usual.

The strengthening of this fleet has caused a good deal of more or less hostile criticism on the part of other shipping interests, notably the German lines. The criticism has hinged for the greater part upon the rates made in immigrant service from continental ports to Canadian ports. At no time has the diversion of steerage traffic been so serious as to lead to strenuous efforts on the part of the rival lines to stop it.

In freight rates all agreemnets appear to have been lived up to. Whether the putting the ships in service between Antwerp and English ports will lead to further opposition or not is uncertain, but Canadian Pacific appears to have a perfect right to make its regular liners into tramps during the winter if the management pleases.

The statement that Canadian Pacific will go after gulf trade from New Orleans to Liverpool during the winter is rather startling at first glance, but the fact of the matter is that the northern ships will merely continue the service they have been accustomed to during past seasons. It does not pay to lay up good grain steamers while the grain crop of the United States is going abroad through the gulf ports. The mere fact that Canadian Pacific now owns the ships will not interfere with the service at New Orleans.

The present season should see excellent business for all ships in the British service at both New Orleans and Galveston. A new line is going into commission to ply from the latter port to Liverpool, and all signs point to the success of this line. The popularity of this route as an export feature has greatly increased within the past five years. The better railroad service from the wheat fields to the gulf, the high tariffs on grain carried on the trunk lines and the all-the-year-round harbours of the gulf have combined to make these ports about the heaviest shippers of grain, taking the whole year into consideration.

This winter the fact that the movement of grain began late will assist the lines serving the gulf. Less grain will have been moved out by December 1st than formerly, and therefore more grain will remain to be moved. The gulf ports will get the bulk of it. The northern fleet has a fairly well established business with the southern shippers and should easily pay their way during the winter months on this business.

DYSPEPSIA ACTS IN MANY WAYS.

All of Them are Painful or Disagreeable —Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Surely Banish Them all.

"My appetite was very irregular and I would bloat very much after eating. I also had Palpitation of the Heart, and sometimes I could not sleep at all at nights on account of my heart beating so hard. I was hardly able to get around when I commenced using Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets, but after using half a box I felt much better. Continuing their use I was soon well and have had good health ever since."

This is the experience of A. D. Miller, of Wilberforce, Ont. Perhaps your Indigestion or Dyspepsia acts in a different way. You may be suffering from headaches, gas or food rising in the throat, depression or despondency or any of these other disagreeable and painful methods this disease has of proving its presence.

But Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure it just the same. They tone the stomach up so it can do its full work. One or two of them taken after eating is a safeguard against discomfort.

Lord Minto Was Present.

Toronto, Dec. 1.—St. Andrew's Day was celebrated here by St. Andrew's Society in a banquet. The decorations were very appropriate and profuse. The dinner was all that could be desired. Among those present was Lord Minto, Governor-General of Canada, His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, the Premier of Ontario, and the feast was presided over by Alex. Nairn, the newly-elected president. His Excellency's speech in reply to the toast of the Governor-General was a stirring one and was much appreciated. His Honor's remarks were also in good Scottish form. The banquet was a great success.

The Solar Plexus.

Is the largest nerve centre in the sympathetic nervous system, is situated just back of the stomach, and supplied nervous energy, the vital force of the human body, to the stomach, heart, lungs, kidneys, liver, etc. By creating more force Dr. Chase's Nerve Food directly aids the solar plexus in supplying the power which runs the machinery of digestion and so cures nervous dyspepsia, headache, dizzy spells and bodily weakness.

From the Firm of Bennet & Wright, Plumbing, Heating and Electrical Contractors, Toronto.

This is to certify that Duncan McGregor has been in our employment steady for about fifteen years and, during that time we have found him to be steady, honest and trustworthy. He has given every satisfaction as a practical mechanic in each of the following branches: Plumbing, steam and gas fitting, also electrical and conduit work, and for some time has had charge of some of our largest contracts with satisfactory results.

From Illsley & Horn, General Contractors, Toronto.

The bearer, Mr. Duncan McGregor, had charge of the electric wiring at the King Edward Hotel Building. The job was a large and complicated one and by the way Mr. McGregor handled the work he proved himself a mechanic of more than ordinary ability. We unhesitatingly recommend him as a first-class mechanic to anyone needing his services.

From Mr. J. Ross Robertson, of the Evening Telegram.

Mr. Duncan McGregor, who has been connected with the Bennet & Wright Co. for some years, and who has superintended the work of plumbing and heating for the Bennet & Wright Co., is not only in my opinion, but also that of my architect, a fully competent mechanic. His work, my architect informs me, has been most satisfactory. Anything that has come under my own supervision has been likewise satisfactory.

An Extract Taken from the June Number of Domestic Engineering.

During the recent convention of the Canadian Electrical Association held in the King Edward Hotel, a thorough examination was made of all the electrical work in the hotel, and it was pronounced second to none on the continent. Therefore, great credit is due Mr. Duncan MacGregor, who superintended the entire conduit, electrical and power system for the firm of Bennet & Wright, of this city, who were the contractors for all the different branches of the electrical work in the new hotel.

The London Bus Driver.

Catch a driver when a clumsy drayman has fouled his wheels or blocked his way or when a rival bus has stolen a march on him. Then you will understand the Londoner's boast that the cockney is the readiest, the wittiest, of all his majesty's subjects. The tongue is not his only weapon. I remember once starting from the Mansion House on a bus the driver of which had been maddened by some remark of the conductor on the bus just in front of him. The two belonged to rival companies and were traveling the same route. They talked it over with pungency and zest from the Mansion House to St. Paul's. At the top of Ludgate hill, one of the regular stopping places, the driver made up his mind he could stand it no longer. He got down from his seat and pommeled the conductor heartily for two minutes. It refreshed him so much that at the next stopping place he did it again. By the time Charing Cross was reached it had become a habit with him. Whenever the buses stopped there would be a brick setto, the intervals between the halts being filled with an exchange of prophecies as to what would happen at the next. —Sydney Brooks in Harper's Magazine.

The Gardener in Old Rome.

He literally grew colonnades; he fashioned obelisks of box, cypress or ilex. He not only flattered his lord and master by inscribing his name in odoriferous herbs or gorgeous flowers that startled the garden with occasional tours de force, but he actually trimmed trees into family portraits or even those of historical characters. He transformed bushes and thick forged shrubs into the fantastic likeness of ships, lions, bears and birds. And these rather degenerate "conceits" and extravagances met with profound appreciation and were rewarded with increase of wages by the same individual who, having tired of mere gladiatorial fights with wild beasts in the Coliseum, only derived real thrills from such uncanny performances as fights between women and dwarfs or women with each other. Pliny says the gardeners were the best paid of all workers.—Ct. Clair Baddeley in Nineteenth Century.

TOWN JOYOUS OVER NEWS.

Spirited Mass Meeting, After Heated Discussion, Decides That Men Stay in On Condition That Company Reduces Rent and Price of Coal to Employes—7,500 Employes to Be Laid Off.

Sydney, N.S., Dec. 1.—The gloom which has rested over Sydney for the last few days, owing to the fact that a strike was imminent at the steel works over the refusal of the management to accept the terms of the F.W.A. request issued on Saturday, was cleared away at 11 o'clock last night, when it became known that the men had decided not to strike this morning.

The announcement was made known to a large number of business men and citizens who had gathered in the Council Chamber to hear the report of a delegation comprising Mayor Richardson, Rev. Father MacAdam, parish priest of Sydney, and Rev. Archdeacon Smith, rector of St. George's Anglican Church, Sydney, who had been asked by the men to address them at a mass meeting last evening, and to whom a report of their decision would be made.

When the result of the meeting was made known to the waiting crowd a long and hearty cheer went up, which clearly demonstrated the feeling of the business men and citizens of the town on the matter. The decision of the F.W.A. was reached at a largely attended and spirited mass meeting held at the coke ovens last night, and was only arrived at after a heated discussion, in which many of the members of the association said that they did not like the idea of a strike being called immediately. One condition only was attached to the accepting of the reduction, and that was that Mr. Plummer be held to his agreement to reduce the cost of rents in the company's houses, and the price of coal to the Steel Company's employes.

Yesterday notices were issued to the foremen in the different departments of the plant that if the full quota of men were not present this morning they were to order all those who did not report for work to put in their time and return home.

Result of Centralization.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Following its announced policy of centralization, the International Harvester Company, has decided to lay off 7,500 of its 10,000 employes and thus effect a saving of $5,000,000 a year. Fifteen hundred employes of the Deering division have been notified their services are no longer required. These men were employed in the factories at Irondale. Of the 7,000 workers in the Deering division 3,000 in all are to be laid off. The McCormick division will not discharge so many, but 1,500 of its 7,000 employes being slated for dismissal. The other 3,000 workers to lose positions are those employed in the mills in Milwaukee, Springfield, Ohio, and Plano.

3,500 Affected.

Putnam, Conn., Dec. 1.—A reduction of ten per cent. in wages went into effect yesterday in a number of cotton mills in Eastern Connecticut. About 3,500 operatives are affected.

75,000 Reduced.

Boston, Dec. 1.—The wages of about 32,000 cotton textile operatives were reduced yesterday. Yesterday's addition brings the total numbers in New England who have had their pay cut down this fall to about 64,000, and the cut which takes effect in New England next Monday will swell the total to about 75,000.

Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure

Costs Nothing If It Fails.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer. For years I searched everywhere to find a specific for Rheumatism. For nearly 30 years I worked to this end. At last, in Germany, my search was rewarded. I found a costly chemical that did not disappoint me as other Rheumatic prescriptions had disappointed physicians everywhere.

I do not mean that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure can turn bony joints into flesh again. That is impossible. But it will drive from the blood the poison that causes pain and swelling, and then that is the end of Rheumatism. I know this so well that I will furnish for a full month my Rheumatic Cure on trial. I cannot cure all cases within a month. It would be unreasonable to expect that. But most cases will yield within 30 days. This trial treatment will convince you that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure is a power against Rheumatism—a potent force against disease that is irresistible.

My offer is made to convince you of my faith. My faith is but the outcome of experience—of actual knowledge. I know what it can do. And I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal card for my book on Rheumatism. I will then arrange with a druggist in your vicinity so that you can secure six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure to make the test. You may take it a full month on trial. If it succeeds the cost to you is $3.50. If it fails the loss is mine and mine alone. It will be left entirely to you. I mean that exactly. If you say the trial is not satisfactory I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs for it is dangerous to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood. My remedy does that even in the most difficult cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met, and in all of my experience, in all of my 2000 tests, I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the book. Try my remedy for a month, for it can't harm you anyway. If it fails the loss is mine.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 47, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases not chronic are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

AN EXTENSIVE SEARCH.

Strenuous Efforts Being Made By Mariners to Discover the Wrecked Schooner Emerald—More Wreckage.

Cobourg, Dec. 1.—Several volunteer searching parties under the supervision of William Plews, are engaged in the search for wreckage from the schooner Emerald.

The Government tug St. Paul which is wintering at Fort Hope is engaged in the search, as is also McMahon Brothers' gasoline launch.

Several sailors of this town and Port Hope have either telegraphed or telephoned to every port on the lake but without any satisfactory result. Mr. Plews has found a staunchson and some cabin ware on the beach here, and expects to locate the missing boat to-day.

Several persons report seeing a wrecked vessel on the shore, about three miles east of here. Several mariners have identified pieces of the wreckage found, as belonging to the Emerald, and there is no doubt now as to the fate that the vessel has met.

This is the spot where the schooner Two Brothers was wrecked last year when bringing a cargo of coal from Charlotte.

CURES RHEUMATISM? YES.

The widespread extent of Rheumatism in its several dangerous forms, and the largely fatal character of its effects, had for a long time set physicians to investigating as to its cause. The verdict of experience and study at the present day is that Rheumatism, of whatever nature, is a blood disease, and the best authorities agree that it is caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood. Now for the remedy. This must combine the most effective specifics, prepared with such care and skill as to leave no element of uncertainty. The result of such study and care is known as "Bu-Ju." This is a vegetable compound in the form of pills which stimulate weak kidneys and overcome clogged or sluggish conditions of these organs. The effect is at once apparent. The blood returns to its normal state of healthy purity and there is no basis for Rheumatism in the system. That this result can be obtained by the use of Bu-Ju is attested beyond question. A trial will convince you that the plain truth is good enough for Bu-Ju, the kidney pill that cures Rheumatism.

Trade-Mark Bu=Ju

is put up in boxes of 50 pills, selling at 50 cts. at all drug stores. Refuse substitutes.

AGAINST JOE'S IDEA

Not Desirable for British Empire to Be Self-Contained.

HOPE IN TROPICAL COUNTRIES

Nearly Impossible, Says Lord Brassey, to Increase British Exports to Canada—Light on Praise of Things Colonial—Some Other Opinions of Effect of Chamberlain's Policy—Bannerman to Balfour.

London, Dec. 1.—(C.A.P.)—Lord Brassey, chief speaker at the Colonial Reciprocity debate before the National Club last night, said he was grateful to Canada for the preference, but the tariff and the geographical position of the United States, made it nearly impossible to increase British exports to Canada. England's hope lay in tropical countries. England had problems like the submerged tenth, but Canada was booming, and should not have all the trade benefits. He didn't think it desirable for Britain to be self-contained. Canada's crops might fail, and in time of war a neutral flag was safer.

Australia had the same trade policy as Canada. When he went to Australia Chamberlain said: "Whatever you see, praise perfervidly; if you do not see anything to praise, keep silent."

Hamar Greenwood, formerly of Toronto, said Chamberlain was using the colonies as a party move. The influx of foreigners would make it impossible for Canada to be the granary of the Empire.

Sir H. Colon said that in the evolution of the Empire the colonies must become great states and fall off like ripe fruit.

Bannerman to Balfour.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was escorted through Newport streets by cheering crowds last night, and addressed a great meeting at Tredgar Hall. He denied the right of the Government to postpone an appeal to the country on the fiscal issue for trade was embarrassed and the public credit was impaired. British exports were increasing fast. The total make of pig iron in Britain last year showed an increase of six hundred thousand tons.

Referring to the strictures of Premier Balfour, he said if the Liberals had been in power there would have been no Jameson raid and no war.

A Workingman's Issue.

Mr. Chamberlain has a letter in The Sun pointing out that the tariff reform is a workingman's issue.

Lyttleton Too Busy Now.

Lyttleton, secretary of state for the Colonies, has resigned the position of Chancellor of Rochester diocese. John Talbot, the nephew of the Bishop, succeeds him.

Raw Material Cheaper.

Earl Beauchamp, at the Birmingham Liberal Club banquet, said free trade enabled British manufacturers to obtain material at lower prices than protected countries. Despite protected manufactured paper, Canada, the United States and England, produced 750 thousand tons against 43 thousand in 1861.

Preferential Justified.

President Doxat of the Australian Chamber of Commerce in London, speaking at the annual meeting yesterday, considered that changed conditions justified preferential tariffs within the Empire, with a certain amount of protection to the native industries.

STORMS ACROSS THE OCEAN.

Score of Lives Lost Among the French Fishing Crews.

London, Dec. 1.—The incessant rains have been succeeded by snowstorms, which yesterday were general throughout Great Britain and many parts of the continent. The fall in London was very slight, but in some of the country districts outdoor work was suspended and traffic was carried on with difficulty. Vessels are seeking refuge in the harbors along the British coast. The snowstorms were so severe in Belgium that telegraphic and telephonic communication with Germany was interrupted. A score of lives have been lost among the crews of the vessels composing the French fishing fleet during the storms of the past few days.

Will Keep Navigation Open.

Fort Arthur, Dec. 1.—There is a possibility that navigation will be kept open on the lakes until a late date this season. There is yet a large amount of freight to be shipped to the Northwest, and with the increasing freight rates, the vessel owners will keep their boats in commission to as late a date as possible.

Whalers' Yarn Denied.

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—The yarn that three United States whalers were seized by Canadian officials in Hudson Bay is pronounced a canard by the officials here. If any American whalers have been encroaching in Canadian waters the ice will hold them fast until the Canadian authorities are ready to deal with them.

Fell From Roof and Died.

Hamilton, Dec. 1.—Jack McPherson, son of John A. McPherson, 58 West Hannah street, who was so badly injured in a fall yesterday morning, died about 4.30 in the afternoon in the City Hospital. He fell from the roof of his father's house. He fractured his skull.

Robbed at Hogg's Hollow.

Toronto, Dec. 1.—Charles Winters of Richmond Hill, told the police last night that two men on bicycles held him up at Hogg's Hollow and took from him $480, which he had saved while working on a farm. The police will investigate the story.

Firewater, Indian, Death.

Montreal, Dec. 1.—An Indian from Caughnawaga, about 55 years old, named Joseph Tault, shot himself dead in Lalonde's Hotel last night. He had been drinking heavily.

Mr. Bergeron Renominated.

Montreal, Dec. 1.—J. G. Bergeron was renominated last evening to contest St. James' division in the Opposition interest.

HOPE IS NOW EXTINGUISHED.

Capt. McMaster's Name Found on Some of the Wreckage.

Colborne, Dec. 1.—One week ago yesterday parties along the lake shore, about two miles east of Lakeport, found a bowsprit and a provision box, with locker attached. The box was apparently new, and had the Emerald's name and also Captain McMaster's name on it.

The member of the crew whose name has hitherto been unknown is now learned to be Edward Ashley, but his address has not been learned. The cook, Mrs. Wright, it has been ascertained, formerly lived in Kingston.

Chinese Murderers Confessed For Price to Be Paid Relatives.

Victoria, B.C., Dec. 1.—Sach Chun, Ah Gum and Gun Tie, three Chinamen sentenced to be hanged at Kamloops next Friday for the murder of Ah Chee, a Chinese, at Bar River gold mining camp, on the Fraser River, were reprieved yesterday by Chief Justice Hunter until Dec. 18, and it is probable that the Dominion Government, considering the case, will commute the death sentence to life imprisonment. Ah Chee was murdered with a hammer and the body thrown into the Fraser. Sach Chun made a confession, in which he did not implicate others, but evidence adduced showed all three to be implicated. The police believe that Sach Chun made the confession, shouldering all blame, for a price to be paid to relatives in China.

Canadian Preference Favored.

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—Mr. Jardine, the Canadian trade agent in South Africa, writes to the department here saying that Canada's action in granting the South African colonies a preference is viewed with much favor. The views expressed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Parliament on the Alaska boundary were cabled to South Africa, and warmly endorsed by that portion of the Empire. It is said that the cold storage accommodation on the direct liners from Canada to South Africa is all taken up by American firms in advance.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN SENDS REPLY TO RESOLUTION.

Appreciates the Support Given Him in His Arduous Task.

At a meeting of the Board of Trade held on November 3rd, among other weighty subjects, the Chamberlain Preferential policy was discussed, and a resolution adopted as follows:—

Whereas Canada has voluntarily granted a preferential tariff for British goods and at the last colonial conference asked for reciprocal treatment, offering thereupon to increase the present preference.

Therefore, be it resolved that the opinion of this meeting is that the bonds of the British Empire would be materially strengthened and the union of the various parts of his Majesty's domains greatly consolidated by the adoption of a commercial policy such as was outlined by the Right Hon. Jos. Chamberlain at Glasgow on the 6th of October, with his subsequent exemplifications and explanations and that the Board of Trade of the Town od Peterborough accept and support that policy.

A copy of this resolution was forwarded to Mr. Jos. Chamberlain, and, in reply Mr. Quartermaine, the Secretary of the Board, has received a letter from the ex-Colonial Secretary, as follows:—

40 Prince's Guards, S.W.,
Nov. 18th, 1903.

T. Q. Quartermaine, Esq.:

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter enclosing the resolution passed by the Peterborough Board of Trade at its general meeting on the 3rd inst.

I have received this resolution with great satisfaction, and desire to express my cordial appreciation of the support thus given to me by so representative a body in the arduous work in which I am engaged in the hope of strengthening the ties which bind the different parts of the British Empire together.

I am, Sir,
Yours faithfully,
J. CHAMBERLAIN.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN GIVEN TO SOCIETY.

Investigation of Two Cases in Havelock Yesterday.

Mr. Edmison, County Police Magistrate, and Mr. Geo. Cochrane, High Constable, and agent for the Children's Aid Society, went to Havelock yesterday to hold an investigation into the charges of child neglect by persons Named Clark and Duncan. Mrs. Clark, the mother of two children, which the father had abandoned, was summoned to appear at the investigation, she, however, failed to answer to her name, and, after the facts in the case had been explained by Mr. Cochrane, an order was made giving the children over to the Children's Aid Society.

In the Duncan case, in which the father of four children, of whom the mother is dead was charged with neglect, Mr. Colville, of Campbellford, appeared for Mr. Duncan, and a number of witnesses were on hand. After two of those had been examined, the father consented to giving his children over to the Society. In this case, the father is more to be pitied than blamed. The father is unable to properly care for his offspring, although he is not devoid of parental affection for them. Mr. Cochrane, yesterday was able to procure homes for three of the Duncan children in good families in the vicinity of Havelock.

Up to date 61 children have been taken from that section of the country by the Society.

EVENING WITH THE HABITANT.

Delightful Lecture given in George Street Church Last Night.

Dr. W. H. Drummond Tells in a Charming way the Habits and Life of the French Canadian—A Thoroughly Appreciative Audience.

In George street Methodist church, last night Dr. W. H. Drummond, the Habitant poet delighted a large audience by his delineation of the often misunderstood French-Canadian character. Dr. Drummond more than any other writer or lecturer has helped the British descendents in Canada to appreciate the sturdy, and thoroughly patriotic nature of their French-Canadian brothers. In his lecture last night, "An Evening with the Habitant," the doctor gave a number of readings, many of them taken from his two published books, "The Habitant" and "Johnny Courteau," supplemented by some newer productions, which have not yet been published in book form. The most interesting of these was a series of letters written by a Habitant farmer describing a trip to the British Isles, in the course of which some amusing circumstances were gone through. Dr. Drummond, not only has a keen sense of humour, and displays it in his writings and lectures, but the reverential spirit characteristic of the Habitant takes a prominent place in his writings. This feature is particularly noticable in his poem, "The Cure of Calumet," in which the French-Canadians' respect for the priest and for his religion is exemplified. The Habitant in his love affairs was portrayed, as only Dr. Drummond can picture him, and it was noticable that a thread of sentimentality ran through all his selections. Another feature of the character of the race from which the lecturer drew many beautiful pictures was his love for his Canadian home, and it may come as a surprise to many who have cherished the erroneous idea that the French-Canadian thought of France as "home." Their intense love for Canada was amply evidenced in a number of his readings, particularly in the Habitant's account of his visit to Montreal to hear Madam Albani sing. It is safe to say that those who heard the lecture given last night feel a deeper respect, a result of a more perfect understanding of the motives and characteristics of the French-Canadian. In the ninety minutes during which Dr. Drummond spoke there was not a tedious minute, every member of the audience numbering nearly 1,000 listened with the utmost attention and interest to the highly pleasing and entertaining speaker, who has not only a commanding appearance on the platform, but a charming grace of expression which made listening a pleasure. No more enjoyable lecture on any subject has ever been given in Peterborough, at the conclusion of which Col. E. B. Edwards moved a vote of thanks to Dr. Drummond which the mover said was not only for the excellent lecture last night, but also for his work in educating the people of Ontario as to the motives of their French-Canadian fellow-settlers, and the resultant better understanding which was coming to exist between the two sections of the country. Mayor Roger in seconding the motion, said the Young Men's Guild was to be commended for giving the people of Peterborough an opportunity of hearing such a lecture as Dr. Drummond had given them last night. The motion was enthusiastically supported by the audience, which had previously shown its pleasure in an unmistakable manner.

TO MAKE CLOTHES FOR UNCARED FOR CHILDREN.

Ladies Met Yesterday—The Good Work at the "Shelter."

A meeting of ladies was held in the Children's Shelter yesterday afternoon, in order that plans might be discussed whereby the ladies of the town generally might be induced to take more interest in the Society in the way of making clothes for the use of the children who are now being cared for. These children when taken away from careless parents present a most neglected appearance. For the most part they are absolutely uneducated, scarcely ever have a sufficiency of clothing, and seldom have any idea of manners. Many are almost barbaric, which was instanced this year when two children from Anstruther were cared for who did not know the use of knives or forks, still less other necessities of civilized life. The children, often taken away from parents who habitually got drunk, and thrashed them for the slightest, or no, cause whatever, are delighted to receive the comforts which the Shelter affords, and are ever loath to leave this second and brighter home. There is no denying the fact that the Children's Aid Society is doing a most humane work, and it now remains with the citizens, especially the ladies, to help clothe the poor little inmates, many of whom never experienced the tender care of a mother.

BRILLIANT RECEPTION TO MRS. W. G. McCLELLAN

Held at Home of Bride's Parents at Lindsay, on Saturday.

An Interesting Social Event in Which Young Peterborough Groom Figures Guests From This Town Attend the Reception.

(Lindsay Post.)

On Saturday, November 28th, at 4 p.m., Dr. and Mrs. McAlpine held the marriage reception of their only daughter, Mrs. W. G. McClellan, which happy event had to be postponed on account of the serious illness of Mr. McClellan at the time set for the marriage. Shortly after the appointed hour the doctor's commodious and cheerful home was thronged with wedding guests, and it is needless to say that none came without the wedding garment.

THE DECORATIONS.

As one entered the spacious hall, a very brilliant picture was presented. Lights in profusion were made more glowing by masses of rich, red berries entwined with smilax and other trailing foliage, while palms, ferns and potted plants filled every nook and corner. In the hall upstairs, the same scheme was carried out. The drawing room was a veritable bower of pink chrysanthemums and smilax, adorning every available space, and across the handsome mantle, with its polished mirror, festoons of smilax, clusters of the pink chrysanthemums, and pink candles, reflected their beauty all around. In the large front window a giant palm some five feet high, and similar ones of a smaller size, formed a fresh, green background for the bridal party, who, took their places before it, and the soft blending of the bridal colours and the foliage made a perfect picture. The four bridesmaids stood on the right of the bride and groom. In the sitting room the decorations were yellow chrysanthemums and smilax, and the brightly burning fire on the hearth mingled its light with that of the softly shaded candelabra which "shone o'er fair women and brave men."

THE MUSIC ROOM

was crimsoned with the warmth of red berries and smilax, gracefully drooping from chandelier and mantle. In the dining room, perhaps, we were most fascinated with the table and its adornments. In the centre of the large and hospitable board a charming centrepiece was the background for the bride's cake. This most interesting object was richly carved with those indescribable little figures wrought in purest white icing, and rested on a silver tray, draped with green gauze. Round the entire sides of the table garlands of smilax lay gracefully easy. In large vases were huge white chrysanthemums, and as a compliment to the white bridal cake, numberless angel cakes stood as sentries around the table. Those beautiful decorations of white and green were everywhere in the dining-room.

After the fair young bride had received the good wishes of her legion of friends she withdrew to the dining room to give the first thrust of the knife to her cake. Immediately afterwards refreshments were served by a group of prettily gowned girls.

Then follows an elaborate description of the dresses of the numerous lady guests.

THE GIFTS OF FRIENDS.

"The many well wishers of Mr. and Mrs McClellan were manifestly proven by the more than elegant display of valuable gifts, with which the library was filled, and could these silent witnesses tell their tale they would waft many a loving message to the amiable recipients of them. That everyone was more than pleased at Mr. McClellan's providential recovery, it is needless to say, and that his fair young bride is well worthy of the happy termination which came of it none of her friends will deny. Our best wishes for both is that after a long lapse of years, they may be able to say with the poet:

"Love is indestructible;
Its holy flame forever burneth,
From Heaven it came, to Heaven returneth."

Mr. McClellan, who is manager of the Metropolitan Bank at Wellington, expects to be able to resume his position about the first of December. Bon voyage!

Mr. McClellan is a son of Mr. J. H. McClellan, of Peterborough.

KILLED BY FREIGHT TRAIN AT MYRTLE.

Mr John King who Was Deaf and Dumb Killed on C. P. R.

Myrtle, Nov. 30.—An accident occurred on the C.P.R. a little east of Myrtle on Sunday afternoon, when Mr. John King, a resident of Raglan, was run down by a freight train. An especially sad feature of the occurrence is that Mr. King was deaf and dumb. Engineer Connell, (engine 1023), on rounding a curve saw Mr. King on the track, walking westward, and blew long blasts from his whistle, which the deceased of course did not hear. Although the brakes were applied he was struck with great force in the back and hurled from the track. He was picked up in an unconscious condition, and conveyed to Myrtle station, and Dr. Arthur of Port Perry, was phoned for, arriving on the scene in less than an hour, only to find life extinct, deceased having died about thirty-five minutes after the occurrence of the accident. Mr. King was about thirty five years of age, and was to have been married this winter to a Toronto lady.—Toronto News.

The Lindsay Hockey team has designs on the Trent Valley League championship this year as the following paragraph from the Post would indicate:—

"There is no reason why Lindsay shouldn't put a strong team on the ice this winter and make the champion T.A.S. team bustle for the coveted Stratton cup in the Trent Valley League. Anyway our citizens may depend on being treated to some good hockey this winter."

• • • •

It will come as a decided shock to the hockey enthusiasts, not only of Toronto, but wherever the game is played, to learn that the Wellingtons who for years have stood at the top of the heap in the senior series of the Ontario Hockey Association, have decided to disband. This decision was arrived at at the banquet given in honour of the senior team last night at McConkey's, by Hon. President Mark H. Irish and President Arthur Ardagh. In addition to the hosts there were present Secretary Alex. Milne, Captain Irving Ardagh, Worts Smart, Bob Lindsay, Fred Clark, W. Bellingham, sen., Jimmy Worts, W. Bellingham, jr., "Chummy Hill, G. Chadwick, Frank McLaren, Charlie Pringle, Harry Ardagh, W. A. Hewitt, W. H. Lamont and C. H. Good.

The Wellingtons were just entering on the thirteenth year of their existence as a hockey club, and evidently they considered the circumstance somewhat significant. The proposal to hang up their sticks and go out of business as a hockey organization was a development of an entirely unexpected nature. Such an idea was not even considered until it was made manifest that three or four of the Stalwarts of the team would not be able to play this year. Worts Smart announced that he would not again be in a position to lend his services to the club, and Jim Worts gave utterance to a similar statement, his medical adviser having informed him that he would be jeopardizing his health if he continued in the game. Darling and Chummy Hill are on the road most of the time, and unable to practice regularly, and the team is without a regular goalkeeper. Under the circumstances it was concluded that it would be folly to remain in the game. Ardagh, McLaren, Hill and Chadwick were almost heartbroken at the turn of affairs. Hill was especially hard hit, as he is the only playing member of the original Wellingtons left. He was on the team when it was organized thirteen years ago, and has played continuously ever since.

The Wellingtons as a club have enjoyed a long and honourable career. For three years they played in the O.H.A. junior series with varying success, but it was not until 1897 that they won the junior O.H.A. championship, beating Guelph Victorias in the final. They entered the senior series the following year. For four years straight they have been the senior champions of the O.H.A. Two years ago they visited Winnipeg in quest of the Stanley Cup but were defeated in two hard-fought games.

The Wellingtons as a hockey club are no more, but they will stay together as a social club with Alex. Milne as perpetual Secretary.—Globe.

Peterborough will be represented, and well represented, on the executive of the O.H.A. this season. Mr. A. W. MacPherson, who has been prominently associated with nearly every form of sport, is elected to the office of treasurer by acclamation, and entitled to a vote as a member of the executive. One other office was filled by acclamation, that of president, Mr. J. Ross Robertson being elected.

Pyramid Pile Cure Cures Piles Quickly, Painlessly, Without Danger.

People go along for years suffering with piles. They try this and that and the other thing from carrying a buckeye to getting treatment from a physician. They obtain temporary relief, maybe, but they are never quite cured. A little strain in lifting, excessive fatigue, a little constipation or a little diarrhoea and the piles come back.

They don't seem to amount to much, but they banish sleep and appetite. No position is comfortable. There is intense local pain and that dreadful feeling of weight in the perineum.

Maybe in the early stages some of the many salves on sale will afford temporary relief. If the case is of long standing there is only one speedy and sure remedy. It is Pyramid Pile Cure. Even in light cases it is the safest thing to use. Other applications may cure and may not. Pyramid Cure is always certain, always reliable, always brings comfort at once. Its prompt use saves months of severe suffering. In extreme cases it will save surgical operations, and their attendant dangers and discomforts. It is better than a knife. Will cure easier, quicker and safer. Thousands have used it. Thousands have been cured by it. The cost is trifling compared with what it does. The price is 50 cents. Most anybody would gladly pay ten dollars to be rid of piles.

All druggists sell Pyramid Pile Cure. Write Pyramid Drug Company, Marshall, Mich., for their book on Causes and Cure of Piles, which is sent free for the asking.

Hotelkeeper Asphyxiated.

Toronto, Nov. 30.—Albert Myers, general storekeeper and proprietor of an hotel in Uffington, Muskoka, was found dead in bed at the Hub Hotal about 9.30 Saturday morning. He retired Friday night, and when he did not appear Saturday morning an employe of the hotel broke open the door and found the room full of gas and the jet open. W. W. Cook, the proprietor, told him of the danger of the gas jet, and it is supposed Mr. Myers turned it off and then unconsciously turned it on again. Dr. Elliott was called, and said that the deceased had been dead for half an hour before the body was found.

The Fires of Eczema.

How keen is the suffering of many people who endure the stinging, itching sensations of Eczema that they speak of the skin as being on fire. By its soothing, healing, antiseptic influence Dr. Chase's Ointment positively cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and every form of itching skin disease. It is of inestimable value in every home, and when once introduced becomes a household necessity. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the standard the world over, and has no worthy rival.

Doan's Kidney Pills

FINALLY MADE A COMPLETE CURE.

Mr. Jacob Jamieson, Jamieson Bros., the well-known Contractors and Builders, Welland, Ont., tells of how he was cured: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with kidney trouble which increased in severity the last five years. My most serious attack was four years ago, when I was completely incapacitated. I had terrible pains across my back, floating specks before my eyes and was in almost constant torment. I could not sit or stand with ease and was a wreck in health, having no appetite and lost greatly in flesh. I had taken medicine from five different doctors and also numerous other preparations to no purpose. I finally began to take Doan's Kidney Pills and before I had taken five boxes the trouble left me and I now feel better than I have for twenty years. Those who know me know how I was afflicted and say it is almost impossible to believe that I have been cured, yet they know it is so. I have passed the meridian of life but I feel that I have taken on the rosy hue of boyhood."

An Attack of Pneumonia Warded Off.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in the chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, according to directions, and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Prenderguest, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold towards pneumonia. For sale by all druggists.

Charleston, S. C., Nov. 30.—The first lynching in the history of Dorchester County occurred Saturday. Friday night a negro attempted to assault a young lady at her home, 37 miles from Charleston. Thackeray's Satire.

Thackeray created quite erroneous impressions of himself by often indulging in irony in the presence of people who were incapable of understanding it. One curious instance which he gave was this: Thackeray had been dining at the Garrick and was talking in the smoking room after dinner with various club acquaintances. One of them happening to have left his cigar case at home, Thackeray, though disliking the man, who was a notorious tuft hunter, good naturedly offered him one of his cigars. The man accepted the cigar, but, not finding it to his liking, had the bad taste to say to Thackeray, "I say, Thackeray, you won't mind my saying I don't think much of this cigar?" Thackeray, no doubt irritated at the man's ungraciousness and bearing in mind his tuft hunting predilections, quietly responded, "You ought to, my good fellow, for it was given me by a lord." Instead, however, of detecting the irony, the dolt immediately attributed the remark to snobbishness on Thackeray's part and to the end of his days went about declaring that "Thackeray had boasted that he had been given a cigar by a lord."

Witty Response of a Lecturer.

A professor who acted as chairman of a meeting at which Max O'Rell was to lecture introduced the Frenchman in the following manner:

"Ladies and gentlemen, when we wish to see ourselves as individuals we have recourse to the mirror. This we cannot do as a nation. I take pleasure in introducing a gentleman who will act as a French mirror, by means of which you will, I am sure, obtain an adequate and pleasing view of yourselves as a nation."

The introduction pleased O'Rell, and he responded in a vein as jovial: "I am requested to reflect on a nation. However, I must take second place to the man in the moon, for he reflects on the earth. As an imported French mirror I shall do the best I can to give you a correct picture of the nation. And if your chairman remains where he is, in the background, he will add greatly to the reflective power of the mirror."

THE STROLLERS

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM,

Author of "Under the Rose"

Copyright, 1902, by THE BOWEN-MERRILL COMPANY

The members of the company mounted the broad stairway, save he of the disordered ruffles, who wiped his heavy boots on a door mat and made his way to the fire, where he stood in English fashion, with his coat tails under his arms, rubbing his hands and drying himself before the flames.

"A disagreeable time of year, sir," he observed to the soldier, who had returned to his seat before the table. "Twice on the road we nearly broke down, and once the wagon dumped our properties in the ditch. Meanwhile, to make matters worse, the ladies heaped reproaches upon these gray hairs. This, sir, to the man who was considered one of the best whips in old Devonshire county."

The other did not answer immediately, but regarded the speaker with the look of one not readily disposed to make acquaintances. His conclusions were apparently satisfactory, however, for he presently vouchsafed the remark:

"You are the manager, I presume?"

"I enjoy that honor," returned the loquacious stranger. "But my duties are manifold. As driver of the chariot I endure the constant apprehension of wrecking my company by the wayside. As assistant carpenter, when we cannot find a stage it is my task to erect one. As billposter and license procurer, treasurer and stage manager my time is not so taken up, sir, as to preclude my going on and assuming a character."

"A life of variety," observed the young man politely, if indifferently.

"Yes; full of ups and downs, as the driver of the property wagon said when we entered this hilly district," replied the manager, with the contentment of a man who has found a snug haven after a hard ride in a comparatively unbroken country. "Affluence we may know, but poverty is apt to be our companion."

To this the other deemed no response necessary, and a silence fell between them, broken only by the simmering water in the iron kettle, the sputtering of the sap in the burning logs and the creaking without of the long balancing pole that suspended the moss covered bucket. The wind sighed in the chimney and the wooing flames sprang to meet it, while the heart of the fire glowed in a mass of coals between the andirons.

The old gentleman before the blaze began to outrival the kettle in steaming. From his coat tails a thin veil of mist ascended, his face beaming through the vapor with benign felicity. Then he turned and toasted the other side, and the kettle reigned supreme until he thawed once more and the clouds ascended, surrounding him like Jupiter on the celestial mount. At that the kettle hummed more angrily, and the old gentleman's face beamed with satisfaction.

"A snug company, sir," he said finally, glowing upon the impassive face before him, "like a tight ship, can weather a little bad weather. Perhaps you noticed our troupe? The old lady is Mrs. Adams. She is nearly seventy, but can dance a hornpipe or a reel with the best of them. The two sisters are Kate and Susan Duran, both coquettes of the first water. Our juvenile man is a young Irishman who thinks much of his dress and little of the cultivation of mind and manners. Then," added the old man tenderly, "there is my Constance."

With awkward fingers he released the dress.

He paused abruptly. "Landlord, a pot of ale. My throat is hoarse from the mist. Fancy being for hours on a road not knowing where you are!"

An aroma from the kitchen which penetrated the room seemed especially grateful to the manager, who smiled with satisfaction as he conjured up visions of the forthcoming repast. By his Falstaffian girth he appeared a man not averse to good living nor one to deny himself plentiful libations of American home brewed ale.

"Next to actual dining," observed this past master in the art, "are the anticipations of the table. An excellent dinner is in progress, if my diagnosis of these penetrating fragrances be correct."

And it was soon demonstrated that the manager's discernment was not in error. There was not only abundance, but quality, and the landlord's daughter waited on the guests, thereby subjecting herself to the very ugly advances of the Celtic Adonis. The large table was laden with heavy crockery, old fashioned and quaint. An enormous rotary caster occupied the center of the table, while the forks and spoons were—an unusual circumstance—of silver.

When the company had seated themselves around the board the waitress brought in a sucking pig, done to a turn, well stuffed and with an apple in its mouth. The manager heaved a sigh.

"The lovely little monster!" said Kate admiringly.

"Monster!" cried Susan. "Say cherub!"

"So young and tender for such a fate!" exclaimed Hawkes, the melancholy individual, with knife and fork held in midair.

"But worthy of the bearer of the dish!" remarked Adonis as pointedly that the landlord's daughter, overwhelmed with confusion, nearly dropped the platter, miniature porker and all. Whereupon Kate cast an angry glance at the offender, whom "she could not abide," yet regarded in a certain proprietary way, and Adonis henceforth became less open in his advances.

Those other aromas which the manager had mentally classified took form and substance and were arranged in tempting variety around the appetising and well browned suckling. There were boiled and baked hams speckled with cloves, plates of doughnuts and pound cake, beet root and apple sauce. Before each of the guests stood a foaming mug of home brewed ale that carried with it a palpable taste of the hops.

"There is nothing of the stage repast about this," commented the manager.

To which Kate, having often partaken of the conventional banquet of the theater, waved her hand in a serio-comic manner toward the piece de resistance and observed:

"Suppose, now, by some necromancy our young and tender friend here on the platter should be changed to a cleverly fashioned block of wood, painted in imitation of a roasted porker, with a wooden apple in his mouth?"

The manager, poising the carving knife, replied:

"Your suggestion is startling. We will obviate the possibility of any such transformation."

And he cut the "ambrosian fat and lean" with a firm hand, eying the suckling steadfastly the while as if to preclude any exhibition of Hindoo mysticism, while the buxom lass, the daughter of the boniface, with round arms bared, bore sundry other dishes from place to place until the plates were heaped with an assortment of viands.

"Well, my dear, how are you getting on?" said the manager to the young actress, Constance, as he helped himself. "Have you everything you want?"

She nodded brightly, and the soldier, who was seated some distance from her, glanced up. His gaze rested on her for a moment and then returned in cold contemplation to the fare set before him.

Yet was she worthy of more than passing scrutiny. The gleam of the lamp fell upon her well turned figure, and the glistening of her eyes could be seen in the shadow that rested on her brow beneath the crown of hair. She wore a dark lavender dress, striped with silk, a small "jacquette," after the style of the day, the sleeves being finished with lace and the skirt full and flowing. Her heavy brown tresses were arranged in a coiffure in the fashion then prevailing, a portion of the hair falling in curls on the neck, the remainder brought forward in plaits and fastened at the top of the forehead with a simple pearl ornament.

If the young girl felt any interest in the presence of the taciturn guest she concealed it, scarcely looking at him and joining but rarely in the conversation. Susan, on the other hand, resorted to sundry coquetries.

"I fear, sir, that you find our poor company intrusive, since we have forced you to become one of us?" she said, toying with her fork and thereby displaying a white and shapely hand.

His impassive blue eyes met her sparkling ones.

"I am honored in being admitted to your fellowship," he returned perfunctorily.

Here the dark haired girl arose, the dinner being concluded. There was none of his usual brusqueness of manner as the manager, leaning back in his chair and taking her hand, said:

"You are going to retire, my dear? That is right. We have had a hard day's traveling."

She bent her head and her lips pressed softly the old man's cheek, after which she turned from the rest of the company with a grave bow. But as she passed through the doorway her flowing gown caught upon a nail in the wall. Preoccupied though he seemed, her low exclamation did not escape the ear of the soldier, and, quitting his place, he knelt at her feet, and she, with half turned head and figure gracefully poised, looked down upon him.

With awkward fingers he released the dress, and she bowed her acknowledgment, which he returned with formal deference. Then she passed on and he raised his head, his glance following her through the bleak looking hall, up the broad, ill lighted staircase, into the mysterious shadows which prevailed above.

Shortly afterward the tired company dispersed and the soldier sought his room.

CHAPTER II.

THE crowing of the cock awakened the French traveler, and, going to the window, he saw that daylight had thrown its first shafts upon the unromantic barnyard scene, while in the east above the hilltops spread the early flush of morning.

Descending the stairs and making his way to the barn, he called to Sandy, the stable boy, who was performing his ablutions by passing wet fingers through a shock of red hair, to saddle his horse. The sleepy lad led forth a large but shapely animal, and soon Saint-Prosper was galloping across the country. After a brisk pace for some miles he reined in his horse and, leisurely riding in a circuit, returned on the road that crossed the farming country back of the tavern.

The rider was rapidly approaching the inn when a sudden turn in the highway as the road swept around a windbreak of willows brought him upon a young woman who was walking slowly in the same direction. So fast was the pace of his horse and so unexpected the meeting she was almost under the trampling feet before he saw her. Taken by surprise, she stood as if transfixed, when, with a quick, decisive effort, the rider swerved his animal and of necessity rode full tilt at the fence and willows. She felt the rush of air, saw the powerful animal lift itself, clear the rail fence and crash through the bulwark of branches. She gazed at the windbreak. A little to the right or the left, where the heavy boughs were thickly interlaced, and the rider's expedient had proved serious for himself, but chance—he had no time for choice—had directed him to a vulnerable point of leaves and twigs. Before she had fairly recovered herself he reappeared at an opening on the other side of the willow screen and, after removing a number of rails, led his horse back to the road.

With quivering nostrils the animal appeared possessed of unquenchable spirit, but his master's bearing was less assured as he approached, with an expression of mingled anxiety and concern on his face, the young girl whom the manager had addressed as Constance.

"I beg your pardon for having alarmed you!" he said. "It was careless, inexcusable!"

"It was a little startling," she admitted, with a faint smile.

"Only a little!" he broke in gravely. "If I had not seen you just when I did"—

"You would not have turned your horse—at such a risk to yourself!" she added.

"Risk to myself! From what?" A whimsical light encroached on the set look in his blue eyes. "Jumping a rail fence? But you have not yet said you have pardoned me?"

The smile brightened. "Oh, I think you deserve that."

"I am not so sure," he returned, glancing down at her.

Slanting between the lower branches of the trees the sunshine touched the young girl's hair in flickering spots and crept down her dress like caressing hands of light, until her figure, passing into a solid shadow, left these glimmerings prone upon the dusty road behind her. The "brides," or strings of her little muslin cap, flaunted in the breeze and a shawl of China crape fluttered from her shoulders. So much of her dusky hair as defied concealment contrasted strongly with the calm translucent pallor of her face. The eyes alone belittled the tranquillity of countenance; against the rare repose of features they were more eloquent, shining beneath brows delicately defined but strongly marked and shaded by long upturned lashes, deep in tone as a sloe.

"You are an early riser," he resumed.

"Not always," she replied. "But after yesterday it seemed so bright outdoors and the country so lovely!"

His gaze, following hers, traversed one of the hollows. Below yet rested shadows, but upon the hillside a glory celestial enlivened and animated the surrounding scene.

While the soldier and the young girl were thus occupied in surveying the valley and the adjacent mounds and hummocks the horse, considering doubtlessly that there had been enough inaction, tapped the ground with rebellious energy and tossed his head in mutiny against such procrastination.

"Your horse wants to go on," she said, observing this equine byplay.

"He usually does," replied Saint-Prosper. "Perhaps, though, I am interrupting you? I see you have a play in your hand."

"I was looking over a part, but I know it very well," she added, moving slowly from the border of willows. Leading his horse, he followed.

His features, stern and obdurate in repose, relaxed in severity, while the deep set blue eyes grew less searching and guarded. This alleviation became him well, a tide of youth softening his expression as a wave smoothes the sands.

"What is the part?"

"Juliana, in 'The Honeymoon.' It is one of our stock pieces."

"And you like it?"

"Oh, yes," lingering where a bit of sward was set with field flowers.

"And who plays the duke?" he continued.

"Mr. O'Flariaty," she answered, a suggestion of amusement in her glance. Beneath the shading of straight, black brows her eyes were deceptively dark until, scrutinized closely, they resolved themselves into a clear gray.

"Ah," he said, recalling Adonis' (O'Flariaty's) appearance, and as he spoke a smile of singular sweetness lightened his face, "a Spanish grandee with a touch of the brogue! But I must not decry your noble lord," he added.

"No lord of mine!" she replied gayly. "My lord must have a velvet robe, not frayed, and a sword not tin, and its most sanguinary purpose must not be to get between his legs and trip him up. Of course, when we act in barns"—

"In barns!"

"Oh, yes; when we can find them to act in."

She glanced at him half mockingly.

"I suppose you think of a barn as only a place for a horse."

The sound of carriage wheels interrupted his reply, and, looking in the direction from whence it came, they observed a coach doubling the curve before the willows and approaching at a rapid pace. It was a handsome and imposing equipage, with dark crimson body and wheels, preserving much of the grace of ancient outline with the utility of modern springs.

THE MISERY OF CATARRH

It makes a man ridiculous, it makes him an offensive nuisance and it makes him dangerously sick.

Catarrh is not a luxury or a necessity.

It is pretty sure to bring on consumption, pneumonia, or at least, bronchitis. You cannot afford either.

You can afford the cure for it. A cheap cure that has never failed. It is Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder.

It relieves a cold or catarrh, or cures a headache in ten minutes, it entirely heals up the catarrh-wasted surfaces.

No other remedy can count noses with us—cured noses.

C. E. ZIMMERMAN, of the staff of the Roanoke World, states:—

"Dr. Agnew's Catarrh Cure is the only remedy that has ever given me any permanent relief, after suffering more than fifteen years from Catarrh."

QUOTATIONS ON THE WALL STREET MARKET.

The Fluctuations of the Leading Stocks

The Wall street market was again strong to-day and prices went up by leaps and bounds. Twin City, which has been a very strong feature during the past week, opened up at 94 1-8 and went on up to 94 1-2. C. P. R. was strong to-day, reaching 118 3-4 by 2.00 p. m. Prices were correspondingly strong all along the line. Sugar was the only exception. It opened at 122 and sold off a point.

Messrs. McMillan & Maguire's report follows:

Market opened fairly hard with improving tendency. Room traders seemed moderately bullish. Decision against N.Y.C. in case of dissatisfied Harlem stockholders and the possibility that that road could be forced to refund rentals improperly reduced caused some selling of N.Y.C. Republic Steel naturally opened lower on passing of dividend on preferred, but previous selling had to a large extent discounted the news. Erie October statement had less effect than might have been expected. Shorts covered as bad news was out. L.N. strong and said to have been bought in London. Philadelphia houses moderate buyers of Pa. Baltimore and Pa. are scarce in loan crowd.

Noon.—Market irregular. London was buyer but apart from this traders had

Noyes, principal buyer of S.R., with some assistance from Houseman, who paid 79 for preferred and took about 5,000 common in all. Talk a little more bullish on Gould stocks although usual Gould brokers do not seem to have been active in market and talk conservatively. Lazare Freres are advised that London, Paris and American Bank of Frisco have engaged one million Japanese gold for shipment to Frisco.

BLAIRTON.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Edward Eastwood, of Marmora, a prominent cattle buyer for 30 years, came to a sad end on the 26th inst. At dusk of the evening, Mr. Eastwood, in company with Mr. Black, the butcher and cattle dealer in Marmora, was driving a large drove of cattle through the village, Mr. Eastwood having occasion to run briskly to head off some straying cattle, dropped suddenly in the street, and it is said, died instantly. Of all business men, Mr. Eastwood will be missed, and his death much regretted.

Much credit, as well as a general manifestation of gratitude is due the Government for the very liberal grant given, and for the wisdom the Government officials showed in making the change in the road's course. The time is not far distant when it will be one of the best roads in the county.

Auction sales of farm property, i.e. of stock and implements, are almost of daily occurrence in this part of the country. Nearly all who sell are going to Western Canada.

It Went Unpunished.

This story is told of the late Dr. Holland, better known as "Timothy Titcomb." During the service of one of the large churches in Springfield, Mass., a heavy electric storm came up, and one of the gentlemen of the choir set out to secure an omnibus to take the ladies home. Among the fair singers was a certain Miss Etta S., and as Dr. Holland was gallantly helping her into the vehicle a terrific clap of thunder startled them, upon which he remarked, "'Ett' in terror packs home in a bus" (Et in terra pax hominibus). To close this strange tale it may be well to add that the doctor was not immediately struck by lightning, but died years afterward peacefully in his bed.

Odd Things.

The origin of the sentiment, "Old wood to burn, old wine to drink, old friends to trust, old authors to read," is somewhat obscured. Bacon found that Alcaeo of Aragon was wont to say in commendation of age that age appeared to be best in these four things. John Webster (1638) went further in declaring, "Old wine wholesomest, old pippins toothsomest," and that "old wood burns brightest, old linen washes whitest." Goldsmith in "She Stoops to Conquer" says, "Old friends, old times, old manners, old books, old wine." There are many variant quotations.

Made the Cannon Balls Fit.

The first battle of the war of 1812 was fought at Sacket's Harbor, July 9, 1812, and consisted of an attack made upon the village. The inhabitants had but one gun of sufficient size and strength to inflict damage, a 32 pounder, for which they had no shot. This difficulty was overcome by the patriotism of the housewives, who tore up carpets from the floors and with strips wound the small balls to fit the cannon.

Shooting Crocodiles by Lamplight.

In the West Indies crocodiles are often shot at night. The hunter, with a lantern, sits in a canoe in one of the creeks which the crocodiles infest. The crocodiles are attracted by the light and swim toward the canoe. Their eyes shine out in the darkness and form good targets for the hunter's bullets. Sometimes a dozen crocodiles are shot in a night.

EFFICIENT WORK OF THE BIBLE SOCIETY.

Local Collectors Appointed and Will Commence Canvas.

Reasons Why the Society Should be Supported—History of Upper Canada Bible Society.

The collectors for the Bible Society will begin their canvass this week among the friends in town. Owing to the centenary being so near at hand (March 0, 1904) it is urgently requested that all will contribute as liberally as possible to the funds of the most important ally of the Christian church. Those who have already been appointed for this work in town are Miss Butcher and Miss Walton; Miss Langford and Miss Fisher; Miss Sarah Miller; Mrs. J. Harper and Mrs. A. Gillespie; Miss H. Bathgate and Miss Anderson; Miss Wand and Mrs. William Fowler. Three other districts are yet to be provided for.

The collectors out of town are:
S. D. Carver, Mountgham.
E. Mabood, Smith.
Mrs. A. Campbell, Douro.
Mrs. Jos. Greer, Otonabee East.
Miss Bennett and Miss Long, Miss Ada Stewart, Miss Deyell, Otonabee South.
R. W. Reid, Auburn.

With one district to be provided for.

The following are ten good reasons why we should take an interest in this good work:

1—For ninety-nine years the British and Foreign Bible Society has been giving God's word to the world at cost, to those who can afford to buy, and as a gift to those unable to purchase.

2—It has issued more than 180 million copies in whole or in part in 370 different languages and dialects, and at a cost of $60,000,000. Two hundred and sixty-three languages and dialects were added to the Society's list during the reign of Queen Victoria, the noblest achievement of that glorious reign.

3—The Society supported last year in 27 countries in all parts of the world 950 colporteurs, who have sold and distributed 1,890,000 copies. The Word of God is having free course and is being more and more glorified.

4—650 native Bible women, connected with fifty missionary organizations, are visiting and reading to an average of 620 heathen women and children regularly each week; 2,500 women were taught to read God's word and 23,340 copies of the Scriptures were sold.

5—The Bible Society is the great ally of all branches of the Church in Foreign Mission Work. No application for a grant of Scriptures has ever been denied. Every request to print the word in a new tongue has been granted.

6—It spent last year over $50,000 in grants of Scriptures to different religious and philanthropic agencies at home.

7—It constantly employs in translating and revising the different languages and dialects, a large number of the most eminent scholars in the world.

8—It knows no denominations, as such, the Society is the willing servant of all. Its unalterable policy from the beginning has been to give "the Word," without note or comment, in the language of the people, to all the nations of the world.

9—To carry on its ever increasing work, the Bible Society needs your prayers and material help.

"Can we, whose souls are lighted
With wisdom from on high;
Can we, to men benighted,
The lamp of life deny?"

10—"Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure pressed down, and shaken together, and running over."

WHAT THE UPPER CANADA BIBLE SOCIETY IS DOING.

1—Formed 75 years ago at Toronto, it is the strongest Auxiliary of the Parent Society, with 514 branches in Ontario and 113 in Manitoba and the far West.

2—It supports 8 Colporteurs, who go from house to house in the newer parts of the land, principally in Algoma, Manitoba, the North-west and British Columbia, supplying the Word of God—selling it at cost to those able and anxious to buy—giving it to those who cannot afford to buy.

3—Last year 36,012 copies of the Word, in whole or in part, were distributed by the Colporteurs.

4—$3,936.19 was paid for Bibles, Testaments and Portions of the Scriptures to the British and Foreign Bible Society, etc., last year; $13,541.74 were sent as a free gift to the British and Foreign Bible Society to aid in the world-wide work; while $3,000 were sent (an annual gift) to the Quebec Bible Society to aid in French colportage work.

5—Within the Dominion of Canada the Society is circulating the Word in over 20 languages and dialects. The great unifying agent, making of one spirit, and animating with the same hope, the many races. Seeking a home in this land that God has given us to possess for Him, is God's Word. Help in its circulation.

CAPRICES OF THE YUKON.

River That Freezes From the Bottom Up —A Water Juggler.

The waters of Alaska freeze from the bottom. One may be gliding along on a glassy lake, with a gorgeous sun overhead, in a crisp, invigorating atmosphere. There is not a sign of ice except high up on the mountain sides. A little circle appears on the silvery surface, as though a tiny pebble had fallen in—then another, and still another. There isn't a sound, and not even a mosquito to disturb the placid picture, but still the little circles come.

Presently a glassy bead bubbles about in the centre of one of the widening circles, then a larger one, and a still larger. Those beads are tiny ice globules. They come bobbing up in rapid succession, then several together. In half an hour the surface is covered. They have grown as large as a butter bean, and nearly the same shape, but crystal clear. In an hour they are as large as a lady's watch, and each one has little grains of sand sticking to it; some have a large gravel sealed up inside.

The old "sour dough" will row for the shore when he sees these signs upon the water, for he knows well that in a few hours the whole surface will be a mass of slush ice, from which it will be impossible to extricate a rowboat, and equally impossible to leave it.

By morning the cold air of the upper World will have welded all this mass together, and we have the first freeze-up.

If one will take the trouble to peep into some shallow rivulet at this time of year he may see nature in her workshop making a winter. Each tiny grain of sand is first given a coat of ice. The coat grows thicker on the upper side.

Finally it gets so thick that the buoyancy of the ice overbalances the weight of the gravel; the mass leaves the bottom, and, reached a stratum of warmer water, the ice melts a little, releasing the gravel, and bobs merrily to the surface. The fact of its being anchored to the gravel at the bottom has given it the name of anchor ice, and that freeze-up is expressively called "the anchor ice freeze-up."

After a week or two of good hard freezing there is nearly always a chinook wind that comes up from the south for a last flying visit, and the ice is broken up into huge cakes. These drift before the wind or with the current, and when they are stopped by some natural barrier they pile up on each other, sometimes many feet high, making the ice jams that are so hard for "mushers" or "log wallopers" to get over in traveling.

Then comes the real freeze-up, when the surface of every lake and river is sealed solid.

As the cold grows more intense the water in the depths give off a vapor, and this, being warmer than the ice, melts it here and there, forming air holes—the river's lungs. Woe betide the unwary pedestrian who happens to strike one of these air holes just before it opens, for in each one of them is written the infernal legend, "Leave hope behind, who enters here." One may look out upon the frozen surface of a lake or river and see many of these air holes, distinguished only by the volume of vapor rising like the smoke of huge signal fires upon a prairie. When the weather moderates some of these gigantic nostrils seem to be unnecessary, and a thin coat of ice forms over them. They they are more dangerous than ever, because the channel is just beneath, ready to take the victim instantly into the bowels of the ice.

After a month or two of freezing weather the ice grows very thick. The waters beneath, dried up at their source, shrink into smaller space, and the great mass of ice "settles." Long cracks open up in its narrow surface with thundering noises like volleys of artillery. Then the water beneath, hard pressed for an easy channel, runs into and along these cracks, the surface freezes up, and there is an artificial subterranean river, so to speak. More cracks open up and more of these little rivers form, until the great mass of ice contains a veritable network of independent streams.

At this time of the year the "chechako," or tenderfoot, may dig with pick and ax and shovel for 20 feet down through the ice to get water, all the time hearing its deep-toned gurgle somewhere beneath.

Finally he strikes almost dry sand in the bottom of the river, but no water. The "sour dough," on the other hand, is a water witch, after a fashion. With his ax he will peruse the surface, just as the physician does a man's chest, and oftentimes one blow will open up a crystal river. His ear never misleads him. The signs are infallible.

But the "sour dough" will find more than water down there. When night comes on he will cut a spruce torch from the forest near by whittle a harpoon out of pine knot, stand with his lighted torch at the hole he has made and pull out big fine fish until he and his dogs are satiated.—John A. Hornsby, in Toronto Sunday World.

Le Makes His Own Liquor.

A letter received at the Toronto Methodist mission rooms recently from R. W. Large, M.D., superintendent of the Bella Bella Hospital, British Columbia, says: "Owing to so much work around this part of the country at present, it is almost impossible to get the people to attend church," says Dr. Large. "Indians have been keeping from drunkenness of late, due to better co-operation between the managers of the various works and the policemen, although several of the tribe have just lately found out a way to manufacture an intoxicating liquor from a mixture of berries, rice, sugar, beans and apples. The ringleaders, however, have since been captured, and are now confined in the Provincial jail. Many Chinamen also have joined their comrades in the lock-up."

JAP PARTIES UNITE IN WAR PREPARATION.

Declare Nation can no Longer Endure Being Slighted.

Situation More Menacing Than at any Previous Period—Russia Determined to Reject Japan's Demands—British Government Said to be Considering the Situation—Grave Anxiety is Felt in Cabinet.

Tokio, Dec. 2.—All the leading Japanese journals denounce Russia's delay in replying to Japan's proposals, and declare that the nation can no longer endure being slighted. Japan, it is contended, must demand a definite answer, in default of which she must take independent steps to secure the interests of the State. Even business circles advocate a resolute policy, on which all the political parties are also agreed. The situation looks more menacing than at any previous period. The combination of the principal political parties is not yet complete, but evidently both are willing to support a resolute policy, and determined to attack the policy of inaction.

THE STRUGGLE NEAR.

Russia's Determination Not to Concede Japan's Demands is Fixed.

London, Dec. 2.—The Daily Mail this morning says it thinks it most likely that the Cabinet has received an intimation that Japan is aware of Russia's fixed determination not to concede her demands, in which case a struggle between Japan and Russia is within reasonable distance.

According to The Daily Mail's Tokio correspondent Marquis Saionyi, addressing members of the Seiyuai party yesterday, said that the coming session of the Diet involving the consideration of the problem of the Russo-Japanese relations would be one of the most momentous ever held and that a single false step might precipitate a national calamity. The Marquis depreciated any vexatious interference with the Government.

Alarm in Cabinet.

George Wyndham, Chief Secretary for Ireland, speaking at Workington last night, said that the Government had still a great deal of work to do and that it was not true that a general election was impending. This official confirmation that the Government is not meditating a dissolution of Parliament will increase the curiosity as to the reason for the holding of frequent Cabinet councils. Premier Balfour, Austin Chamberlain, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, had a conference at the Foreign Office and another Cabinet meeting will be held on Friday.

It is the general belief that the situation in the far East is causing anxiety, owing to the unexpected protracted negotiation between Russia and Japan.

Urge More Speed.

Tokio, Japan, Dec. 2.—A mass meeting of the Metropolitan section of the Seiyukai party yesterday passed a resolution denouncing the delay in the negotiations with Russian and urging their speedy prosecution.

BIRTHDAY OF QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

All Children on the Royal Estate Will Remember It.

London, Dec. 2.—Alternating sunshine and snowfalls marked Queen Alexandra's birthday celebrations yesterday at Sandringham. The Queen was busy all the morning receiving telegraphic and other greetings and replying thereto.

In the afternoon all the children on the royal estate were entertained at tea, the Queen personally supervising the wants of her guests.

Royal salutes were fired at all the naval and military stations at home and abroad, the warships were dressed, and there was a liberal display of bunting on the public buildings.

VESSEL AND POWER OWNERS.

Wait on Government and Request Conservation of Trent Valley Waters.

Toronto, Dec. 2.—A deputation representing the vessel owners of Peterboro, Bobcaygeon and Lakefield, who own about 45 vessels, including those engaged in the tourist traffic on the Kawartha Lakes, and also a number of power owners, who have dams in the district between Trenton and Fenelon Falls, waited on Premier Ross, Hon. J. R. Stratton and Hon. E. J. Davis yesterday afternoon and presented a request from the Trent Water Conservation Association that the Government take into consideration the question of arresting the enormous spring floods which pour out of the region and husbanding the water both for navigation and power purposes.

After listening to the representations of the deputation, the Premier observed that he would like the Dominion Government to move in the matter first. It was a large question, and would require very careful consideration on the part of the Government. He said he would consult with his colleagues, and in the meantime he asked that the engineer of the Association furnish an estimate of the cost of the work.

J. A. Culverwell, appointed by the Port Hope Canal Association and citizens of Port Hope to present a memorial opposing the scheme outlined by the Trent Valley Conservation Association, read the protest.

For Better Railway Facilities.

Montreal, Dec. 2.—About twenty-five gentlemen from towns between here and Toronto waited on Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C.P.R., yesterday afternoon in quest of better railway facilities. Another conference will be held shortly, when the C.P.R. may have a proposition to submit. The deputation invited the Canadian Pacific to construct a railway from Springbrook, a point on the Toronto-Montreal main line, near Central Ontario Junction, thence down through Campbellford, Warkworth (which has no railway at present), to Cobourg, and then westerly along the lake front through Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Oshawa, Whitby and Pickering, joining the main line again at a point near Agincourt.

Confesses to 18 Murders.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Charles Kruger, in jail at Greensburg, Pa., has confessed to the murder of Policemen Pennell and Devine in Chicago, and to the murder of sixteen other persons in Kentucky and the east. The prisoner has been sentenced to be hanged Jan. 14, 1904.

THE LABOR WORLD.

McKeesport Steel Mill Closes and Hundreds Are Out of Work—Ten Per Cent. Wage Reduction at Paterson, N.J.

Pittsburg, Dec. 2.—The Pittsburg Iron and Steel Works at McKeesport has announced an indefinite shutdown, and hundreds of men will be thrown out of work.

10 Per Cent Reduction.

Paterson, N.J., Dec. 2.—A ten per cent. reduction in wages went into effect at the plant of the Passaic Steel Company yesterday. The officials of the company, as well as the workmen, will be affected by the reduction. The workmen in the bridge and structural department were at first inclined to object, but finally decided to accept the cut for the present. The reduced wages will continue in force until the steel market shows signs of improving.

This Looks Better.

Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 2.—Stacks Nos. 1 and 3 at the Ohio works of the Carnegie Company were put in operation Monday night after being banked a month to reduce the output of pig iron. About three hundred employes returned to work. It is expected that operations will be resumed in a few days at No. 2 stack, and that No. 4 will follow as soon as completed.

To Remove Limit of Output.

Pittsburg, Dec. 2.—The officials of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers have set Jan. 10 for the convention of representatives of the sheet steel workers, who are to assemble to consider the removal of the limit of output.

Police and Strikers Collide.

Bordeaux, France, Dec. 2.—A collision between striking dock hands and the police late last night resulted in the wounding of 20 of the strikers. The mob was soon dispersed.

NO EXTREME MEASURE YET.

But Grand Trunk Telegraphers Expect a Decision Soon.

Toronto, Dec. 2.—The negotiations between the Grand Trunk and their 700 telegraphers east of the Detroit River has reached another stage. Owing to the company's delay in coming to terms the committee now here will be sent back and the matter handed over to the executive body for Canada to deal with.

The time limit for the company to deal with the committee here expired last night. No ultimatum, as has been stated, was given to the company. Further efforts will be made to reach an amicable settlement before taking any extreme measures.

The matter is likely to reach a conclusion within the next two weeks.

SURGEONS STRIKE.

Those at Kingston Hospital Decline to Serve Under Miss Flaws.

Kingston, Dec. 2.—The General Hospital was yesterday without house surgeons. At midnight the three packed their trunks and went out "on strike."

The trouble is this: Three months ago Dr. Haig, the medical superintendent resigned, and the Governors, in order to save expense, decided to initiate a new system by putting the lady superintendent of nurses, Miss Flaws, of Toronto, in charge of the hospital. The house surgeons objected to bring under a lady, and threatened to resign if a physician was not appointed over them, or they were put under the direct supervision of the Medical Board.

Yesterday Dr. Haig's time expired, and the house surgeons immediately ceased work.

MORE MONEY WANTED.

(Brantford Expositor.)

The cry everywhere is for more money. It is a cry heard in the Assessment committee of the Legislative Assembly. The municipalities are complaining that their expenditure, controllable and uncontrollable, is constantly growing, and they are insistent not only that their present sources of revenue should not be weakened, but that they should be put in an even better position than they at present occupy. The attorney-General sympathizes with this view, and at the same time declares that if the Provincial Government is to carry on the work in which which it has been engaged for many years past, it, too, must have more funds. In short, he intimates that further taxation of railroad and kindred corporations for the provincial benefit is an absolute necessity.

The Expositor has often called attention to the many financial burdens which the government of the province relieves the municipalities of, and in this connection it reproduces with pleasure the following appreciative remarks from The Toronto News, a newspaper notoriously unfriendly to the Ross Government:—

"The obligations the province has assumed, which otherwise would fall upon the municipalities, entail very heavy expenditures. The care of the insane alone is a considerable item in public accounts. It involves the maintenance of large institutions at Toronto, Hamilton, Brockville, Orillia, Mimico and London, which cost in the aggregate a large sum annually, which is continually increasing. To these must be added the institutions for the blind at Brantford, for the deaf and dumb at Belleville and for the mentally weak at Cobourg. Part of this burden might have been left to the cities and counties. But the work is performed with much greater efficiency and economy by the province than it ever could be by the individual municipalities. The care and oversight of neglected children as a duty undertaken at a comparatively recent date. The result of the work of the department has been extremely encouraging, and of undoubted advantage to the larger centres. Grants to hospitals also have the effect of relieving local taxpayers and adding to the provincial burdens. These, and like services, once undertaken, grow to dimensions perhaps not contemplated in the beginning.

The contributions to rural municipalities have been even greater than to urban communities. Agriculture has been stimulated by the farmers' institutes. The travelling cheese factory is partly responsible for the increase in the value of the cheese made in the province from $6,238,709 in 1893, to $14,792,924 in 1902. The encouragement of agriculture has been conducted with exceedingly good judgment and generosity, and it has cost a large sum, which must be raised in some way.

In the administration of the revenues of the province, the municipalities have been well treated. The various institutions have been, on the whole, well managed, and the Attorney-General may well point to the record of the Government in that particular with pride. The demands of the dependent classes have ever met with sympathetic consideration, while the charge of being unprogressive in advancing the basic industry of the province does not lie against the Liberal Government of Ontario. Revenues that once were ample for all these purposes are now insufficient, and the remarks of Hon. J. M. Gibson point to a determination to seek fresh sources of revenue in a field that is not by any means overworked. The time also is propitious. An excuse for a readjustment is found in the new Assessment Act, which everybody admits is long overdue. The prevailing prosperity will cause the people of the province to accept a law that will produce more revenue without murmuring when the taxes are levied on a different principle."

The Liberal Government has done very much for the people of this province in its financial management of their affairs, but, of course, it cannot make bricks without straw, and the time would seem to have come when, if this good work is to be continued there must be providing of means by the further taxation of those who are most able to bear it—namely the big corporations.

JUVENILE CRIMINALS.

The incubus of the law on the rising generation is revealed by the report of the English Prison Commission, says the Toronto Globe. In one case a boy was found to have been convicted 41 times in about four and a half years and to have served 30 short sentences of imprisonment. Of this boy's convictions thirteen were for playing cards on the street, eighteen for playing "pitch and toss," two for refusing to move on, one for sleeping out, one for willful damage to trees, two for playing football in the street, and three for stealing pigeons. The need of protecting a boy against an organized society that inflicts such a series of outrages is obvious, but there is no force that can be used for purposes of such protection. It is against such manifestations of aggression on the part of organized society that Anarchist writers utter their most effective protests. In such protests they are most difficult to answer, for they show that the individual, infant or adult, has no protection against the state.

Of the 41 convictions which this boy suffered only three were for stealing in any form. These offences all occurred on the same day, and they are the beginning of his criminal career. Through the prosecutions he learned, apparently for the first time, that free pigeons differed legally from sparrows in being private property. All the other offences, except that of sleeping out on a hot July night, were of the nature of boyish play. But the crimes perpetrated against him make a formidable list. He was fined forty times in sums varying from one to forty shillings. Six times the fine was paid and thirty times he served the stipulated sentence on account of inability to pay. On three occasions he paid part of the fine and served a proportionate part of the sentence. For one offence, that of sleeping out, the magistrate took a lenient view and discharged him with a caution.

This case cannot be regarded as isolated. Last year in England there were 1,034 boys and 29 girls between the ages of twelve and sixteen convicted by magistrates, and the number of convictions against persons between sixteen and twenty-one years of age reached 16,184. The great majority of these convictions were for trivial offences, for disregarding absurd and unnecessary laws, and for acts with which the state had no reasonable excuse for interfering. In Canada and some parts of the United States the initial move has been made to protect children against the law. The establishment of children's courts is in itself a long step in advance, as it recognizes the right of children to special consideration. The growing entanglement of law is so complicated that the ablest jurists continually differ as to the ownership of property in clearly specified cases. Yet we expect untaught children to know and conform to our multitude of restrictions. Their failure is inevitable, and if they escape the fate established for the criminal, it is owing to the fortunate and accidental incapacity of appointed officials. The advancement made in Canada and in some States of the American Union is attracting the attention of prison reformers in Britain. The report of the Prison Commission has called forth a series of letters in The Times, and there are other evidences of a coming recognition of the rights and claims of childhood.

The Fires of Eczema.

So keen is the suffering of many people who endure the stinging, itching sensations of Eczema that they speak of the skin as being on fire. By its soothing, healing, antiseptic influence Dr. Chase's Ointment positively cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and every form of itching skin disease. It is of inestimable value in every home, and when once introduced becomes a household necessity. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the standard the world over, and has no worthy rival.

WIN BLUE RIBBONS

GET MOST OF SHEEP AWARDS

High Praise For Canadian Exhibits From Noted Scotch Expert Who is Judging —Fancy Prices Paid For Dominion Top-Notchers in the Sales Pen— Canadian Horses Are Also Very Successful.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 2.—It was another day of Canadian victories in the International Live Stock Exposition. This time Clydesdales and Shorthorns from the Dominion, as well as more sheep and swine, carried off the blue ribbon. Col. Ferguson, the famous Scotland expert, who is a judge of the champion grades, declared that the Canadian prize-winners here would take prizes of equal value in any continental live stock exhibit. He said they were top-notchers for the best standard of the world.

In Southdown fat sheep, George A. Drummond, of Quebec, took first prize. He also secured third prize, while Telfer Bros. of Paris, secured the highly commended trophy. These were from the first class. There were two Canadians took second and third and highly commended trophy in a dozen classes.

In a pen of five wethers, Richard Gibson of Deleware, Ont., took second prize in Leicesters; John Orr of Galt, Kelly of Shakespeare, Campbell of Woodville, and Lloyd-Jones Bros. of Burford, took the bulk of the blue ribbons and cash prizes.

In the Cotswold sheep, Park of Burgessville, took first and J. C. Ross of Jarvis, second prizes. In Lincolns Gibson of Dentfield, won the champion wether prizes.

A Clydesdale Win.

In the champion wethers grades and cross breeds again were the Canadian sheep breeders leading the running. In the long wool types one year and under two, Kelly of Shakespeare won first, J. T. Gibson of Danfield, second and third, J. C. Ross, received trophy. Wether lambs, J. T. Gibson took first, second and third prize. In a pen of five wether lambs, Gibson of Dentfield took first prize. The two Gibsons, Richardson from Deleware and J. T. Gibson from Dentfield slaughtered the big sheep prizes. The champion lamb prize went to Richard Gibson. Five fat Cotswold lambs, belonging to Park of Burgessville, took first prize for the class, and he followed immediately by taking the champion wether Cotswold first prize.

Success With Southdowns.

In the Southdown classes the Canadian contingent took everything in first, second and thirds, George Drummond, Telfer Bros., and the Gibsons taking most of them.

Wethers one year and under two first and third prize, A. Drummond, Pt. Claire, Que. Reserved, Telfer Bros., Paris.

Pen of five wether lambs, first prize, Drummond; second prize, Telfer Bros.

Wether lambs, first prize, Richard Gibson, Delaware.

Fancy Prices Paid.

As rapidly as the Canadian prize-winners could be taken into the sales pens the bidding commenced. Some fancy prices were paid for the Dominion top notchers. Many prize Canadian sheep were taken for the western States and some for Mexico and South America.

Coming to Guelph.

Preparations are completed for many of the largest exhibits on the grounds to be shipped to the Guelph Fair as soon as this one closes. Col. Ferguson, Messrs. Richardson, Gibson and others interested in sending exhibits to Guelph say the exhibition there ought to be the largest in the history of the province.

Challenger, owned by the University of Nebraska, is grand champion of the International Live Stock Exposition of 1903. Challenger is a grade Hereford. He is 2 years and 7 months old and weighs 1,755 pounds, almost every ounce of him being good solid beef, while other and finer looking animals to the unpracticed eye rolled in fat.

St. Lawrence Casualties.

London, Dec. 2.—The Times' Lloyd's correspondent says casualties on the St. Lawrence have been numerous this year, in spite of the improvements the Canadian Government claims to have introduced. Of fifteen casualties eight got off with slight damage, three badly damaged, one damaged and three total loss. In 1902 there were eleven casualties, no total loss; in 1901 five strandings without total loss; in 1900 five casualties, four total losses; 1899, four casualties, one total loss; 1898 three total losses out of five strandings.

A Denial From the Admiralty.

London, Dec. 2.—The Admiralty officials deny the statement from Port of Spain, Trinidad, that the British West Indian Squadron was to leave there Thursday for La Guaira, Venezuala.

Howden By Acclamation.

Winnipeg, Dec. 2.—Dr McRae has declined the Liberal nomination in Beautiful Plains, and Mr. Howden, the Conservative candidate, will be elected by acclamation to-day.

The Solar Plexus.

Is the largest nerve centre in the sympathetic nervous system, is situated just back of the stomach, and supplied nervous energy, the vital force of the human body, to the stomach, heart, lungs, kidneys, liver, etc. By creating more force Dr. Chase's Nerve Food directly aids the solar plexus in supplying the power which runs the machinery of digestion and so cures nervous dyspepsia, headache, dizzy spells and bodily weakness.

From the Firm of Bennet & Wright, Plumbing, Heating and Electrical Contractors, Toronto.

This is to certify that Duncan McGregor has been in our employment steady for about fifteen years and, during that time we have found him to be steady, honest and trustworthy. He has given every satisfaction as a practical mechanic in each of the following branches: Plumbing, steam and gas fitting, also electrical and conduit work, and for some time has had charge of some of our largest contracts with satisfactory results.

From Illsley & Horn, General Contractors, Toronto.

The bearer, Mr. Duncan McGregor, had charge of the electric wiring at the King Edward Hotel Building. The job was a large and complicated one and by the way Mr. McGregor handled the work he proved himself a mechanic of more than ordinary ability. We unhesitatingly recommend him as a first-class mechanic to anyone needing his services.

From Mr. J. Ross Robertson, of the Evening Telegram.

Mr. Duncan McGregor, who has been connected with the Bennet & Wright Co. for some years, and who has superintended the work of plumbing and heating for the Bennet & Wright Co., is not only in my opinion, but also that of my architect, a fully competent mechanic. His work, my architect, informs me, has been most satisfactory. Anything that has come under my own supervision has been likewise satisfactory.

An Extract Taken from the June Number of Domestic Engineering.

During the recent convention of the Canadian Electrical Association held in the King Edward Hotel, a thorough examination was made of all the electrical work in the hotel, and it was pronounced second to none on the continent. Therefore, great credit is due Mr. Duncan MacGregor, who superintended the entire conduit, electrical and power system for the firm of Bennet & Wright, of this city, who were the contractors for all the different branches of the electrical work in the new hotel.

A HINT THAT WAS TAKEN.

Why Lord Salisbury Wanted the Signboard Removed.

The chateau of Lord Salisbury was at Beaulieu, France, and that he might have peace and rest there he once made a quaint request of the mayor of Villefranche. The house stood on high, well wooded ground and was approached by carriage from the old Corniche road. The inaccessibility of the position and consequent quiet and peace pleased the Premier greatly. The gardens were so large and the gate kept by a Cerberus so stern that the most enterprising tourist found little to repay his curiosity after his climb. When Lord Salisbury first took possession of La Bastide the mayor of Villefranche, M. Polonais, called upon him to bid him welcome and hospitably assured him that any wish his lordship might express would, if possible, be instantly gratified by himself and his councillors.

"Then I will take you at your word," replied the Premier. "I wish much that the new signboard you have put up on the road leading here marked 'Avenue Salisbury' be taken away."

"But we put it up," stammered the mayor, "in order to let people find their way to your villa."

"Ah," sighed Lord Salisbury, "I see so many people at home and should like most of them to lose their way to La Bastide!"

The hint was taken.

The Duke's Armored Train.

The Duke of Bedford has caused a good deal of amusement to the inhabitants of Woburn by his latest investment, a sort of miniature armored train, consisting of a truck, painted brown like the Duke's livery and drawn by a small steam motor. Both the motor and the truck are protected by high sides, so that the Duke can go in safely into the inclosure where he keeps the wilder animals of his wonderful zoo at Woburn. Some of these beasts are inclined to be restive at times, and the Duke had a narrow escape from being damaged by a large specimen of deer which turned ferocious one day while the Duke and a somewhat stout friend were in the inclosure inspecting various newcomers. The inclosures are fenced round with very high palings, and the Duke, who is active and slim, was soon on the outside, but his friend had more difficulty and only escaped by a very narrow squeak; hence the new importation, and now the Duke and his friends can steam round the park in safety.—M. A. P.

Dido's Kat Pork.

It happened in a crowded railway carriage. A very fat and bumptious man was making a general nuisance of himself to the other occupants of the carriage, explaining in a loud voice his cuteness and success in most things. Some of the people in the carriage smiled pityingly, some merely looked bored, but one solemn individual eyed the fat boaster with a stony and immovable stare. The latter at last became uneasy under this unwinking scrutiny and, turning to the man, said blusteringly:

"Well, what yer looking at me like that for? Want to eat me?"

"No," was the crushing rejoinder. "I'm a Hebrew."—London Answers.

As the Year Passes.

The crisp rustle of the leaves grows more pleasing as the brown transitory covering deepens in the hallows and yields to the caprices of vagrant winds. Where the red maple still displays its foliage it is the most brilliant of forest trees. Every leaf has a special design in crimson, yellow, and green. Some are daintly tipped with the richest hues, others vary their brilliant reds with a tracery of pale yellow and surviving green, while others show a uniform richness of color in every vein and fibre. When the sun looks through and the wind pulls at the clinging foliage the masses of color glow and gleam in vivid intensity. The oaks still cling to their rich and varied foliage, and seem scarcely to miss their generous contribution to the crisp covering on the ground. They like to retain their leaves, and often a brown bunch will remain here and there throughout the winter, gathering a transient load of snow from every storm. In this they show a sympathy with some of their evergreen relatives in the south. Branches stand out in more distinct tracery as the leaves are cast aside. The silver birches are almost disrobed, and their clear, graceful outlines lend distinction to the changing landscape. The cedars, spruces, and hemlocks in their perennial green become conspicuous in the fading and disappearing foliage. The dense banks and masses of verdure that blended with the surrounding woods in the fullness of summer now stand out distinctly among the half-denuded branches, and their shelter invites the loitering feathered visitors on their southern migration.—Toronto Globe.

HUNTER STREET WEST

SCHOONER DISAPPEARS.

Witnessed By Mrs. Walter Sharp Two Miles From Brighton.

Brighton, Dec. 2.—On Tuesday, Nov. 17, Mrs. Walter Sharp, living about two miles west of here on the lake shore, noticed a three-masted schooner, apparently in distress, about a mile and a half southwest of the "Bluff." While watching it Mrs. Sharp saw it suddenly disappear. The wind was blowing a gale at the time. Mrs. Sharp is positive she saw the vessel, and it apparently did not move from the position which she first saw it until its disappearance.

Mrs. Sharp's story is corroborated by several other people living near her place. The hull of the vessel was first seen in the morning rising and falling with the heavy sea. It appeared to be about a mile and a half southwest of the "Bluff" and about two miles from shore slowly drifting closer to the shore, the wind being south, southwest at the time. The hull was last seen in the afternoon not far from the place where it was first sighted.

Mrs. Sharp called to a man by the name of Chatten to come and see what it was and he took a range where she was last seen. Nothing so far has been found to identify the hull as that of the missing schooner. A thorough search of the shores of the "Bluff" may reveal some wreckage from the missing schooner, but as yet no one has attempted to cross from the mainland.

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK

Food taken into the stomach which from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them they must be starved. It would be just as sensible for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man to starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them. They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good strong healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbance in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the sustenance and maintenance of the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means body and brain get all the good, nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry out his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some now fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a year-old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken limb, which is of course not used during the process of repair.

A SMASH NEAR BRANTFORD.

Eleven G.T.R. Cars Smashed to Kindling Wood on T. and St. T. Branch.

Brantford, Ont., Dec. 2.—A most peculiar wreck occurred on the Tilsonburg and St. Thomas line of the Grand Trunk, about one mile west of this city, shortly before 12 o'clock Monday night. A freight of 25 cars was running between St. Thomas and Hamilton, and when the train passed Cressewell's curve the truck of the fifth car suddenly broke. The car jumped the track and carried ten other succeeding cars over a 15-foot embankment.

The front and rear of the train on which were the train hands remained intact. No one was hurt.

Two sheep were killed and large quantities of wood, flour and oatmeal were strewn along the track. The eleven cars were smashed to kindling wood.

Dowie's Finish in Sight.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—Judge Kohlsaat, in the United States District Court last night, appointed Fred M. Blount and Albert D. Currie, receivers in bankruptcy for the property of John Alexander Dowie at Zion City on petitions of three creditors, alleging an indebtedness of $1,169. The petitioners allege that Dowie is insolvent, and has made preferential payments. The receivers went to Zion City and took possession.

Shot in Forearm.

Toronto, Dec. 2.—As Colin Campbell was jumping the low fence on the lake shore side of the Woodbine track the gun in his hand discharged and three shot entered his left forearm, which, with a burn, makes it very painful. The boy is only 14 years old and lives at Kew Beach.

THE PREMIER DENIES RUMOR

No Instance of Permanent Injury to British Trade Through Dumping—Colonial Secretary Lyttleton's Address at the Northcote Banquet—Mr. Stead Makes Offer to Newspapers—Cheap Wheat.

London, Dec. 2.—(C.A.P.)—Lloyd George, M.P., speaking at Paisley last night, said there was not a single great industry the production of which had not increased considerably out of proportion to the population, and the only thing that had gone down was the hours of the laborer. Dumping was not killing the iron and steel trade, as last year they bought eight and a half million pounds' worth of half manufactured steel from foreigners dumped at a less, and exported steel to the value of twenty-nine million pounds at a profit.

Winston Churchill, speaking at Cardiff, said it was absolutely necessary that the fiscal question should be threshed out in the House of Commons, where any discrepancies in the argument could be exposed.

James Bryce, M.P., speaking at Aberdeen, said there was no instance of permanent injury to British trade through dumping. Retaliation meant the sacrifice of fiscal freedom, and it would injure the export trade to wipe out the most favored nation clause, and raise prices for our own people to introduce protection.

Lord Lyttleton, speaking at a banquet at Northcote last night, said: "The greatest of all national aspirations is how to increase the sympathy, conviction, mutual knowledge and interest among the great states that compose the Empire. If we grasp the fact that the colonies are willing to draw near, then we have the secret of perpetual youth."

Onslow on Land Values.

The Earl of Onslow, speaking at Darlington yesterday, said that the depreciation in the value of land in Great Britain was greater than the whole amount of the national debt.

W. T. Stead wants to hire one thousand girls at 5 shillings per week to sell his new daily.

Anthony S. Rowe, Secretary of the Fingal Company, who was recently extradited from Toronto, has been committed for trial on charges of embezzlement and forgery.

Denial From Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

All the English papers print a letter from Sir Wilfrid Laurier denying the statement that a scheme had been prepared by the Government of Canada to raise a great sum for Imperial defence, but it was dropped through Chamberlain's policy, frightening the French-Canadians.

Professor Hewins, speaking at the Great Northern Railway athletic dinner said that the fall in freights between England and the world, was one of the chief causes of the fall in prices of wheat and other agricultural products.

Insanely Reckless Miners.

Vancouver, Dec. 2.—There are some miners who will persist in lighting matches and smoking pipes in coal mines with the imminent danger of killing themselves and their fellow-workers and of causing great loss of property. The law is stringent on this point. Previously offenders were fined, but as fines have not proved a sufficient deterrent, the penalty has been changed to a month's hard labor without the option of a fine.

Canadian Telephone Co's Chance.

Ottawa, Dec. 2.—The Telephone Committee of the City Council met last night to consider a proposition from the Canadian Telephone Company. The committee will recommend the Council to grant a one year franchise, the company to pay $2,500 a year, supply 40 free telephones to the city and put in business phones at $36 and house phones at $22

To Honor Strathcona.

London, Dec. 2.—The Edinburgh Town Council yesterday unanimously resolved to confer the freedom of the city upon Lord Strathcona next Friday, when His Lordship will be the guest of the Edinburgh Merchants' Company.

Will Open in State.

London, Dec. 2.—King Edward has decided to open the coming session of Parliament with full state ceremony. The royal procession will pass down the Mall, the newly-selected route, for the first time.

Medal For Sir Wilfrid.

Ottawa, Dec. 2.—Application is made for a Fenian raid medal for the Prime Minister. When a youth he belonged to the Arthabaskaville volunteers' and turned out for active duty in 1866.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

The Best of Three!

After a criminal case in which Sir Frank Lockwood had secured an acquittal for the prisoners, Lord Brampton, then Sir Henry Hawkins, privately congratulated him on the excellent way in which he had conducted the case and remarked especially on the alibi that had been established. "Yes," was the characteristic reply, "I thought it was pretty good—anyhow, the best of the three I had offered to me!"—Golden Penny.

HAPPY AND HEALTHY.

A Beautiful Canadian Girl Saved From Catarrh of the Lungs by Pe-ru-na.

MISS FLORENCE KENAH.

Miss Florence E. Kenah, 434 Maria street, Ottawa, Ont., writes:

"A few months ago I caught a severe cold, which settled on my lungs and remained there so persistently that I became alarmed. I took medicine without benefit, until my digestive organs became upset, and my head and back began to ache severely and frequently.

"I was advised to try Peruna, and although I had little faith I felt so sick that I was ready to try anything. It brought me blessed relief at once, and I felt that I had the right medicine at last. Within three weeks I was completely restored and have enjoyed perfect health since.

"I now have the greatest faith in Peruna." R. B. KENAH.

WOMEN should beware of contracting catarrh. The cold wind and rain, slush and mud of winter are especially conducive to catarrhal derangements. Few women escape.

Upon the first symptoms of catching cold Peruna should be taken. It fortifies the system against colds and catarrh.

Miss Rose Gerbing is a popular society woman of Crown Point, Ind., and she writes the following:

"Recently I took a long drive in the country, and being too thinly clad I caught a bad cold which settled on my lungs, and which I could not seem to shake off. I had heard a great deal of Peruna for colds and catarrh and I bought a bottle to try. I am pleased that I did, for it brought speedy relief. It only took about two bottles, and I considered this money well spent.

"You have a firm friend in me, and I not only advise its use to my friends, but have purchased several bottles to give to those without the means to buy, and have noticed without exception that it has brought about a speedy cure wherever it has been used."—Miss Rose Gerbing.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

An Old Hunter's Advice.

Here is the advice an old hunter gives to those who may come in unexpected contact with bad animals:

"If you are cornered by a snake stand motionless and he will never bite.

"If a vicious dog attacks you show him a knife or some similar instrument, and he will keep out of reach. A dog can never learn the deadliness of a revolver or a gun, but unless he has the rabies he knows how to respect a knife.

"If a swarm of wild bees attacks you stand motionless and let out all your breath. Then only a few of the swarm will sting."

This advice should be reversed at sea. A man who is swimming in shark infested waters is safe as long as he kicks about and makes a great deal of noise. The shark is too timid to approach anything that looks as if it might to fight.

"What would you do in case you were cornered by a cinnamon bear?" some one asked the old hunter.

"Say my prayers," he answered laconically.

TWO PETERBOROUGH INVENTOR'S SUCCESS.

Mr. R. J. Chowen and Mr. wm Hartly Have Been Granted U. S. Patents

On Warping Reels Which They Have Invented—Negotiations in progress for sale to United States Manufacturers.

Working away quietly and unostentatiously two gentlemen in Peterborough have achieved a triumph in invention, which, if all present indications count for anything, will stamp the inventors as being in the foremost rank in Canada. The men to whom credit is due for having perfected a device which has already amply evidenced its value, are Mr. Richard J. Chowen and Mr. William Hartly, the former master mechanic at the Auburn Woollen Mills and the latter boss weaver at the same place. and the invention which has been so successful in its application is that of an improved warping reel. This reel has been in use in the Auburn Mills here, as well as in a number of other Canadian woollen mills for some time, and a patent has now been granted on the invention in the United States. The owners have just received from the Patent Office in Washington the notification of the granting of the United States Patent.

There is a most interesting history in connection with the discovery of this device. Mr. Hartley, in his 25 years' service with the Auburn Woollen Mills was impressed with the fact that the reels previously used, were not working satisfactorily as could be desired, and, with his interest in his work, which is characteristic of every successful man, he set himself to the task of making an improvement. In this he associated himself with Mr. R. J. Chowen and together they evolved the idea which has since been perfected and applied to the machines here, giving satisfaction and increased efficiency.

The invention relates to that class of warping reel or section builder for woollen or worsted dressing machines in which the section pins are entirely dispensed with and the more modern practice of section-building employed, whereby the deposits of yarn or fibrous material are formed in regular layers one upon the other into substantially truncated cones and in such a manner that one of each sections, viz. the first, becomes a form or guide for the laying of the subsequent sections in a regular series of like cone-shape deposits in the reel in its rotation, until the desired number of ends constituting the warp are obtained. The invention consists of an improved mechanism for automatically operating the machine longitudinally synchronously with the rotation of the warp-wheel whereby the ribbon-like form of fibrous material is fed to the reel with a gradual and uniform lead to the end upon which the section building is commenced. The invention consists also of an improved form of indicator for automatically registering the width of each section. The object is to give an efficient, durable and readily-operated warping reel, simple in construction and positive in operation, effecting a saving of time and giving a superior resultant material in such a condition as to give a uniform quality of warp.

Mr. Hartley said to the Examiner that the results from its use here and in other mills where it had been employed were entirely satisfactory and the inventors have good grounds for hoping that a very material advantage will accrue to them from its application in mills throughout America and Europe. Mr. Hartley will leave inside of a week for Northendover, Mass., to complete negotiations with the Davis Furber Company for the sale of the patent rights for the United States. Negotiations are also in progress with a New York firm for the sale of the rights for England, Belgium, France and Sweden, from the sale of which the inventors expect to realize a handsome sum. All manufacturers to whom the details of the invention have been explained at once recognize its great value and no difficulty is anticipated in being able to place the improved mechanism in almost every weaving mill in America.

Mr. Chowen and Mr. Hartley are receiving congratulations from their friends on their success, which their years of work richly deserved.

OTTAWA UNIVERSITY DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Capital Visited by Very Disastrous Fire This Morning.

Main Building Burned to the Ground—Loss Nearly Half a Million Dollars.

(Special to the Examiner.)

Ottawa, December 2. — The University of Ottawa is on fire, and will be a complete loss; three or four persons have received injuries, but there are no fatalities so far as known. The loss will be $300,000.

Ottawa, Dec. 2. — Later. — The main building of the University of Ottawa was completely destroyed by fire this morning. What was last night the scene of a busy hive of students is now a huge pile of crumbling stone. The building extended a block and went up with marvellous rapidity, there being no fire wall from one end of the building to the other. The students and professors had a thrilling time of it making their escape, and that there is not a great casualty list is a surprise. Down ladders they scrambled in scant clothing, while many jumped three stories into nets held by the firemen. As it was several were more or less injured, and one priest, Rev. Father McGuaty, assistant curate of St. Joseph's church, may die. Collins, a student from Winnipeg, is also badly burned. Many others are slightly injured. The interior of the building was largely wooden, and the students' dormitories burned like fury. The gorgeous chapel with its elaborate trappings, also made an intensely hot fire, and completely paralyzed the work of the brigade. The fire broke out about 7 30 o'clock, and is supposed to have started from a cigar stub or match dropped by some one at an entertainment in the Academy last night. The loss is estimated at $400,000.

One student from Peterborough, Mr. Frank McDonald, is attending the above university, the only one from this town. There are a number there from Lindsay. Father Fitzpatrick, of Enniamore, is a graduate.

MUSKOKA RESIDENT MET DEATH IN LAKE,

Nephew of Mrs. Farnum, of Peterborough, Drowned While Going for Supplies.

Mrs. Farnum, of 20 College street, has received particulars with reference to the untimely end of her nephew, Mr. William M. Morse, who, with his companions, was drowned in Lake Muskoka, presumably on Tuesday night of last week.

The particulars, as far as they can be learned, are that William Morse, a farmer living about ten miles from Gravenhurst, accompanied by two neighbours, Mr. Walker, and Mr. Campbell, the former a captain, and the latter an engineer of a small steamer, left by the steamer for Bracebridge to purchase their winter supplies. The trip was made on Tuesday, and when the party left home in the morning they told their families that as the day was windy they might not return that day but remain in Bracebridge over night. Consequently when they did not return the same night no anxiety was felt. When Wednesday had passed and still no signs of their return a search was instituted and on Thursday pieces of wreckage of the boat were found on Le Warren Island, which were identified by Mr. Campbell's father as belonging to the lost steamer. The supposition is that they were on the return trip and had almost reached home when in the gale they were wrecked almost within sight of their own doors.

The bodies have not been found but this is not surprising, as Muskoka Lake is very deep and cases have occurred where persons have been drowned, and their bodies have not yet been recovered.

THREATENED TO SHOOT A BAPTIST MINISTER.

A Very Interesting Case at the Local Police Court.

Edgar H. Crockford Charged With Threatening Rev. W. T. Lorymer, of Sawyerville, P. Q.

At the police court this morning, Edgar H. Crockford, who was arrested in Toronto a short time ago, and brought to town, was charged before Police Magistrate D. W. Dumble, with writing a letter to Mrs. Rev. W. T. Lorymer of Sawyerville, Quebec, in which he threatened to shoot her husband, Rev. Wm. Tindal Lorymer, pastor of the Baptist church at that place.

Crown Attorney R. E. Wood appeared for the prosecution, D. O'Connell for the prisoner, and E. B. Edwards, K.C., for Rev. Mr. Lorymer.

Mr. H. C. Rogers was the first to be called. On being sworn, he said: I am postmaster at Peterborough. The envelope, (Crockford's alleged letter), was marked by the postal clerk between 6 and 8 a.m. on Nov. 7th, at the local office. The night clerk stamps all correspondence up to midnight, so that the letter in question was mailed before 8 o'clock on Nov. 7th. It left for the east on the noon train.

MR. LORYMER EXAMINED.

Rev. W. T. Lorymer, sworn, said—I was ordained last year, and am a Baptist minister. I was stationed in Parry Sound in May, 1902. The prisoner, who is a married man and has a family, lived at that time in Parry Sound. He had been there for some years, and was a member of the Baptist church. I was then unmarried, and boarded with him and and his wife. There was another boarder in the house at the time. I went to live with him during the end of May or early part of June, and remained there until January, 1903. Our relations during that time were of the best. My father came to live with me at the end of August, 1902. I left Parry Sound for Sawyerville, Quebec, where on November 9th I got a letter in which prisoner threatened to take my life. My father handed me the letter which was addressed to my wife. I held it open while she read it. After she had finished she told me to read it, which I did. I next gave it to my father to copy and afterwards mailed it to Col. E. B. Edwards at Peterborough. I identify the handwriting as prisoner's as I have seen him write and posted his letters. While I was boarding at his home he spoke of going to Toronto to look for work, but I discouraged him. After he had left for Toronto he wrote to his sister in law, Miss Scott, a girl about 17 years of age, a letter in which he made very grave insinuations regarding my character. I wrote to him at once ordering him to withdraw his allegations or I would immediately institute police court proceedings. He replied asking forgiveness and withdrawing all his statements. I file this letter in which it will be seen that he based his accusations on a dream, in which he said he saw a vision. Later the prisoner came back to Parry Sound, where I saw him and spoke to him. On June 22nd he drew up an agreement of separation between himself and his wife. They had lived very unhappily for several years. The separation agreement was signed by both himself and his wife, and was drawn up by my father, in whose possession it was left. After signing this agreement Crockford returned to Toronto. On my way to Sawyerville I stopped at Toronto for a few days and spoke to the prisoner. Previous to this I had received a signed withdrawal from the prisoner relating to his geflections against my character which were becoming to be public property. After I had gone to Sawyerville, prisoner continued the correspondence which was, on the whole, friendly in tone. Some, however, brought up his former allegations. After my marriage on April 24th, I passed through Peterborough on my way to Parry Sound to visit my father who was ill. I did not see prisoner on that trip but saw prisoner's wife who was then staying with her mother. I continued to receive letters from prisoner after returning to Sawyerville, but I did not reply to them. I came to Peterborough in August to take charge of the Baptist church during Mr. Bastow's absence on his holidays. This arrangement was made some time previous while in Peterborough. Crockford, who had also arrived here, issued a writ against me, claiming damages for the alienation of his wife's affections. The day before this I received a letter from him, dated August 7th. The writ has, I believe, since been dropped.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

To Mr. O'Connell.—I was married on April 24th last. I am an Englishman and have been in Canada for ten years. I was 33 years old last June. For four years before my ordination I was a student preacher and before that was a labourer on a farm. I paid my own passage across. In England my name was the same as I now hold. I travelled as William Tindal (my two first names) for some years. I have a wound in my face caused by an operation for an abcess. It was not the result of shooting. I had no trouble with another man's wife in England and was never convicted of a crime. I have known the prisoner since June 1902, when I met him in Parry Sound. I was in Peterborough when Mrs. Crockford was at Stony Lake this summer. She came to town on one occasion to met my wife. I was not instrumental to her visiting us.

John Lorymer sworn.—I came to Canada in August, 1902, and went to Parry Sound where I lived until January, 1903, boarding at the prisoner's house.

To Mr. O'Connel.—I am father of the last witness. He never got into trouble in England and was not a wild boy.

Mrs. W. T. Lorymer.—I am the wife of Rev. W. T. Lorymer and identify the letter exhibited as the one which I received from Mr. Crockford.

Mr. Langford and Col. E. B. Edwards were also placed in the witness box but no important evidence was obtained.

The court then adjourned until 3.30 o'clock this afternoon.

The conclusion of the case will appear in to-morrow evening's Examiner.

INQUEST IN THE COUNCIL CHAMBER

Enquiry Into Death of the Late John Donnelly.

AN OLD G. T. R. EMPLOYEE.

Was Knocked Down by a Horse on Tuesday Night, Nov. 24th—The Evidence Which was Taken.

The inquest into the death of Mr. John Donnelly, gate keeper in the employ of the G. T. R., who died on Sunday evening from wounds received on Tuesday, Nov. 24th, while discharging his duties at the Charlotte street crossing, where he acted as night watchman, was held last evening. The jury was composed as follows: C. N. Brown, foreman; F. M. Cobb, J. Mongraw, J. McPherson, M. L. Henry, W. H. Dayman, D. W. Little, B. R. Poole, F. Burdette, W. H. Isaac, J. D. Hardill, J. Irwin, D. Menzies and S. A. Oke.

THE EVIDENCE

The first witness called was Bert Young, who, on being sworn said:—I am an engineer in the employ of the G.T.R. Company. I was on the engine at the time when the deceased received the injuries which resulted in his death. My engine at the time was going to Lindsay about half past nine on Tuesday, Nov. 24th. As I was nearing the Charlotte street crossing I heard horses hoofs and heard a man about "Woa." A white signal light then went up in the air and went out. I stopped the engine, but did not see the deceased, who was picked up by several persons present, one of whom was a brakeman and one a conductor.

To Mr. Moore—There are three tracks on the street—I was on the main line, or centre track. My engine was travelling about 3 miles an hour. I having only gone a few yards. I stopped my engine within a few minutes on putting on the emergency brakes and in fact had not reached the middle of Charlotte street. The white light is used as a signal at a crossing. Mr. Donnelly had not put down the gates, of which he had charge.

To Mr. Edwards—The horse crossed about 10 feet in front of the engine. There is no doubt that Mr. Donnelly was struck by the horse, as I was not ten feet from him when the light was jerked from his hand. He was not thrown by the horse against the engine, which, however, I am told just touched him. I do not know if the engine pushed him along. I did not alight as there were enough around the man. The injury was due to the horse striking him in the chest. After the accident I stopped at once, within a few feet. I believe my engine at the time was drawing one or two cars, I having been getting water prior to making up my train. At the time of the accident Mr. Donnelly was on the east side of the engine. I was at the time moving forward to get over the switch and on to the track where my train stood.

Chas. E. Tamblyn was next called. He said :—I am a G.T.R. fireman and was on the train in question. I heard someone shout "woa," and saw the same as Mr. Young. After the emergency brakes were put on I do not think the train travelled more than three feet. I saw the horse and cutter run across in front of the engine. The gates at the time were up.

To Mr. Moore. I think it was Mr Donnelly's duty to put the gates down Our engine was about twenty or twenty-five feet from the gates. I did not see the horse approaching, as I was on the left hand side of the engine. I did not see the deceased.

To Mr. Edwards—I do not think we had got half way across the crossing before we stopped, but do not know positively. I do not know why the gates were not down. There were no lights on the gates at the time. We had no cars behind the engine. I do not know where the conductor was at the time.

THE THIRD WITNESS.

Frank Emsley, on being sworn, said—I was on the steps on the east side of the engine at the time of the accident. I first saw the light go up in the air, and heard some one shout "Whoa!" I think it was someone on the street who made the command. The engine then stopped very suddenly. I got off and went to the front of the engine, where I found Mr. Donnelly, lying touching the pilot. His head was to the west. The pilot was only just touching his back He was lying on his left side on his elbow, facing the north; he was conscious. Two or three passers by came to his assistance and raised him up, and assisted him to the signal house. I heard him remark that it was not the engineer's fault, but the horse's; I heard nothing further. He had some blood on his head, but was apparently not seriously hurt. I saw the horse on the west side of the engine; I did not see it approaching.

To Mr. Edwards — When Mr. Donnelly made the above remark he was going through the signal house door. When I found him his head was not touching the pilot. He did not appear to have been dragged along. The blood was on his forehead. It was quite dark, and although I was looking up the tracks, I did not see the horse. The white light went up a little to the east of the tracks. I think he was clear of track when struck by the horse, and thrown in front of the engine. I am positive that the engine was stopped within two or three feet. I passed the gates several times that evening and on each occasion they were up.

To Mr. Moore—The engine had not gone more than ten feet across Charlotte street at the time of the accident. We appeared to be about ten feet away from the light when it went up into the air. It was the deceased's duty to operate the gates. The deceased was not held down by the gates.

George Jobbett was next sworn. He said—I was conductor on the train in question. On the engine stopping I got off and ran forward. There I saw Mr. Donnelly, who said he was hurt.

To Mr. Edwards—There were no cars with the engine at the time. The gates were up; I did not notice any lights on them. I heard that Mr. Donnelly was struck by a horse, but did not get any information from the deceased himself.

Wm. Coombes was next sworn. He said—I was a brakeman on the train but I neither saw the accident nor the injured man, as I was with the train on the main line. I saw the engine move forward and stop.

Nelson King on being sworn said—I work in the station yard but did not see anything of the accident; I went to the crossing at the time Mr. Donnelly had been taken to the signal house. I do not know if the gates were opened or closed. There were no lamps on the gates. I worked in the signal house all night after Mr. Donnelly was hurt. Signal lamps for the gates were in the house. These had not been used, and I put them on the gates between 11 and 12 o'clock. I did not notice any break in the lamp glasses.

To Mr. Edwards—When a train came in I went out with a lantern to warn the public. The red lamps I found at the back of the signal house, in, I suppose, their usual place. I did not examine the lanterns closely, but I think they were not broken as they burned successfully all night.

ROFT. HARDING TESTIFIES.

Robert Harding, sworn, said — I was in the gate house at the time of the accident having been speaking to Mr. Donnelly. Talking about the gates as the engine came along and as Mr. Donnelly went out with white light, he said, "I don't know what the company's coming to; they can't even give me a lantern glass." I did not see the lanterns. After he went out I looked out of the window. I heard a rig coming as the engine was moving from the water tank. I heard some one shout, "Hold on! Hold on!" There was a crash as I ran to the door. I found Mr. Donnelly lying on the tracks with the pilot pressing on his shoulder. I and Mr. Stocker lifted him up. He cried out with pain, exclaiming, "It's all here," as he put his hand over his heart. He did not say how he was hurt. The pilot was just barely moving and was pushing him along.

To Mr. Moore — When he shouted "Hold on" he was probably signalling to both the engine and the driver of the horses. The engine came about two-thirds of the way across the crossing. When the deceased shouted "Hold on" he was about eight feet from the locomotive. He then ran forward to stop the rig but I do not know whether he cross in front of the engine. I noticed that his head was bleeding from three cuts, but he complained of his chest.

To Mr. Edwards.—I did not see the lanterns in the signal house but observed that they were not on the gates. I do not know if the bell of the engine was ringing at the time. The rig was coming at a fast rate. I did not notice the horse or the occupants of the cutter. I did not see the light fly in the air. I presume that the shaft struck him. The horse crossed Bethune street at a furious rate. When I saw him I think that the pilot was lifting him. His coat was covered with snow and mud from the street. We stripped him that night but I did not observe any mark on his chest. There was blood on his face. The wound in his head was made by something sharp. The whole affair occurred very quickly. I imagine that he was thrown by the horse against the engine.

PICKED HIM UP

Walter Stocker, on being sworn, said.—At the time of the accident I was a few feet across the tracks going east. I noticed a horse and cutter. The animal appeared to be frightened at the train. I heard a shout and then a thud. I helped to pull the deceased from in front of the cow catcher of the engine, which was very slowly pushing him along. He was lying as has been previously described. We took him to the signal box, where he complained of the pain in his chest. He also complained that people were careless when crossing. I did not hear him say anything about the lights for the gates, which at the time were up. I stayed with him for an hour.

To Mr. Moore.—I do not remember Mr. Donnelly making any other statements. When his shirt was removed a red bruise about five inches square was revealed. He had a lump on his back about two or three inches square. I did not hear him say how he was hurt. When the accident occurred I was about ten feet distant. The engine at the time was moving very slowly. I saw it move his body 8 or 10 feet. I did not observe him being struck. I heard some one shouting but did not know anything until I heard the thud. I looked around and rushed to his help. I did not see the horse afterwards. I noticed the gates were up.

To Mr. Edwards—The moment I looked around the engine was touching him. I saw the wounds in his head but they did not seem serious. I did not ask him how he had been struck. I think the locomotive caused the horse to shy.

Harry Donnelly, on being sworn, said—When I reached my father, Mr. Stocker and Mr. Harding were picking him up. He was taken into the signal house. I noticed the cuts on the forehead and began to bathe them with cold water. He however complained of his chest. Late that night he said he was standing on the crossing, when the shaft of the cutter struck him and he fell in front of the approaching engine. He appeared to roll over in an attempt to get off the track. My father told me that when he first noticed the rapid approach of the vehicle, and the motion of the train he moved east to meet the horse. The gates were up at the time. Mr. Lewis was working during the day.

To Mr. Moore—It might be dangerous to lower the gates if they had no signal danger lights. On the night of the accident it was very windy in the evening and the lamps were blown out. Later on the wind subsided and the lamps lived.

To Mr. Edwards — The day man told me that he had met Mr. Sandy some time previously and told him new lights were needed for the gates. I heard my father say there was so much trouble getting these signal lamps that the gatemen prefered to get them from passing brakemen, who generally carried spare ones.

DOCTOR'S EXPLANATION.

Dr. Bradd, sworn — I was called to see the deceased on the night of the accident about twelve o'clock. I saw his head was properly dressed, and did nothing until the following morning, when I found a mark probably made by the end of a shaft, near his heart. Behind, and almost directly opposite the mark in front, was a second mark, which I think was due to the fall. He had three cuts on his head. He told me that the shaft hit him and knocked him down. I attended him until his death which I believe was due to the severe shock he received. He never rallied from the shock to his system.

To Mr. Moore—I consider for his age he was a smart man, and physically well. I think that it was the shaft striking him that caused heart failure.

To Mr. Edwards — Death in my opinion was due to the injuries which he received in the accident.

Wesley Lewis, on being sworn, said—I was on the gates at Charlotte street a week ago to-day. It was my duty to put the lights on. I put a red light on each gate that night, but they blew out as there was a hole in the glass. This was just before dark. I then took off the lights and raised the gates, and left them up. It is not safe to work the gates without a lamp. The lamp had been broken some time, and I applied to Mr. Sandy and went to the station twice.

To Mr. Moore—Mr. Donnelly called my attention to the broken glass on Friday.

To Mr. Edwards—It is necessary for every flagman to have a white lantern. While I was there no extra emergency signal glasses were provided.

The inquest was adjourned until this evening at 7.30.

IN THE WAKE OF A SIDE COMB

By SYLVIA LEE

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

When the girl one loves as one has never loved before throws her arms about one's neck and says, "And I think it would be so lovely to have diamond side combs instead of a solitaire, if you don't mind, dear," and blushes—

Well, one buys the side combs without a question, and later perhaps one reflects. But then it's too late.

It thus befell with Harkness, and Leda wore the two starry bands so deftly posed amid the knotted tangles of her sunny curls that they suggested a diadem and in nowise led any man to the conclusion which time honored custom has drawn from the solitaire. In fact, before the betrothal was a week old Harkness himself began to wonder.

And when, at a dance at the Lakeside club, young Wrycroft, the very famous half back, invited Leda to go out for a moonlight row around the pier with him and Leda accepted and went Harkness not only wondered, but grit his teeth as well. No man who has spent ten years dancing attendance on other men's fiancees and other men's wives is going to enjoy life while his own personal fiancee and future wife is off with a fellow whose name has headed newspaper columns and whose chest can hardly find space for all his medals. The couple were gone an hour and seven minutes by a watch which had come down through three generations of the Harkness family, and when they did reappear the owner of the watch stood at the head of the wide stair and claimed the young lady for the next waltz. Wrycroft, happily oblivious to his crime, strolled off, and Harkness led the girl around the wide promenade to a place which was quiet and retired enough for private conversation. He was boiling within, but nothing could have been more sweetly calm than the way in which he put his arm about her and asked with careless placidity:

"Did you row far, dear?"

"I didn't row at all," said Leda. "He rowed."

Harkness kissed her with exceeding gentleness. "Did you land anywhere, darling—on the Point, for instance?"

"N-u-u-o," said Leda.

Harkness passed his finger over her pretty hair in silence for a few minutes, and then he suddenly gave a sharp exclamation:

"Good God, Leda, you've lost one of your combs!"

Leda put both hands to her head and almost shrieked as she realised the truth.

"Perhaps you forgot to put one in?" said her lover.

"No; I had them both, I'm sure." She began to cry. Harkness scratched matches, and they both looked all over the floor, but not a diamond glittered in the general gloom of the hour.

Very much later in the evening while Harkness was twostepping with Mrs. Lancaster a sudden turn showed him Leda speaking earnestly to Wrycroft. Wrycroft looked terribly used up, and Harkness smiled grimly.

"Oh, what a smile!" said Mrs. Lancaster. "It's both impressive and frightening. You make me afraid of you, and yet I admire the smile."

Harkness wondered if he wasn't a fool to be contemplating the addition of another wife to the assemblage.

"You look like a cross between Mephistopheles and Machiavelli," went on Mrs. Lancaster, who was slender and never lost her breath. "Which do you favor?"

"I can't spell either," replied Harkness shortly. He felt inclined to join the next expedition to the north pole.

The dance endured exceedingly late. It was quite 8 when the last woman retired, and a half dozen men were still lounging on the piazzas when the first gray streaks of dawn appeared above the Point. Harkness sprang up when he perceived them and yawned vigorously.

"I'm going to bed," he declared, "and I shall not tarry long upon the order of my sleeping, either."

Young Wrycroft stood up, too, and passed his hand over his forehead.

"I don't feel very fit," he said slowly. "I believe I'll go for a little row and maybe take a dip from the Point."

He went down the steps as Harkness entered the house. Later curiosity led the latter to wander to the window and look to see if Wrycroft was really carrying out his purpose.

A rowboat lay on the sandy stretch opposite, and the rosy light of the rising sun illumined a figure which paced restlessly up and down the rustic paths skirting the shore.

"I shouldn't call that exactly swimming?" said Harkness to himself a little grimly. He pulled down the shade with a violent jerk and got into bed.

* * * * * * *

It was quite noon when he awoke. The day was glorious, and the bosom of the lake was dotted with sailing parties. He gave the bell two punches for hot water and twisted the dressing case toward the window as a preliminary to shaving. The mirror reflected the Point, and as Harkness started to tip it he saw a girl disembarking alone.

He unhung his field glasses.

Yes, it was Leda!

He threw the glasses on the bed and went on with his toilet.

Every one was at luncheon when he went down, and as he stepped by Leda's chair to remind her that she was to drive out with him at 3 he could not help seeing how wretched she looked. Her hair bore no sign of side comb.

When they went out later there seemed to be a species of shadow mixed with the preliminary silence.

The man spoke first (and he waited a good while).

"You haven't found it, have you?"

"Oh, dear, no."

"Don't you think perhaps it fell out in the boat?"

"Why, there was nothing in the boat to loosen it."

Harkness felt the corners of his mouth suddenly give way even while his temper rose. He looked off to the right for a long minute and then asked severely:

"Was there anything at the Point to loosen it?"

Leda's mouth flew open in undisguised fright.

"Who told you we were to the Point?"

"I knew it all the time."

She began to cry.

"I never will again, truly."

"How could you behave so?" said the lover, launching himself suddenly into the full tide of his righteous wrath. "You put me beyond all patience; going off like that with Wrycroft, when you knew perfectly well that you belong to some one else, and then actually letting him"—

Leda seized his arm.

"Only once," she protested earnestly, "only once."

"Once is once too often," said Harkness, a great and exceeding bitterness welling up in his tone. "Once is a great, great many times too often, considering the situation. Now, Leda, listen to me," he continued sternly. "Either promise me that you will never, never again do anything in the slightest degree questionable or we'll call it all off, and you can give me back the comb that you still have."

"Oh, I'll promise!" said Leda, with a submissive choke. "I'll never, never do so again. Truly, truly. Upon my word and honor."

Harkness looked to the right and left and behind. Then he leaned down and kissed her.

"She's a dear little girl," said her lover, and, taking all the driving apparatus into his right hand, he thrust the left into his breast pocket and drew forth the missing comb.

Leda screamed.

"Oh, where did you find it?"

"I didn't find it anywhere," he said coolly, as he adjusted the reins again. "I took it out of your hair myself last night."

A Dog's Fidelity.

In the upper part of the famous Sequatchie valley, in east Tennessee, a man and his wife settled when the country was new and wild. One of the first crops that they raised was a considerable field of cotton. When it was ready to be picked, they went out together, prepared to make a holiday out of this pleasant labor. Their one baby was left in a cradle at the edge of the field, and the faithful old dog was instructed to watch the tiny sleeper.

After a considerable time they looked toward the cradle to see if all was well there. They were startled by the discovery that the little couch had been turned completely over. The dog was making queer dives underneath and yelping as if in anger. As they hastened to the place they were horrified to find the animal's jaws covered with blood and instantly came to the conclusion that he had been rending the child with his teeth.

The angry father hit the animal a deathblow with a cudgel and then hastily turned the cradle right side up. There was the baby all unharmed, and there in the bedding was an enormous rattlesnake, killed by the faithful dog after a fierce fight, in which both combatants had received many wounds.

My heart palpitated, I had faint and dizzy spells and felt weak and nervous all the time. My husband got me a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills but I told him it was no use, that I had given up hope of ever being cured. He however persuaded me to take them and before I had used half the box I began to feel better. Two boxes made a new woman of me and I have been well and have been able to do my work ever since."

BY CRASS DIPLOMACY.

Canada Stripped of Territory—Judge Hodgins' Address to the U. E. Loyalist Association—History of Former Losses.

The story of "Canada's territorial losses since 1783," as told by his Honor Judge Hodgins to the United Empire Loyalist Association at their meeting the other night in Toronto, presented a striking record of diplomatic blundering, not at all flattering to the national pride.

His Honor in opening referred to the territory of some four million square miles which Great Britain obtained under the treaty of 1763, by which France ceded not only the magnificent heritage which now comprises the Dominion of Canada, but also what are now known as the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and half of Minnesota. Owing to the pusillanimity of Mr. Richard Oswald, a neophite in diplomacy, to whom the negotiations were entrusted at the close of the revolutionary war, and who advised that Canada and Nova Scotia be also ceded, the States above named, together with the Indian territory out of which the States of Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama were afterwards formed, were ceded to the United States. The U. E. Loyalists were also abandoned to their colonies. The Canadian fisheries were also ceded under false representations.

The war of 1812 gave to Great Britain the whole of Maine, to the Penobscot, on the Atlantic; the whole of Michigan to Prairie du Chine, and also the mouth of the Columbia River, which controlled Oregon. These were all given up by the treaty of 1818, together with 4,000,000 acres of territory which Congress had previously admitted Great Britain owned.

Next came the Ashburton treaty of 1842 under which 4,500,000 acres of Canadian territory were ceded to the United States, owing to the suppression of maps; and a strip 150 miles long by from one to two miles wide, which had been confirmed to Canada by three previous treaties. In 1846 Lord Ashburton made another treaty under which Oregon, which had been jointly occupied by England and the United States, was ceded as "worthless." The Washington treaty of 1871 followed, under which the island of San Juan, which, under the treaty of 1846, was British, was abandoned, and Canada's claims, amounting to $1,600,000 in connection with the Fenian Raid were abandoned by Lord Kimberley; and, lastly, in 1903, Canada sustained the loss of two strategic islands in Alaska, and connection with the ocean, which was our right by the treaty of 1825, by a decision which had been described as a travesty of justice.

Puzzled.

Miss Sarah reads: "Rev. Mr. Marigold taken to the hospital, a victim of locomotor ataxia.' How dreadful! I wonder whether the poor man was run over or whether the thing blew up with him?"

Drinking.

"Drink to me only with thine eyes," he sang beneath her casement.

"I wonder if I need my glasses?" pondered the maiden as she attired herself to go down.

Even More.

Forrester—Does your wife mean everything she says?

Lancaster—Yes, and lots of things she doesn't say.

Family History.

"Both of my grandparents on my mother's side were nonagenarians," said Mrs. Oldcastle.

"Is that so?" replied her bottom. "My folks was all Baptists, but Josiah comes from a Methodist family."

Foolish jealousy will break down the sweetest home. It is a microbe that eats out the merriest heart.—Schoolmaster.

Guns That Saved Lives.

Guns have plenty of uses apart from killing. For instance, the signal gun of a ship is intended solely for announcing her arrival on a coast. Again, in desert countries, where water is often difficult to collect out of a mere dampness of sand, a gun barrel sunk into the ground will collect moisture in the bore, and many a life has been saved by a timely suck at the muzzle.

Minute guns are fired for public mourning, and national rejoicings take the form of a royal salute.

A slaver captured with a cargo of slaves in the tropics was put in charge of a prize crew. On her voyage the water ran short, and the slaves, slavers and prize crew were dying of thirst. This set one of the marines, a sergeant, thinking, and he hit upon a brilliant idea.

After regaining reluctant consent from the captain he took all the available gun barrels, plugged up the breech ends of a few of them, filled their bores with sea water and set them end up among the coals of the galley fire. As the steam rose he ran it through other gun barrels until it got cool. The cooling steam collected in the shape of excellent fresh water, of which he procured a steady though small supply.—London Telegraph.

Strictly Regular.

The darky's fondness for chicken is only equaled by his dexterity in getting possession of the birds. Weak considerations of mine and thine do not trouble him in the least. In any event his logic is equal to the strain of a good excuse. Witness the following conversation:

"I see you have chicken for dinner."

"Yessuh," says Mr. Erastus Pinkley.

"I hope you bought the chicken."

"Well, no, but the transaction were strictly regular. Dat chicken has been restin' on my fence wifout payin' nuffin', an' I reckoned it were 'bout time to fohclose!"—Kansas City Independent.

He Knew Right Off.

"Ah," sighed the wretched Mr. Newpop, "what can be more wearing on the nerves than a baby that cries all night long?"

"Twins," answered the man who had been through it.

Opposition.

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to a man. It is what he wants and must have to be good for anything. Hardships and opposition are the native soil of manhood and self reliance.

Our duty is to be useful not according to our desires, but according to our powers.—Amiel.

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM

Author of "Under the Rose."

As they drew aside to permit it to pass, the features of its occupant were seen, who, perceiving the young girl on the road—the shawl, half fallen from her shoulder revealing the plastic grace of an erect figure—gazed at her with surprise, then thrust his head from the window and bowed with smiling, if somewhat exaggerated, politeness. The next moment carriage and traveler vanished down the road in a cloud of dust, but an alert observer might have noticed an eye at the rear port hole, as though the person within was supplementing his brief observation from the side with a longer, if diminishing, view from behind.

The countenance of the young girl's companion retrograded from its new found favor to a more inexorable cast.

"A friend of yours?" he said briefly.

"I never saw him before," she answered, with flashing eyes. "Perhaps he is the lord of the manor and thought I was one of his subjects."

"There are lords in this country, then?"

"Lords or patroons, they are called," she replied, her face still flushed.

From the window of her room Susan saw Saint-Prosper and Constance returning and looked surprised as well as a bit annoyed. Truth to tell, Mistress Susan, with her capacity for admiring and being admired, had conceived a momentary interest in the soldier, a fancy as light as it was ephemeral. That touch of melancholy when his face was in repose inspired a transitory desire for investigation in this past mistress of emotional analysis. But the arrival of the coach which had passed the couple soon diverted Susan's thoughts to a new channel.

The equipage drew up and a young man, dressed in a style novel in that locality, sprang out. He wore a silk hat with scarcely any brim, trousers extremely wide at the ankle, a waistcoat of the dimensions of 1745 and large watch ribbons sustaining ponderous bunches of seals.

The gallant fop touched the narrow brim of his hat to Kate, who was peeping from one window, and waved a kiss to Susan, who was surreptitiously glancing from another, whereupon, both being detected, drew back hastily. Overwhelmed by the appearance of a guest of such manifest distinction, the landlord bowed obsequiously as the other entered the tavern with a supercilious nod.

To Mistress Susan this incident was exciting while it lasted, but when the dandy had disappeared her attention was again attracted to Constance and Saint-Prosper, who slowly approached. He paused with his horse before the front door, and she stood a moment near the little porch, on either side of which grew sweet williams, four o'clocks and larkspur. But the few conventional words were scanty crumbs for the fair eavesdropper above, the young girl soon entering the house and the soldier leading his horse in the direction of the stable. As the latter disappeared around the corner of the tavern Susan left the window and turned to the mirror.

"La!" she said, holding a mass of blond hair in one hand and deftly coiling it upon her little head. "I believe she got up early to meet him." But Kate only yawned lazily.

In the taproom the soldier encountered the newcomer, seated not far from the fire, as though his blood flowed sluggishly after his long ride in the chill morning air. Well built, although somewhat slender of figure, this latest arrival had a complexion of tawny brown, a living russet, as warm and glowing as the most vivid of Vandyke pigments.

He raised his eyes slowly as the soldier entered and surveyed him deliberately. From a scrutiny of mere physical attributes he passed on to the more important details of clothes, noting that his sack coat was properly loose at the waist and that the buttons were sufficiently large to pass muster, but also detecting that the trousers lacked breadth at the ankles and that the hat had a high crown and a broad brim, from which he complacently concluded the other was somewhat behind the shifting changes of fashion.

"Curse me, if this isn't a beastly fire!" he exclaimed, stretching himself still more, yawning and passing a hand through his black hair. "Hang them, they might as well shut up their guests in the smokehouse with the bacons and hams! I feel as cured as a side of pig ready to be hung to a dirty rafter."

With which he pulled himself together, went to the window, raised it and placed a stick under the frame.

"They tell me there's a theatrical troupe here," he resumed, returning to his chair and relapsing into its depths. "Perhaps you are one of them?"

"I have not that honor."

"Honor!" repeated the new arrival, with a laugh. "That's good! That was one of them on the road with you, I'll be bound. You have good taste! Heigho!" he yawned again. "I'm anchored here awhile on account of a lame horse. Perhaps, though," brightening, "it may not be so bad after all. These players promise some diversion." At that moment his face wore an expression of airy, jocund assurance which faded to visible annoyance as he continued: "Where can that landlord be? He placed me in this kennel, vanished and left me to my fate. Ah, here he is at last!" as the host approached, respectfully inquiring:

"Is there anything more I can do for you?"

"More!" exclaimed this latest guest ironically. "Well, better late than never. See that my servant has help with the trunks."

"Very well, sir; I'll have Sandy look after them. You are going to stay, then?"

"How can I tell?" returned the newcomer lightly.

The landlord looked startled.

"How far is it to Meadtown?" continued the guest.

"Forty odd miles. Perhaps you are seeking the old patroon manor there. They say the heir is expected any day," gazing fixedly at the young man; "at least the antirenters have received information he is coming and are preparing"—

The sprightly guest threw up his hands.

"The trunks; the trunks!" he exclaimed in accents of despair. "Look at the disorder of my attire—the pride of these ruffles leveled by the dew; my wrist bands in disarray; the odor of the road pervading my person! The trunks, I pray you!"

The landlord bowed.

"Yes, sir; at once, sir! But first let me introduce you to Mr. Saint-Prosper of Paris. Make yourselves at home, gentlemen."

With which the speaker hurriedly vanished, and soon the bumping and thumping in the hall gave cheering assurance of instructions fulfilled.

"That porter is a prince among his kind," observed the guest satirically, wincing as an unusual bang overhead shook the ceiling. "But I'll warrant my man won't have to open my luggage after he gets through."

Then as quiet followed the racket above—"So you're from Paris?" he asked half quizzically. "Well, it's a pleasure to meet somebody from somewhere. As I, too, have lived—not in vain!—in Paris we may have mutual friends?"

"It is unlikely," said the soldier, who meanwhile had drawn off his riding gloves, placed them on the mantel and sat facing the fire, with his back to the other guest. As he spoke he turned deliberately and bent his penetrating glance on his questioner.

"Really? Allow me to be skeptical, as I have considerable acquaintance there. In the army there's that fire eating conqueror of the ladies, Gen"—

"My rank was not so important," interrupted the other, "that I numbered commanders among my personal friends."

"As you please," said the last guest carelessly. "I had thought to exchange a little gossip with you, but—n'importe! In my own veins flows some of the blood of your country."

For the time his light manner forsook him.

"Her tumults have in a measure been mine," he continued. "Now she is without a king I am well nigh without a mother land. True, I was not born there—but it is the nurse the child turns to. Paris was my bonne—a merry abigail! Alas, her vicious brood have turned on her and cast her ribbons in the mire! Untroubled by her own brats, she could extend her estates to the El Dorado of the southwestern seas." He had risen and, with hands behind his back, was striding to and fro. Coming suddenly to a pause, he asked abruptly:

"Do you know the Abbe Moneau?"

At the mention of that one time subtle confidant of the deposed king, now the patron of republicanism, Saint-Prosper once more regarded his companion attentively.

"By reputation, certainly," he answered slowly.

"He was my tutor and is now my frequent correspondent. Not a bad sort of mentor either!" The new arrival paused and smiled reflectively. "Only recently I received a letter from him with private details of the flight of the king and vague intimations of a scandal in the army, lately come to light."

His listener half started from his seat, and had the speaker not been more absorbed in his own easy flow of conversation than in the attitude of the other he would have noticed that quick change of manner. Not perceiving it, however, he resumed irrelevantly:

"You see, I am a sociable animal. After being cramped in that miserable coach for hours it is a relief to loosen one's tongue as well as one's legs. Even this smoky hovel suggests good fellowship and jollity beyond a dish of tea. Will you not join me in a bottle of wine? I carry some choice brands to obviate the necessity of drinking the home brewed concoctions of the innkeepers of this district."

"Thank you," said the soldier, at the same time rising from his chair. "I have no inclination so early in the day."

"Early!" queried the newcomer. "A half pint of Chateau Cheval Blanc or Cru du Chevalier, high and vinous, paves a possible way for Brother Jonathan's dejeuner—fried pork, potatoes and chicory!" And, turning to his servant, who had meantime entered, he addressed a few words to him and, as the door closed on the soldier, exclaimed with a shrug of the shoulders:

"An unsociable fellow! I wonder what he is doing here."

A Heart to Heart Talk

The Hon. Amos P. Atkins, who is one of the most prominent men in New Albany, Ind., and Treasurer of Floyd County, has this advice to give to those who are shut up within the narrow confines of office or shop:

"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery seems to take the place of hard training in developing strength, vigor and endurance of the system and expelling all impurities, with which the blood sometimes gets clogged. I have found by personal experience that it enables me to do more hard work, and at the same time endure more physical strain and partake with greater vim in outdoor sports than anything I know of. It can always be relied upon to increase the appetite, induce healthful sleep, and tone and refresh a worn-out system.

"A number of my friends who have used it speak in the same high terms, and we have reason to consider it an office man's friend."

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood-purifier and health-giving tonic that contains no alcohol, opium or other narcotic. It is a purely vegetable compound, made from roots and herbs in an up-to-date pharmaceutical laboratory, and has been used and recommended by thousands of people during the past thirty-seven years.

HOCKEY CLUB ELECT OFFICERS FOR YEAR.

Mr. A. A. Hollingshead is the New President.

Successful Annual Meeting Held Last Night Treasurer's Report Shows Credit Balance of $309.29.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Hockey Club was held last night in the assembly hall of the Y. M.C.A., and was attended by about half a hundred members of the club. The meeting was in every respect satisfactory, and as a result the Peterborough Hockey Team starts out on a season with good prospects. A decided interest was manifested by those present, both players and supporters, and, with the one desire to make the season of 1903-04 a successful one, the members are working together.

The president, Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, called the meeting to order, and explained the object. The minutes of the last annual meeting were taken as read, and a number of communications from different clubs, most of them asking support for their nominees for places on the executive board of the O.H.A., were read. No action was taken on these with the exception that they were received.

The report of the Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. A. W. MacPherson, was read by Mr. Kenner, in the former's absence. The report was as follows:—

To the Members of the Peterborough Hockey Club:

Gentlemen,—In preparing this, my third annual report, it is with mingled feeling of pleasure and regret, pleasure at being able to present another encouraging statement, regret that it will be my last. During the three short years that I have been associated with the club, many changes have taken place. Gradually the players and supporters are changing. Already the Juniors of three years ago are doing service on the Senior team, or are on the retired list; the erstwhile Seniors are performing their duty as spiritual advisers to the Juniors, doing their little part as Rooters for the Culls, or acting in some other humble, but honourable capacity. During these seasons prosperity has smiled benignly on us. Our old rink, that saw so many skilled artists properly started in the way they should go, had to be abandoned to keep pace with the growing interest in the game, and now, we are proud to say, we have one of the finest rinks in Canada. Our membership has more than doubled itself and our receipts and expenditure have increased in a corresponding manner. Along with this has come increased labour and responsibility and, with a view of distributing the work and to provide for the better working of the whole machinery, the constitution has been revised. This you will be asked to consider at the annual meeting.

To the great majority, a review of the past season might be somewhat unpleasant. It smacks too much of the hard-luck-despatches from South Africa. However, future generations must know our history in full—the reverses as well as the victories—they must be taught the lesson that we cannot always win, and the championship demands more than players with a championship reputation; they must be in championship form. Never were prospects brighter than at the beginning of last season. In addition to the members of the previous year's team there were a number of aspirants for the various positions, but fate seemed to be against us from the start. Our new building was late in starting and still later in finishing. The skating season opened early in december, but it was nearly the second week in January before we got the snow tramped hard enough for skating. The result was that our boys were seriously handicapped at the start. This was unfortunate as they were drawn against two of the strongest teams in the league in the first round. The opening game was with Varsity after three days' practice on rough ice. In less than a week later the first league game was played in Belleville. From here, the initial story of defeat, I regret to state, of the season was sent home. The same evening the same sorrowful tale of woe was echoed from the juniors at Port Hope, 5-2 against us.

The following week brought two senior games and a few days later the last game of the district was played in Port Hope. In all these Peterborough lost. The fortune of the Juniors was equally remarkable, and the last hope of the Club now rested with the Culls. The new team entered in the Trent Valley League. The record of this team is really worthy of emulation. Handicapped though they were in many ways through, lack of attention on the part of the management, scoffed at on all sides and the butt of all rude jokes, the Culls meekly and modestly rose to the occasion and played the champions from Fenelon Falls a tie game, and had it not been a severe fainting fit on the part of one of the weaker members of the team, the Culls would have doubtedly saved the honour of the club.

Although the championship did not come our way, this season was none the less beneficial; on the contrary, it may be that hockey received a greater impetus through our teams being put out in the first round. First, the lesson was many times impressed on our minds that condition is a very important factor in a winning team. But still more important was the opportunity that the absence of league games gave for practise. In order to facilitate this your executive secured the ice from 8 until 8 every evening. This afforded ample time for everybody to practice. A great many scratch matches were arranged between the various rival institutions in town and resulted in the discovery of many "diamonds in the rough," and a widespread interest in the game. The benefits from this should show themselves this winter, and we may safely predict a record season. There should be an excellent junior team, plenty of material for the intermediates and most important abundance of sturdy hearts to keep up the reputation of the Culls.

While it is our priviledge this year to present such an excellent report, it is also our sad duty to chronicle the death of two of our number, Mr. W. A. Sanderson and Mr. Innes Hamilton. Scarcely was the hockey season over when we were called on to mourn the loss of our first Vice-President. For a number of years Mr. Sanderson had been identified with various kinds of sport in the town, but more especially with the winter sports. To him the hockey players are deeply indebted for the very active interest he always took in their welfare. His kind and courteous manner, his sound and practical advice and his untiring efforts to assist the boys, endeared him to all with whom he was associated. But trouble seldom comes singly, for, in the short space of one month another sad accident had deprived the Colts of one of their most promising players. For two years "Dinny," as he was familiarly known, had been a prominent figure on the junior team and last year gave promise of becoming one of the cleverest players in town. His genial smile and good-natured raillery made him a favourite with all.

The financial statement this year is very encouraging. We began this season with practically nothing, but our good name, and in spite of rather heavy expenditures, we were able to close the season with a balance of over $300 to our credit. Your Executive thought it wise to invest the greater part of it for the club. Accordingly the president was instructed to purchase 30 shares of rink stock. If similar success continues to follow our efforts it should not be long before the hockey Club should have the controlling interest in the new rink.

Before closing let me offer a suggestion. Don't neglect the Colts and Junior Colts. If there is to be a senior team of "home-brews," and that should be our aim, we must encourage and coach the youngsters. Let the senior players as well as the management give them every opportunity, for, if the juniors are looked after the seniors are sure to be. Let everything work to the good of the club and not of any individual team or player. Don't work for this season alone—remember there are more to follow.

In closing, I wish to thank you for the confidence you have reposed in me and the honour you have done me in electing me a third time to the responsible position of secretary-treasurer. I wish you every success. I also wish to thank Mr. Harry Rush, the assistant secretary, and the other members of the executive, for the valuable help in carrying on the affairs of the club.

Yours respectfully,
A. W. MacPHERSON,
Secretary-treasurer.

Peterborough, December 1st, 1903.

The report was on motion adopted.

Mr. Kenner read from the minutes of an executive meeting a motion to nominate Mr. J. A. Culverwell as an honorary member of the club. This motion was ratified by the meeting.

Mr. Harry Rush, jr., assistant-secretary-treasurer, then read the report of the treasurer, which showed a credit balance of $309.29, divided as follows: Cash, $9.29; 30 shares of rink stock at $10 each, $300.

The detailed report follows:

The treasurer's report was, on motion adopted.

Mr. Kenner then presented the report of the last executive on the revision of the constitution. The proposed constitution was discussed clause by clause, the majority of them being adopted, some slight changes being made however, the principal one referring to the price of tickets. The prices to be charged this year will be increased slightly.

The question of appointing a representative to attend the annual meeting of the O.H.A., on Saturday, Dec. 5th, was discussed, and on motion Mr. A. W. MacPherson was elected to represent the club. He was authorized to use his discretion in voting on general matters, but the club decided to support Dr. W. G. Wood for the office of secretary.

The election of officers was then proceeded with, resulting as follows:

Patrons and Patronesses — Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Stratton; Mr. and Mrs. John Crane; Mr. and Mrs. C. B. McAllister.

On motion of Mr. R. M. Glover, Mr. H. R. H. Kenner was nominated for election as hon. member of the club in recognition of his faithful service to the club.

In retiring from the office President Kenner took occasion to thank the members of the club for the support they had given him during the time in which he had filled the office. He had tried to serve the club to the best of his ability and appreciated the co-operation of the members.

If the present weather continues the boys hope to get out to practice in a few days.

OF INTEREST TO TRENT VALLEY HOCKEY LEAGUE.

To the Sporting Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—It is a well-known fact throughout Ontario that the above League is a marked figure among the best hockey players and supporters. Now, it is a well-known fact also, that Mr. Clarry organized and promoted this League and has been a power of strength to it at all times and always promotes entire amateurism from start to finish. The annual meeting of this ably organized hockey league takes place on Dec. 12th, and I trust that every club that intends entering this League will have their delegates on hand and that they will come prepared to heartily support Mr. E. S. Clarry for re-election to his office of father of the T. V. H. L.

FURS FOR XMAS GIFTS

The feminine heart has always held a warm spot for pretty Furs, and the more than gallant Furs have fully reciprocated that warm feeling by folding themselves about and protecting the feminine person. When it comes to a choice being given in a Christmas gift as between anything else against Furs, nineteen out of every twenty will decide in favour of Furs.

We think we can say in the fullest of confidence that no showing of Furs in Central Ontario will please those who want to buy—those who wish the best value possible for their money—nearly as well as ours will.

We also give an absolute guarantee that Furs are exactly as represented. If they turn out otherwise, another will be given to replace at no extra cost. Is it any wonder that to-day in Peterborough the popular voice is saying—

"Barrie's for Furs!"

We know where to get the raw skin, and how much we ought to pay for them. We know perfect pelts when we see them, and we know how to match them and blend them into perfect garments. We know the latest devices and appliances to aid good workmanship, and we have adopted them. We know our garments through and through, and that is why we guarantee them.

For Ladies

We show Persian Lamb Jackets from $50 to $200 and Sealskin Jackets from $150 to $300. Norway Seal Jackets from $75 to $150, Astrachan Jackets $40 to $50, Russian Lamb, $35 to $75, Electric Seal $40 to $50, Grey Lamb Jackets, $25 to $65, Greenland Seal Jackets, $20 to $40, Racoon Jackets, $25 to $50 each.

In Fur-lined Goods

For ladies we show the newest designs in Fur-lined Coats $15 to to $75 and Fur-lined Capes $12 to $50, also some nice Opera Capes $10 to $25 each.

Collarettes, Caperines, Stoles, Boas, Scarfs, Muffs, Gauntlets, Caps and all other Fur articles of feminine wear in large variety and too numerous to give in detail. These articles range in price from $1.00 to as high as a person feels inclined to pay—and all equally as good values.

For the Gentlemen

PREMIER'S LETTER ENDS A RUMOUR.

Scheme to Contribute to Imperial Defence not Considered.

Somebody has Been Romancing—Mr. Hamar Greenwood Denies Making Statement Attributed to Him—The Correspondence Relative to the Discussion in York, England—Mr. Chamberlain Opposed.

London, Dec. 3.—Hamar Greenwood denies ever having made the statement attributed to him with regard to Imperial defence. This is the statement denied by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in yesterday morning's paper, that it was the scheme of the Government for Canada to raise a great sum for Imperial defence, but this was dropped through Mr. Chamberlain's policy frightening the French-Canadians.

Sir Wilfrid's Reply.

London, Dec. 3.—The Canadian Associated Press, referred yesterday to a letter which appeared in the English press from Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It is needless to say that the Premier did not send any letter to the English press, but he did write a private letter to a newspaper man in York. There is no reason why this letter, although not intended for publication, should not be published. It is as follows:

Ottawa, Nov. 19.

Alfred H. Fletcher, Yorkshire Herald, York: Dear Sir,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 5th inst., wherein you call my attention to the statement made in your city to the effect that there was a scheme on foot in Canada to contribute a great sum towards national defence, and that Mr. Chamberlain had so frightened a third of the population—the French-Canadians—that the scheme had been dropped. I fully corroborate Mr. Chamberlain's answer to your enquiry. The statement is altogether without foundation. There never was in Canada a scheme on foot to contribute any sum towards Imperial defence. (Signed) Wilfrid Laurier.

Mr. Fletcher's Letter.

The following is a copy of the letter to which Sir Wilfrid replied: "Coney street, York, Nov. 5, 1903. —To Sir Wilfrid Laurier: Dear Sir, —Mr. Hamar Greenwood, who has settled in this country, and who is a standing Radical candidate for the city of York, in the course of a speech which he delivered on the 15th of last month, said that there was a scheme on foot in Canada to contribute a great sum towards national defence, and that Mr. Chamberlain had so frightened a third of the population of the French-Canadians that the scheme had been dropped. Mr. J. G. Butcher, Conservative M. P. for York, called Mr. Chamberlain's attention to this statement, and received the following reply: 'The statement to which you refer is absolutely without foundation.' At a subsequent meeting on Oct. 22 Mr. Hamar Greenwood repeated his statement that there was a scheme in Canada to contribute a large sum of money towards a huge admiralty construction in Canada for Imperial defence, and that since Mr. Chamberlain's speeches this has been dropped owing to the Opposition of the French-Canadians. As Mr. Hamar Greenwood is posing as an authority on colonial matters in general and particularly on affairs in Canada, and as he persists in his original statement in spite of Mr. Chamberlain's disclaimer, there is a good deal of anxiety in York to ascertain the exact position of affairs. If you could give us any definite information bearing on this subject, we should esteem it a great favor. We enclose cuttings from reports of the speeches referred to. Yours faithfully, Alf. H. Fletcher, Managing Editor, York Herald."

TO OPPOSE MR. CHAMBERLAIN.

Secretary of Brass Workers Union Nominated in West Birmingham.

London, Dec. 3.—(C.A.P.)—The Scottish Chamber of Agriculture of Edinburgh yesterday agreed to ask Chamberlain to address a meeting on the proposed fiscal changes, with special reference to agriculture. Chamberlain was informed that the chamber is not pledged to his proposals.

W. Davis, secretary of the National Society of Amalgamated Brass Workers of Birmingham, has been selected as Labor candidate, to oppose Chamberlain in West Birmingham. Davis is considering the matter.

The Canadian Navy.

The Glasgow Herald, referring to Laurier's plan of creating a Canadian navy, says: "We prefer this alternative to subsidising the North American squadron." The paper hopes it will be a fleet and not the monitors, but, in the event of an Imperial war, ready for service anywhere.

Chief Justice Alverstone and six judges yesterday sustained Gray's Inn benchers' exclusion of Bertha Cave from the bar. In her contention, she quoted Toronto's lady barrister.

C. B. Haldane, M.P., speaking at Hull yesterday, said free trade was the leading factor of Britain's lead over America and Germany.

The chairman of the Agricultural Society of Western Canada has written the Cobden Club that Canadian support of Chamberlain comes from the Eastern manufacturers.

MR. BLEZARD ONE OF NATURE'S NOBLEMEN.

Former Local Member for East Peterborough Highly Respected.

Sat for 21 Years in the Ontario Legislature—Of Quiet and Unassuming Disposition—Long Public Life.

The death of Mr. Thomas Blezard, ex-M.P.P., which took place at his residence, Otonabee, yesterday, removes a veritable landmark in the history of this county, and one of the best known and most highly respected residents in the Midland District.

Mr. Blezard was born in the township of Otonabee, Nov. 24th, 1838, and was of English extraction. He received his education in the public schools, and on December 9th, 1865, was united in marriage to Miss Mary Merkle, who predeceased him many years.

In early life he took an active interest in local politics, and had a municipal experience of fourteen years—nine as a member of the township council and five as a member of the county council. In 1879 Mr. Blezard entered the legislature, his opponent in his first election having been the late George Read, of Keene, and represented East Peterborough, in the Liberal interests continuously till the election of 1900. He was during his last term, with one exception, the oldest in membership of any member of the Legislature, and was very widely known, and held in very high esteem.

Mr. Blezard seldom expressed his views in Parliament, but his good solid sense, his knowledge of public matters, based on a municipal experience of fourteen years, made his opinion much sought, and in the committees of the House his services were of great value to the members, and the province. Mr. Blezard was an advanced and successful farmer. He always took an active part in anything that would promote the welfare of the agricultural community. He was actively associated with the East Riding Farmers' Institute, and was for many years a director of both the East and West Riding Exhibitions. In every way he was a splendid sample of the honest and progressive farmer. Mr. Blezard was a man of sterling qualities of character — one of nature's noblemen. Plain in manners and speech, he was honest as the sunshine; public spirited, liberal in his judgments of his fellow men, a kind neighbour, and in all ways a most estimable citizen. He retired from active work not long ago, disposing of his farm, and reserving a corner of it as a residence, near Blezard's station, on the Grand Junction Railway.

Mr. Blezard leaves behind him a family of four children, two sons and two daughters—the latter Mrs. Dr. McNaughton, wife of the assistant physician at the London asylum and Miss Lettie Blezard, who resides on the homestead. The sons are Gilbert and Thomas.

The funeral takes place on Friday at 2.30 o'clock.

During the afternoon Miss Laura Rose and Mr. Mason spoke to a fair sized audience and gave some practical hints as to the essence of success in farm life. During the afternoon session the programme was interspersed with music and vocal numbers. Miss J Kennealey sang "The Vale of Old Kentucky," Miss Jennie Weir gave two very acceptable recitations, Messrs. D. Edwards and John McFarlane sang a duet, "The Larboard Watch." Miss Rose's lecture, "One Eye on the Farm and the Other on the Town," was particularly good.

The Fires of Eczema.

So keen is the suffering of many people who endure the stinging, itching sensations of Eczema that they speak of the skin as being on fire. By its soothing, healing, antiseptic influence Dr. Chase's Ointment positively cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and every form of itching skin disease. It is of inestimable value in every home, and when once introduced becomes a household necessity. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the standard the world over, and has no worthy rival.

The Presbyterians are preparing a fine programme for their annual concert on January 1st.

The hockey club concert was fairly well attended last night. Master Blackwell, the boy baritone, of Peterborough, created a favourable impression, while the warbling and representation of the bobolink by the lady soprano was charming.

LAKEHURST.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Rev. H. Foley, B.A. B.D., of South Dummer, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church here on Sunday evening last. The text chosen was "The length, the breadth and the heighth of it are equal." Rev. 21, 16. His sermon was very impressive and much appreiated by all present. Mr. Foley was a former pastor on the circuit and of course his old friends came out in large numbers to see and hear him.

Two weeks from last Sunday, Miss Jessie Munroe, formerly of Japan, is to give an address here.

Mr. Robert Shaw, our County Councillor, was attending a meeting of the county council in Peterborough last week.

AFTER YEARS OF TERRIBLE AGONY.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured N. Ecker's Kidney Disease.

One Doctor Treated him for Bright's Disease, Another for Gravel, but he got no Relief Till he Tried Dodd's Kidney Pills—They Cured him Completely.

St. Catharines, Ont., Dec. 2.—(Special.)—The cure of Nicholar Eckar, a well known and highly respected farmer living near St. John's P.O., about ten miles from this city, has caused somewhat of a sensation in Pelham and Thorold townships. For 20 years Mr. Ecker was a terrible sufferer from kidney trouble, and so widespread has been the interest in his cure that he decided to make a statement for the benefit of the public. In a condensed form Mr. Ecker's statement is as follows:

"I had been a sufferer from Kidney Trouble for twenty nine years. I had the most distressing Backache it would be possible for man to bear, Headaches, irritation of the Spine, and at times an excruciating circular pain about the lower part of my body. What I suffered no pen can describe.

"I was treated by three doctors, one of them a specialist. One said I had gravel, another Bright's Disease, and the third declared that I was in a dangerous condition. None of my friends thought that I had much longer to live.

"At this stage I gave up other treatment and started taking Dodd's Kidney Pills. I received help after using the second box and continued until I had taken sixteen boxes, when my troubles had vanished and I was again enjoying the splendid vigour of earlier manhood."

OTONABEE COUNCIL'S REGULAR MEETING.

Routine Business Transacted and Accounts Presented.

The township clerk of Otonabee sends the following minutes of the last meeting of the township council.

At the meeting of the Otonabee township council all the members were in attendance. Jas. Douglas was present requesting additional aid. On motion the matter was left in Mr. Fife's hands. Chas. Edwards asked that the 8th concession line north of the base line line road, be made fit for traffic, instead of opening the established road through lot 18, concession 9. Left over for further consideration. Jas. Fawcett having requested the services of an engineer in connection with a ditch which he wants excavated to drain his land, and as two roads of the township will be affected, Coun. Fife was appointed to attend in the interests of the township. Messrs. J. Smithson, W. J. Miller, and Robt. Weir were present on behalf of the Otonabee Agricultural Society, asking for a grant towards paying for a lot recently purchased by the Society; on motion $100 was granted. W. Wedlock and John R. McIntyre requested a grant to have the road from the end of the bridge to the mill gravelled. Each of the councilors granted $5 out of their road appropriations, Wm. Wedlock to put in two culverts free of charge. A complaint was made that Solomon Loft and Jas. Jarvis had taken sand from the quarter line north of the Indian Reserve, endangering the public travel. The clerk was instructed to notify them forthwith to fill up the holes, holding them responsible for any damage caused by the said holes. The following accounts were passed for gravel: John Webster, $26; Ind. Reserve, $5.95; D. Kelly, $27; Wm. Kemp, $2.46; Mr. Galvin, $4; Kingan Hardware Co., spikes, 40 cents; Drummond and Duffus, two scrapers, $18; repairing grader, $9.35; W. Girven, plank, 25c.; express on cards, 35c.; J. J. Turner, repairing tent, $4; John O'Brien, cement culvert, $8.

A MURDEROUS EMPLOYE.

Tramp Lumber Jack in Jail at Fort Francis, Ont., For Braining James Short With an Axe.

Fort Francis, Dec. 3.—A dastardly attempt at murder and robbery was made here yesterday morning on James Short, merchant tailor, by one Frank Bates, a tramp lumberjack, who had applied for work. Bates was given a job cutting wood on Saturday, and, claiming to be a tailor, was set to work in the shop Monday.

Yesterday morning early, as soon as Mr. Short came to his shop, he was approached from behind by Bates and knocked down with a small axe. He was then dragged to the rear of the shop, with the blood gushing from his head, and robbed of his pocket-book and some other articles.

Leaving his victim, as he supposed, dead, he crossed over to Koochiching, Minn., where he was arrested yesterday afternoon, and is now in the Fort Francis jail awaiting trial. Bates, who claims to be from Lethbridge, and lately of Fort William, is of medium height, about 25 years of age, has red hair and a florid complexion.

It is supposed he is wanted elsewhere for similar crimes. If no complications set in, Short will recover.

The agreement goes into effect at once and may be terminated at 30 days' notice

May Yet Come to a Strike

Toronto, Dec. 3.—All negotiations between the committee representing the G.T.R. telegraphers east of the Detroit River and the company with a view to a readjustment of the wage scale have been declared off, and the matter put into the hands of the international officers. This action was decided at a meeting of the committee last night. The officers representing the International Telegraphers Union will at once advise the company of this decision and ask that the officials discuss the situation there with a view to a settlement.

An Attack of Pneumonia Warded Off.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in the chest and had a bad cough. I gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, according to directions, and in two days she was well and able to go to school I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Prendergast, merchant, Annato Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold towards pneumonia. For sale by all druggists.

Privy Council Renders Judgment in Placer Miners Case.

London, Dec. 3.—The Privy Council yesterday decided that placer miners in renewing leases to their claims must submit to any fresh changes the Canadian Government may choose to enforce. The council dismissed the appeals of the Klondike miners, Chappelle, Carmack and others against the judgments of the Canadian courts entered in November, 1902, which rejected their appeals for the refunding of the royalties collected.

Dowie Raising "the Ghost."

Chicago, Dec. 3.—A great gathering of the Dowieties was held in the tabernacle at Zion City last night. It was called by Dowie for the purpose of starting a fund of $1,000,000, with which to pay off all the indebtedness that hangs over Zion City, and himself. The outpouring of his followers was not one to bring cheer to the heart of the overseer of Zion. The tabernacle seats 6,000 people and usually all the seats are taken at the special meetings called by Dowie. Last night the hall was not over half filled and the gathering was not enthusiastic. Dowie's debts aggregate $750,000.

No Preference For Santa Claus.

London, Dec. 3.—Regarding the publication of Lord Strathcona's notice concerning Christmas presents sent to Canada, The Westminster Gazette yesterday says that the reminder as to how the law in the matter stands will only serve to call public attention to the fact that while a Canadian can send us a present duty free, we have to pay a considerable duty when sending one to him.

TAXES ON RAILWAYS

Warm Discussion With Farmers' Representatives.

EQUALIZATION IS DEMANDED

Farmers' Association of Ontario Supports the Pettypiece Bill—Case For Railways—Say Revenues Are Higher in the United States and That Earnings Here Do Not Justify Rates.

Toronto, Dec. 3.—The special Assessment Committee of the Legislature yesterday morning met to hear deputations from the railway companies and the farmers of the Province.

Mr. J. Lackie Wilson, of Alexandria, President of the Farmer's Association of the Province, said the question the deputation would present and discuss with the Committee would be the equalization of taxation. The farmers were there to back up the main features of Mr. Pettypiece's bill. They desired that railway companies, telegraph and telephone companies should be taxed in the same proportion as farmers.

Mr. Hellmuth stated that he and Mr. McMurchy were there to represent the railway companies.

Mr. James McEwan, of West Welland, was called upon to speak on behalf of the farmers. He said that in three townships in Welland there were then more than fifty-seven miles of railway, with an annual tax of $179.85. Under the present law the taxing of railways was not at all fair. In showing how the present law worked out, he said the railway property was worth $12,000 a mile, and behold the little they paid. He had a farm of two hundred acres, and he paid $90 a year. He claimed that railway, telegraph, and telephone companies should be taxed on the same basis of value as farm lands.

Should Pay on Everything

Mr. J. F. Beam, President of the Farmers' Association of Welland, spoke along the same lines, and gave examples of irregularity of taxation between farmers and railway and other companies. He held that the railway companies should pay taxes not only on their lands, but also on their rolling stock, track and other improvements.

Mr. James Armstrong, President of the Farmers' Association of East Lambton, also spoke in favor of Mr. Pettypiece's bill.

Mr. Thomas Beare, Reeve of Pickering, said that if he was paying on a value of $5,000 on his farm, the railway companies should pay on a value of $40,000 a mile. The railways should be taxed on their selling price or actual value. He was glad a member of the Legislature had backbone enough to introduce such a bill as Mr. Pettypiece. The farmers had not a weak backbone, but they did not wish to bear other people's burdens.

Mr. A. D. Rose, of Centre Simcoe, then addressed the committee briefly along the same lines.

Mr. J. F. Barber, of Georgetown, said that he was there simply to back up the principles embodied in the Pettypiece bill.

Mr. W. H. Bunting, President of the Fruit Growers' Association, then spoke in the same tenor.

Mr. John Mallan, of Wentworth, and Mr. William Oak, of Whitby, were the next speakers, who emphasized what had already been said.

Tax Them on Actual Value.

In answer to a question of the chairman, Mr. McEwan stated that he wanted it distinctly understood that the farmers desired the railways to be taxed according to their actual value. He wanted no exemptions made. He said he thought the exemptions of personal property tax on farmers was only a blind to give a chance to exempt the personal property of big companies. The farmers would be willing to pay taxes on personal property if the law would tax railway and other companies on all their rolling stock, tracks, ties and so on. The farmers were paying $4.60 per $1,000 value and the railway companies 60 cents. He wanted them taxed the other $4.

Mr. Alex. Shearer, Reeve of Alnwick, Northumberland County Mr. Thomas Hood, of East York; Major Hood, of South Wellington; Mr. Joseph Bitzner, of Beverley, Wentworth County, spoke in the same strain as the preceding speakers.

Mr. James Goodfellow, of Centre Simcoe, and Mr. J. L. Warnicks, then addressed the committee, after whom Mr. James Tweel, on behalf of the Fruit Growers' Association, pleaded for equalization of taxation.

Mr. P. A. Carscallen, Reeve of Saltfleet, stated that he would be satisfied with any mode of taxation that would equalize the assessment

Mr. Wilson remarked in answer to a question that the farmers would probably prefer that the Province should do the assessing through a commission, but that a good deal of the money collected should be at the disposal of municipal bodies.

Mr Pettypiece asked Mr. Wilson if he wished a railway company's property to be taxed as a whole, and he said he did.

Mr. Pettypiece remarked that at present Toronto got $33,000 railway tax. Under the bill Toronto would get $150,000.

Case For the Railways.

Mr. Hellmuth, representing the railways, then addressed the committee. He said that the Pettypiece bill would be an injustice to the railways, and would react on the farmers. In answer to a question from the chairman as to whether there were any places where the railways were taxed less, Mr. Hellmuth said he thought there should be some proportion between the earning power of a railway and the amount of taxation.

Mr. Hellmuth went on to say that in Michigan railways were taxed $170 a mile in 1902. Mr. Pettypiece was more up to date, and produced the assessment report of 1903, showing that under the new board assessment in Michigan the railways in that State were taxed $400 a mile. Mr. Hellmuth claimed that Michigan should be no guide to Ontario. He then went on to argue that if railways were taxed and the amount of revenue divided between the municipalities and the townships that the municipalities would receive a vastly disproportionate amount. He illustrated this by quoting the case of the Grand Trunk Railway. This railway had 2,650 miles of road in Ontario, 150 of which was in cities, towns, and villages. Their municipal taxes were $121,359, provincial taxes $13,265; total $134,624. In Toronto, Hamilton, London, Stratford and Windsor occurred $68,086 out of this. Only $15,000 are paid in townships. So the road paid $106,259 for 150 miles in the cities, towns, and villages, or $709 a mile. In the townships only $6 a mile.

The committee adjourned at one o'clock.

Favor the Bill.

The Township Councils of Beverley, Ancaster, North Grimsby, South Grimsby, Pickering, Horton, Alnwick, St. Vincent, Malden, Ramsay, Gouldburn, North Dumfries, Greenock, Hibbert, Toronto Gore, Culross, North Cayuga, Harvey, Maidstone, Percy, Cavan, Dover, Wallace, Brooke, Pittsburgh, Charlotteville, Derecham, Tyendinaga, Clarke, Richmond, Pilkington, Caledonia, Rochester, Waterloo, Plympton, Verulam, Turnberry, Goderich, Amabel, Maryborough, Clenelig, Mara, Warwick, Matchedash, West Flamboro, Moore, Thorah and Amabel have declared in favor of the adoption of Mr. Pettypiece's bill, also the Village Councils of Cannington, Alvinston, Grand Valley and Norwich; the Town Council of Forest and Union Grange No. 108.

Mr. J. F. Beam of Black Creek pointed out that the capital of the Grand Trunk was $105,000 to the mile, and that the C.P.R. $60,000 to the mile, while the actual investment was not half that money. The railways were apparently yielding good profits to their owners, as shown by the immense wealth accumulated by them. He referred to Mr. Van Horne, who came to Canada a poor man and is now able to invest millions in Cuba.

Density of Population.

Mr. Hollmuth compared Ontario with Michigan. We have a density of population of 10 to the square mile, and the railways pay a tax of $50 to the mile. Michigan has a density of 43.75 and the tax is $174 to the square mile.

Mr. Lee said the comparison was not fair, because the greater part of the province was unorganized.

Mr. Angus McMurchy, for the C. P.R., followed Mr. Hellmuth. He argued that Canadian roads after paying interest on their bonded debt left nothing for the investors. He quoted the taxation figures for several states to show that the taxes were imposed on railways on the basis of their net earnings. The figures which had been quoted were for boom years. "You can't tax a railway, as you do a farm," Mr. McMurchy said. "You have to tax a railway on its earnings. To tax them on their actual value would be a very hard matter for a board of experts."

Mr. McMurchy will continue this morning.

The Best Remedy for Croup.

From the Atchison, Kan., Daily Globe. This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighbourhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of his children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost in case of croup as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old-fashioned remedy for croup known as hive syrup, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw off the phlegm quicker and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as a croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to use. For sale by all druggists.

Terribly Burned By Acid.

Buffalo, Dec. 2.—Four men were terribly burned by hydrochloric acid at the Erie freight sheds at Tifft Farm late last evening. Nicholas Forugga's eyes were burned out. His face, shoulders and the upper part of his body were also badly burned. The other three were less seriously burned, but all of them suffered intense pain. The men were engaged in removing a carboy of the acid from a freight car when it exploded.

The Solar Plexus.

Is the largest nerve centre in the sympathetic nervous system, is situated just back of the stomach, and supplied nervous energy, the vital force of the human body, to the stomach, heart, lungs, kidneys, liver, etc. By creating more force Dr. Chase's Nerve Food directly aids the solar plexus in supplying the power which runs the machinery of digestion and so cures nervous dyspepsia, headache, dizzy spells and bodily weakness.

ST ANDREW'S GUILD SCOTCH CONCERT.

Annual Entertainment was given last night in the Opera House.

A Good Array of Talent Which Pleased a Large Audience—Some Features of the Programme.

Although St. Andrew's Night celebration was postponed a couple of days, that fact did not in any way dampen the enthusiasm of the celebration, and the concert given under the auspices of St. Andrew's Young Men's Guild, which has come to be recognised as the regular St. Andrew's Night concert, was successful in the highest degree. This Guild has a reputation for providing high class concerts, and in that given last night the well earned reputation was fully sustained. It was distinctively a Scottish concert, and as such was thoroughly appreciated. Perhaps no organisation in town has been responsible for the appearance in Peterborough of so many high class artists as St. Andrew's Young Men's Guild, and in the array of talent provided for last night's concert, the high standard set up in entertainments previously given was, with possibly one exception, maintained.

Miss Tina Crawford, the Scottish vocalist, who is now on a tour through Canada, was a disappointment, both to those who brought her here, and to those who paid money to listen to her. She is a high-priced singer, and the Guild thought that in securing her, they were getting a superior attraction. The other artists, however, were among the best in their respective lines, and each was given a good reception. Mr. Donald MacGregor, a baritone of great promise, was already a favourite with Peterborough audiences, and in his singing last night deepened the favour in which he was previously held. His opening selection was "MacGregor's Gathering," a thoroughly Scotch number, and in it he appealed to the patriotic instincts of his Scotch hearers. He was next heard in "Blue Bonnets over the Border," in the rendition of which he received an enthusiastic recall. "Afton Water," and his charming closing selection were given in characteristic Scotch manner, and each brought forth strong expressions of approval from the audience. Mr. MacGregor is winning new friends on each appearance here, and the Guild is to be congratulated upon securing such a popular vocalist.

The literary numbers on the programme were given by Miss Jessie Irving, an elocutionist of more than ordinary ability. To say that she satisfied her hearers is but stating the case mildly. Few elocutionists have appeared before a Peterborough audience who have given so much pleasure as Miss Irving did last night. Her first number was "The Troubles of an Engaged Girl," to which, as also to all her numbers, she had to respond to an encore enthusiastically demanded. "An Easter with Parepa," was given with an expression which showed that she had a thorough knowledge of the pathetic, and in her lighter numbers the humorous was well portrayed. Her Scotch number, "The Drumtochy Witness" was perhaps the selection in which she scored the greatest triumph.

As an additional attraction, Miss Lois Winslow, a 'cellist from Toronto, was secured, and to her also was accorded a good reception. She proved herself complete mistress over her instrument, and her playing was thoroughly enjoyed. To each of her numbers, "Evening Star," and "Bidine Serenade," she graciously responded with an encore.

The Young Men's Guild may well feel elated at the success of their annual entertainment, because the artists with the one exception noted above, acquitted themselves well, and gave immense satisfaction.

The Gerhard Heintzman piano, upon which the accompaniments were played by Mr. T. J. Best, was an instrument of excellent tone

MORE EVIDENCE IN THE DONNELLY INQUEST.

A Continuation of the Enquiry Last Night

The Driver was Examined—His Horse ran Away—An Adjournment Until To-night.

The inquest into the death of the Late John Donnelly was continued last night in the council chamber when considerable additional evidence was taken, the chief being that of Wesley Armstrong, driver of the cutter which knocked down the deceased, and of Frank Sandy, G. T. R. station agent. As it was a late hour before all the evidence was in, a third adjournment was made. This evening the jury will return their verdict as to the cause of the death, and who, if anyone, is to blame.

Westley Lewis was the first witness summoned, on being sworn he said: I made a mistake about the lights I referred to last night. There was one white light or globe in the signal house; I said there were none. I knew it was there but had forgotten. I had told Mr. Donnelly that night that one of the red lights were broken. There has been a white light on the west gate since, I think. It can be readily see at some distance. The white globe would have fitted on the gate lantern, but we had no orders to put it on. I would have put a red globe on had there been any. I have never seen a white light used on a gate before. I do not think a white light fills the bill. The lamps are on the outside of the gates and a man approaching would see a white light but not as readily as if it were carried by some one. I received no instructions other than those received from men working there. A red light, I think, means 'stop,' a green light means caution, while a white light is supposed to mean safety. A red light was part of the necessary equipment of the gate.

THE DRIVER QUESTIONED.

Wesley Armstrong sworn—I live in North Monaghan, and on the night of the accident was driving home about 9.30 o'clock with my sister, in a horse and cutter. I was driving west on Charlotte street. When near the first crossing I noticed a man with a light walking north. I was on the left of the cutter and the horse for a while hid the light from view. I noticed the gate up and thought all was safe. I thought the man with the lantern was probably a train hand. When I was close to the track the engine bell rang and the locomotive started. It was on the south side of the crossing moving northwards. I then hurried to get across in front of the engine. I was right on the track and heard a man shout "woa." I saw a man fall on the south side of the horse. I would not think the cutter went over him as the horse shied as he came up. I just got over in time to escape the engine. The horse took fright, and took us as far as the Methodist church, when I was thrown out and the horse got away from me. I was watching the gates and as they were up concluded everything was clear. I was trotting slowly until I came to the track. I would have had time to cross and no accident would, I think, have occurred. When Mr. Donnelly fell I could not judge at that time whether or not he was on the track, but it was a short distance, a few feet from the engine's pilot. I cross there often and the gates are white, quite discernable at some distance at night. I would have seen them I think if they had been down and I could I think, have stopped my horse easily. I observed Mr. Donnelly walking north on the crossing as I approached. I drove to the track on the east side of Bethune street, and just then the horse threw him down, as he was walking north. I did not notice him walking east, but when I saw him he was going north, as if from the engine. He was hidden from me by the horse as I came on to the crossing. It was after I saw him first that I touched horse with the whip and didn't then think that he would be in front of the horse. I was paying attention to the gates. When the bell rang I was about even with the gate, and did not then observe a man with a lantern, but some time before that as I was approaching the crossing. He did not signal to me, that I saw. I did not see the man when I touched the horse with the whip. Had I stopped I would probably have been caught by the engine. The first and second tracks are very close together. I had not gone very far between the time I first saw the man until I last caught a glimpse of him. He did not signal to me and I did not pay any particular attention to him. The horse shied when he struck the man. The horse had gone a few steps after I applied the whip before striking the man. The horse sprang forward, but I cannot say whether the cutter ran over Mr. Donnelly or not. The man fell to the left. I would not judge that I ran over his body. I cannot say whether he was struck by the horse or by the shaft. It would be the left shaft that would strike him. I think Mr. Donnelly tried to catch the horse. I think the horse ran away as the result of running into the man.

WESLEY LEWIS RECALLED.

Mr. Lewis, recalled, said—At the Charlotte street crossing there are four tracks. One runs up alongside the storehouse, then there is a main line a little to the east of the centre of Bethune street; then there is a line to what is called the through siding. The main line and the lead are parallel, and the switch from these is north of Charlotte street. About the centre of Charlotte street it is almost like one line, but a little broader than a single line by about two feet. The engine I think, was coming up to go on to the through siding. Mr. Donnelly was thrown on the centre track made up of the two sets of rails.

Wesley Armstrong — I could not judge at the time exactly what position Mr. Donnelly was in. He appeared to fall south of the horse when struck. I did not observe the shock of the collision. Had I not touched up the horse I would likely have been caught on the track. I do not know whether I would have been clear of the track on the east side of the engine had I stopped. I acted on first thought. My horse was hitched directly in front of the cutter.

Miss Lillie Armstrong, sworn, said —I was with my brother on the night of the accident. I saw the man fall. I do not think the cutter went over him. I supposed he tried to stop the horse, which however hid him from my view as we got quite close.

CHAS. NOYES EXAMINED.

Chas. Noyes, sworn — I am day man at the Charlotte street crossing and have been acting in that capacity for three years. When our lamps broke we got our new globes from Mr. Sandy at the station without any trouble. Red lights are the signal for danger, and should always be used on the crossing gates. It is clearly understood that the day man looks after the lamps in the winter time, cleaning, setting and lighting them. A danger signal can be given by a white light, which might be put on the gates, but I would prefer to use a red lamp. The accident was due to the fact that the gates were not down. Had I been on duty that night I would have put a red light on the side next the town and a white light on the west side. I have always done that under similar circumstances. It was a matter of a very few minutes to go to the station for a globe. We have no written rules regarding either lights or gates; neither did we have any directions from Mr. Sandy. A gateman has to use his own judgment.

NIGHT OPERATOR SPEAKS.

Wesley Oliver, sworn, said — I am night operator at the G.T.R. station, and have been there for 2 1-2 years. I was there on Tuesday night, the 24th Nov. During the night Mr. Lewis came a couple of times for lamp glasses; I told him they were locked up and that the agent was up town, but that I would speak to him on his return; I did so, but Mr. Sandy did not know what kind he would require. A second time, when Mr. Sandy was out, Mr. Lewis returned for glasses. I thought Lewis worked at Simcoe street and it was to that crossing that Mr. Sandy either took or sent the globes.

Samuel McElroy sworn.—I am watchman at the Simcoe street crossing. When the lights are broken the best thing to do in my judgment is to flag the crossing with a white light. I saw Mr. Sandy on the Tuesday night in question. He came up to see what I wanted. I required two globes and he sent one but I did not know both were broken.

THE STATION AGENT.

Frank Sandy on being sworn said, —I am station agent at Peterborough. The gates are equipped with red lights. I had not been advised by anyone regarding the condition of the lamps at Charlotte street. Mr. Oliver told me there was a glass wanted at Simcoe street, but it was not until Wednesday morning that I was told about the Charlotte street gates. As I crossed Charlotte street on my way to the Simcoe street crossing I noticed that the gates were up but did not notice the lamps of which I had some in store. Except on the very darkest of nights the white arm of the gate can be seen distinctly and at some little distance. A green and a white light are now being used at Charlotte street. Should a globe break during the night a new one could be obtained at the station but it would be better to have a reserve glass in the signal house. Red lights should be on the gates but white ones can be seen. As a matter of propriety but not of necessity, the red lamps should be there. The gate is quite as much a barrier with a white light as with a red one. A man without lights should think to put down the gates in any case and then use his hand lantern.

The inquest then adjourned until 7.30 o'clock to-night when the verdict will be returned.

CHILDREN'S AID WORK.

The work of the Children's Aid Society is one that should appeal forcibly to our highest sentiments of philanthropy. It has not only its philanthropic aspect, but its civic side. It aims to save from touch of vice the tender children whom unfortunate domestic relations have placed in danger; and to give them opportunities for growing up respected and useful citizens, for their own good as well as for the benefit of the community. This cause should appeal strongly, especially to mothers, who, if they have any imagination, can fancy how they themselves would feel if their children, from some accident of fortune, or in the event of death, should be exposed to such a danger. Yet at the meeting in the local Children's Shelter on Monday afternoon, there was a miserably small attendance, and of the seven or eight churches in the town, only two were represented in the gathering, and one of these two churches had only a single representative, though, it is said, that an invitation had been on Sunday, extended to the ladies to attend this meeting, from the pulpits of all the local churches. This should not be. Of course there is a multiplicity of demands upon the sympathies of our charitably disposed citizens, but it seems that the work which lies nearest at hand, the charity which is nearest home, should receive first attention.

SPECIAL MEETING OF TOWN COUNCIL

A Short Session in the Committee Room.

TO CONSUMMATE THE UNION

A Resolution Read by the Town Solicitor—Ald. Rush's Proposal—The Ashburnham Council.

A special meeting of the Town Council was held in the committee rooms last night the usual meeting place being occupied by other persons. There were in attendance, His Worship Mayor Roger in the chair and Aldermen Finnie, Morrison, Rush, Shortly, McWilliams, Edgecumbe, Best, Clinkscale and Corkery.

Mayor Roger remarked that the special meeting had been called in order that necessary steps might be taken to consummate the union of the town and Ashburnham. On his request the town solicitor read the following resolution which had been agreed upon by Reeve Adams and himself (Mayor Roger..)

TO HIS HONOUR THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO IN COUNCIL,

The petition of the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough Humbly Sheweth:

1. That the Council of the said Corporation of the Town of Peterborough with a view to the annexation of the adjoining Village of Ashburnham to the said Town of Peterborough, appointed a committee to confer with the council of the said village for that purpose and said committee on the 17th day of March, 1903, presented a report to the council of the said town in favour of such annexation, and thereafter on the 28th day of October, 1903 the committee of the whole council of the said Town of Peterborough in respect to such annexation, which report was by resolution adopted by the said council.

2. That after the adoption of the said report by the said council, a vote of the electors of the said town was taken on the 26th day of November, 1903, and was in favour of the annexation.

3. That the said council of Peterborough hereby declare that it is expedient that the said village of Ashburnham be annexed to the Town of Peterborough.

4. That the council of the said village of Ashburnham also passed a resolution declaring that it was expedient that such village should be annexed to the said town of Peterborough, which resolution on the 26th day of November, 1903, was submitted to the electors of the said village and a majority of the electors voting thereon, voted in favour of the resolution.

5. That at the same time a by-law was submitted to the properly qualified voters of the said village, to provide for the construction of sewers in the said village and to authorize the issue of debentures of the said village for raising the sum of $15,000 therefor, which by-law received the number of votes necessary to carry same.

6. That the assessment of the said Town for the year 1904 has been taken, but the assessment of the said village for the year 1904 has not been taken, and it is desirable that the assessment made in the village for the year 1903 may be adopted as the assessment on which the rate of taxation for the year 1904 shall be fixed and levied.

7. That it is desirable that the said annexation should take place on the first day of January, 1904, and that provision should be made for the nominations of Mayor, Aldermen, and School Trustees and Water Commissioners for the united municipality on the last Monday in December, 1903, and that those qualified by the assessment for the village of Ashburnham shall be qualified to be candidates and to nominate candidates for such offices in the Town of Peterborough and to vote for same at the first election.

Your petitioners therefore pray

That a proclamation be issued annexing the said Village of Ashburnham to the said Town of Peterborough as Ward number five, such union to take effect on the first day of January, 1904, and that the following provisions be contained in or provided for by the said Proclamation, namely:

1. That the united municipality shall assume and be liable for the debts and be entitled to the assets of the said Village of Ashburnham.

2. That the united municipality shall within two years from the union fully construct an outfall sewer from Elizabeth street in said village southward to a proper outlet and shall dispose of the sewage by a septic tank and outfall in substantial accordance with the plans furnished to the council of the said Village of Ashburnham by W. Chipman, Esq., C.E., or by such other means as may be approved of by the Provincial Board of Health, and that debentures of the Town of Peterborough be issued to pay therefor, and that on neglect or default of the said Town of Peterborough to do so, any ejector shall be entitled to take proceedings to compel such construction, and the issue of such debentures.

3. That the assessment taken in the said village for the year 1903 shall be adopted as the assessment on which the rate of taxation for the year 1904 shall be fixed and levied.

4. That the nominations of Mayor, Aldermen, School Trustees and Water Commissioners for the united municipality for the year 1904, shall be held on the 28th day of December, 1903, and that the persons on the voters' lists of the said village for the year 1903 who have the qualifications of candidates or electors in the said village shall be qualified to hold office in, to nominate candidates for and to vote at the first election of the united municipality and that the places appointed for holding the said election and the deputy returning officers to preside thereat appointed by the council of the said village shall be the places at which and the deputy returning officers for holding said election in said ward number five, and for all purposes appertaining to such nominations and election the said Village of Ashburnham shall from and after the issue of the said proclamation be treated as part of the said Town of Peterborough.

5. That the proceedings taken by the Council of the Village of Ashburnham before such union takes place in respect of a certain petition of D. W. Dumble, Geo W. Hatton and others presented to the council of said Village on the 2nd day of November last praying for the construction of certain drainage works under the provisions of "The Municipal Drainage Act" be confirmed by the council of the united municipality and the matter proceeded with by them under the provisions of said Act, without such proceedings being recommenced.

6. That the contract between the Water Commissioners of the said Town and the Village of Ashburnham for the supply of water to the said village be deemed cancelled and determined at the date of said annexation.

7. That such further and other provisions may be inserted in said proclamation as may be necessary or expedient to carry such annexation into effect.

And your petitioners will ever pray

Dated this 2nd day of December, 1903.

On motion of Ald. Shortly, seconded by Ald. Clinkscale the memorial was adopted as read, and arrangements made for forwarding the same to the Lieutenant Governor, through the Provincial secretary, Hon. J. R. Stratton, after being signed by the mayor and clerk and the corporate seal added thereto.

Mr. Rush clearly defined his proposition regarding the acquisition of the Hilliard property by the town, which proposal is fully reported in another column of this issue.

Regarding the breaking of the stone Mr. Best suggested that a crusher be placed right on the spot as it would thus save double drawing. He incidentally remarked that at the present time the town was paying 65 cents per yard for gravel delivered. He emphasised the importance of the purchase of the property which, he believed, would prove a live asset for the town.

Ald Rush added that the town has been paying $3.00 per cord for stone delivered, for street purposes alone, not counting the stone and gravel used in the construction of Granolithic walks. The gravel on the property, would, according to the estimates of the town engineer, supply the municipality for fifty years, and when exhausted the land would be excellent for building purposes or factory sites. He thought the present revenue from the property would pay the interest on 30 years debentures. In the event of the operation of the street railway the property would be very valuable as it has half a mile of frontage on Water street.

Ald. Shortly: "I think it is a capital idea and agree with Ald Rush that it would be of great value to the Town."

It was moved by Ald. Rush, seconded by Ald. Shortly, that the town solicitor be instructed to draft a by-law on the suggestions submitted, to be given over to the ratepayers at the January elections for their decision.—Carried.

It was moved, seconded and carried that the Board of Works be given power to let the contract for snow-ploughing.

The council then adjourned until Monday night next at 8 o'clock.

A similar meeting was held in Ashburnham and the above resolution was also adopted.

PROGRESS OF WORK ON THE TRENT CANAL.

Sangster-Larkin Section Completed and Other Sections Progressing Favourably.

Mr. Thomas Tobin, foreman on the Sangster and Larkin section of the Trent Valley Canal between Kirkfield and Lake Simcoe was in town yesterday.

Mr. Tobin says the work on that section has been completed with the exception of a small quantity of concrete work, which will be finished in the spring. This section was a difficult one to build, being through rock and drowned lands for the greater part of the distance, and required three years to build it. The lift lock on this section, which is a 45 feet lift, is ready for operation.

Mr. Aylmer, who has the contract for the concrete work on the Kirkfield-Balsam Lake section, is making satisfactory progress with the work

AN OLD RESIDENT OF OTONABEE DEAD.

Mr. John Bennett Passed Away at the Age of 85 Years.

At the age of 85 years to a day John Bennett died yesterday at his home, River Road, Otonabee, after having been a sufferer from sciatic rheumatism for about ten months, although he was confined to his bed only about a week. The late Mr. Bennett was one of the oldest settlers in the county, having lived in Otonabee township continuously for 62 years. He was born in the County of Cork, Ireland, on December 2nd, 1818, and came to Canada with his parents at the age of two years. The family lived in Cobourg for about nine years when they removed to the township of Cavan, where they engaged in farming for 12 years. In march 1841 Mr. Bennett came to Otonabee, settling on the present homestead, and living there ever since. The late Mr. Bennett served in the rebellion of 1837-and was promoted to the office of sergeant after having served some time as a private. He had in his possession at the time of his death his dismissal as sergeant. In religion he was a methodist, of which church he was a consistent member. He was a liberal in politics, and told with pride that he had been a subscriber ever since its establishment.

The members of his family who survive him are: John A., of Otonabee; Mrs. D. Mason, of town; Mrs. J. M. Thompson, of Detroit; David and George who are living in the North-west and Laura and Sidney, on the homestead. He had three brothers and two sisters who survive him, the youngest of whom is 73 years of age. They are: Joseph, North Monaghan, 87 years; Robert, of Michigan, 80 years; Edward, of Manitoba, 73 years; Mrs. F. Newell of Ashburnham, 76 years; and Mrs. T. Crocker, of Toronto, 75 years.

It is a rather remarkable fact that Mr. Bennett's death should have occurred on his birthday, as for weeks he had been looking forward to his birthday, and, day by day, would ask how long it would be before Dec. 2nd.

The funeral will take place from his late residence, River Road, Otonabee, to the Little Lake Cemetery tomorro wafternoon at 2 o'clock

CURES RHEUMATISM?

YES.

The widespread extent of Rheumatism in its several dangerous forms, and the largely fatal character of its effects, had for a long time set physicians to investigating as to its cause. The verdict of experience and study at the present day is that Rheumatism, of whatever nature, is a blood disease, and the best authorities agree that it is caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood. Now for the remedy. This must combine the most effective specifics, prepared with such care and skill as to leave no element of uncertainty. The result of such study and care is known as "Bu-Ju." This is a vegetable compound in the form of pills which stimulate weak kidneys and overcome clogged or sluggish conditions of these organs. The effect is at once apparent. The blood returns to its normal state of healthy purity and there is no basis for Rheumatism in the system. That this result can be obtained by the use of Bu-Ju is attested beyond question. A trial will convince you that the plain truth is good enough for Bu-Ju, the kidney pill that cures Rheumatism.

Trade-Mark Bu=Ju

Is put up in boxes of 60 pills, selling at 50 cts. at all drug stores. Refuse substitutes.

THE VETERANS LAND GRANTS

Toronto, Dec. 2.—Hon. E. J. Davis received a large deputation of war veterans yesterday morning. They wanted some information concerning their land grants. David Creighton spoke for the party, which consisted of about 150 of them. He explained that the veterans had difficulty in securing locations in the eastern sections of New Ontario, and had finally secured them in the townships of Hardy and Paterson, only to find out later that these townships were not open for settlement. The Minister replied that the widest scope had been given the veterans in locating their lands, and promised to look into the matter of the complaint of the timber licensees. If he found the townships were ready for settlement without injury to their interests the veterans' claims would have priority

A KING'S HANDSHAKE

GRASP OF SOVEREIGN'S FINGERS AN EXTRAORDINARY HONOR.

Traced to an Old Belief—The Charioess o' Haleri to Extend Good Deeds From Faith in "Royal Touch"—In Fifty Years the Late Queen Victoria Only Once Shook Hands With Gladstone.

During a period extending over half a century the late Queen Victoria was in frequent intercourse with William E. Gladstone, who was called upon to visit her several times a year as Cabinet Minister, as Premier, and as leader of the Opposition. For in England the sovereign is held, not by law but by public opinion, to such strict impartiality between the rival political factions that the late Queen, as well as the present King, while refraining from discussion of public affairs with the leaders of the Opposition, have always made a point of inviting them not merely to all State functions, but also to entertainments of a more private character, such as, for instance, to dinners and week end parties at Windsor, at Osborne, and at Sandringham. Yet during all that long period of fifty years or more the late Queen only once shook hands with the famous statesman, who during the latter portion of his life was known as the "Grand Old Man," and in the "Life of Gladstone," just published by the Rt. Hon. John Morley, who had access to all the papers and correspondence of his illustrious friend and colleague, there is a brief and pathetic little note of the latter, mentioning the fact that the first and only time that Queen Victoria had shaken hands with him was in the last year of his life, a few months before his death, after he had finally retired from politics, and was making a vain attempt to recover health and strength in the south of France, where his sovereign was then staying with the same object in view.

Rarity of Sovereign's Handshake.

It would be a great mistake to construe this remark of the great Liberal statesman as a manifestation by her late Majesty of the unfriendly feelings which she is generally believed to have entertained towards one of the oldest and most tried of her public servants—a distaste, which, according to Lord Beaconsfield, originated with the fact that whereas he, Beaconsfield, invariably treated her Majesty like a woman, Gladstone always treated her as if she were a public meeting. If she refrained from shaking hands with him it was because the members of the reigning houses of the old world, and in particular those who wield the sceptre, are exceedingly chary in offering their hands by way of greeting.

Superstition of "Royal Touch."

The chariness which Royal personages manifest in giving their hand and the importance which they seem to attach to the honor which they consider that they confer thereby is attributable in a great measure to the fact that their touch was even down to the middle of the last century believed to have been endowed with those miraculous powers of healing the sick which we read of in the Bible as having belonged to the Founder of Christianity and to his apostolic contemporaries. King Charles X., who ascended the throne of France in 1825, was the last monarch to claim these powers in that country. On the day of his coronation in the ancient cathedral of Rheims he paid a State visit to the hospital of St. Marcoul, where he extended his royal hand to 126 patients suffering from scrofula and other kindred maladies. Every year afterward until his abdication in 1830 he went through a similar performance on the day of St. Louis.

Neither Napoleon I. nor Napoleon III ventured to put forth any claim to this peculiarly royal prerogative, nor yet did King Louis Philippe, nor King Louis XVIII. not one or the other of whom had undergone the ceremony of coronation and annointment with the sacred oils, which seems to have been considered as indispensable to the possession of the healing virtues. King Louis XVIII. himself suffered terribly from various maladies, and had he ventured to exercise the privilege it would naturally have been remarked that, being unable to cure himself, it was improbable that his touch would cure others, but, on the contrary, be more likely to do harm than good.

The Power of Healing.

In Spain and Portugal the touch of the monarch's hand is still credited to this day by the masses of the people with possessing the power of healing sickness, and nothing is more strange at Lisbon than to watch the appalling looking crowd of cripples and victims of every species of human ill, thronging the steps leading up to the main entrance of the church where the sovereign happens to be worshiping awaiting his departure in the hope that when passing he may lay his royal hand upon them and thereby heal them. In Germany, Scandinavia, Russia, and Austria the popular belief in this virtue of the sovereign has come to an end. The same may be said of Italy, the last king to put forward any pretensions to miraculous curative powers having been the late King Francis II of Naples, who lost his throne in 1862, and who will be remembered by the readers of Alphonse Daudet's novels as "The King of Illyria," in the "King in Exile." In Great Britain the latest instance on record of imposition of the sovereign's hands occurred towards the close of the reign of good Queen Anne, who touched little Samuel Johnson for the so-called "King's Evil" at St. James' Palace, a peculiarly appropriate place for the purpose, since in olden days it was a hospital for lepers before becoming a Royal abode

Money in Royal Handshake.

While modern rulers, therefore, no longer lay any claim to the curative character of their touch, there is no doubt that the fact of the latter's having been formerly endowed with sacred attributes has contributed to the reserve which monarchs manifest nowadays about shaking hands. The two European sovereigns who display the greatest freedom and liberality in this respect are the German Kaiser and King Edward, probably because they are so thoroughly up to date. And yet at State functions and ceremonious occasions they for the most part respond to the obeisances of those presented to them, or who pass before them, by a slight inclination of the head. In cases where King Edward does honor some stranger with a handshake, the latter, if he be an Englishman, is wont to look back upon the act as one of the notable events of his life, while, if it be the Kaiser who extends his hand to one of his subjects as a token of marked favors, the person thus honored bows low to kiss it. Emperor William, on the occasion of the first speech from the throne after his accession to the crown in 1888—a ceremony at which most of the minor sovereigns of the Empire were present, extended as he stepped down from the throne his hand to the late Prince Bismarck as a mark of special regard. The old prince, who had known the Kaiser from his babyhood, immediately bent down and raised his young master's hands to his lips, as did also old Field Marshall Moltke.

Shake Laborer's Hand.

The sovereign most democratic of all in this respect was the late King Humbert of Italy, who, while he would readily grasp the grimy hand of any laboring man or peasant, only manifested reserve in this respect when dealing with the patrician houses of Italy.

In Oriental countries the touch of the sovereign is regarded as so great an honor that none of the natives would dream of seizing the Royal hand even when extended to them, and when in Egypt I used often to watch with mingled amusement and disgust old Nubar Pasha, the most imposing and majestic looking Oriental statesman, humbly bending to kiss the hem of the frock coat or stambuline of the squat, fat, and vulgar looking little Khedive Ismail. In Japan the Mikado never offers his hand.

Only one sovereign in Europe—and his Empire is of a spiritual character—had retained the old Roman form of homage in extending not his hand but his foot to be kissed. That is the Pope, who continues to accept the same species of salutation as that exacted by the Caesars.

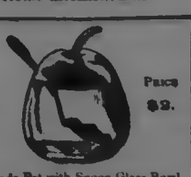
A Double Test of Quality.

We placed side by side in our workshops two silver-plated Pudding Dishes, one made by a large Canadian wholesale silver-plating firm, the other made by Henry Birks & Sons.

Our purpose was to strip each of its silver, and ascertain the quantity of silver on each piece.

We did so.

The result astonished us.



No. 4b/11 Price $2.

Marmalade Pot with Spoon, Glass Bowl, Cover and Spoon—an example of this heavy Silver Plating. We will send it prepaid to any address for the above price.

Exactly five times more silver was found on the piece of our own manufacture than on the one made by the wholesale house.

To assure ourselves of the correctness of the test, we took two Teapots in the same way, and found four times as much silver on the one of our own manufacture than on the other.

This fine quality of silver-plating is what we offer the people of Canada through our Mail Order Department.

They All Saw It Move.

Mrs. Burton, with her husband, Sir Richard Burton, the famous traveler, and two ladies, had driven out of Triest to a village dance and were sitting in the carriage listening to the band. In telling of it she said:

Suddenly, at the top of a roof, I caught sight of a rat, which appeared to me to be spellbound by the music.

"Look!" I said. "Don't move, but watch that rat fascinated by the music."

So we all sat and watched it and thought it most interesting that rats should be susceptible to music like lizards and snakes.

We all saw it move. We all saw its head turn and its tail move, and we kept still, not to frighten it away. The next day, feeling so much interested in the affair, we sent to inquire about it. The rat, it turned out, was made of painted tin and fixed to the top of the house. So much for imagination.

A Rigid Sabbatarian.

A Canadian university man is enlivening his home circle with the following story: He was touring in Scotland last summer. One Sunday morning he put his little hammer in his pocket (he is an amateur geologist) and, strolling out upon the hills, began to chip off such specimens of rock as interested him. A native passing by looked on with a frown. "Sir," he said, "do ye ken yer breakin' more than stones there?" "Breakin' the Sabbath, eh?" said the young Canadian, with a laugh, and, to appease the Scot, he put away the hammer and walked a little way with him. A turn of the road revealed the ruins of a castle. "What castle is that?" said the stranger. "It's noo the day," was the severe reply, "to be speirin' sic things."—London Outlook.

A Tree That Grows Dishes.

There is a tree in the West Indies that the natives say "grows dishes!" It looks like an apple tree. They call it the calabash. It bears very queer leaves and large white blossoms that grow right from the trunk and larger branches. After the flower comes the fruit, just as our apples or peaches do. But this fruit is in the shape of a gourd, only stronger and much larger, sometimes a foot in diameter. Now, see what a use the people of that country make of this fruit. The shell is so hard that all sorts of big and little dishes and drinking cups can be carved out of it. Even pots and kettles are made and used over the fire, but of course they cannot last as long as our iron ones.

Fetched 'Em.

"Hello, Miggles! How are you getting along with that suit of yours against the railroad on account of personal injuries?"

"I brought 'em to tin 1, old man. I brought 'em to time!"

"What! Did you get the $50,000 you sued for?"

"No; we sort o'—er—compromised on the amount. They offered me $250 cash, and I took 'em up so blamed quick it made their heads swim. I got it, too, by George!"

What It Is That Wins.

A country woman remarked to her neighbor during a conversation on their return from market, "How is it, Mary, that you have been married four times, and I've never been married at all, and I'm much handsomer than you?"

"Aye, to be sure," returned Mary, "but it ain't handsomeness that does it, Sarah. It's the 'come hither' in your eye."

Bird Migration.

After years of study devoted to the topic Professor Alfred Newton of Cambridge stated that without doubt bird migration is the greatest mystery in the entire animal kingdom, "a mystery," he added, "that can be no more explained by the modern man of science than by the simple minded savage of antiquity."

BLOOD POISON

On account of its terrible effects, blood disease is called the king of all diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted; so while it may not be a crime to have the disease, it is a crime to permit it to remain in the system. It may manifest itself in the form of Scrofula, Eczema, rheumatic pains, stiff or swollen joints, itchiness of the skin, eruptions or blotches, ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, falling out of hair, disordered stomach, and a general depression of the system. If you have any of these symptoms don't neglect yourself. You have no time to lose. Beware of "old form" treatment—beware of mineral poisons—beware of Quacks and Fakirs. OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT is guaranteed to cure this disease, never to return. Bank Bonds will protect you. Our treatment is not injurious in any way, but reaches the very root of the disease and eliminates all poison from the system. The symptoms of disease gradually disappear. The blood becomes pure and enriched, the whole system is cleansed and purified, and the patient feels prepared anew for the duties and the pleasures of life. Hop Purity

But ordinary hops spoil ale—make it sour, dead, and cause biliousness to the consumer.

Hops used in Carling's Ale are grown in Oregon and certain favored localities of Southern Europe, particularly Bavaria—are cultivated, gathered and shipped by experts in the business.

Few other breweries buy hops from these countries—one of the reasons why Carling's Ale is superior to all others.

The same care is used in every operation of Carling's extended system of brewing.

Ask for Carling's Ale—accept no other, because no other is quite so good.

Strollers

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM

Author of "Under the Rose."

"Going back so soon?" asked the young man in surprise.

"There is nothing to be done here. The temperance lecturer has just gone; the people are set against plays and players. The supervisor refuses the license."

With which the manager relapsed into silence, rueful and melancholy. Their road ran steadily upward from the sleepy valley, skirting a wood where the luxuriance of the overhanging foliage and the bright autumnal tint of the leaves were like a scene of a spectacular play. Out of breath from the steepness of the ascent, and with his hand pressed to his side, Barnes suddenly called a halt, seated himself on a stump, his face somewhat drawn, and spoke for the first time since he had left the hamlet.

"Let's rest a moment. Something catches me occasionally here," tapping his heart. "Ah, that's better! The pain has left. No; it's nothing. The machinery is getting old, that's all! Let me see—ah, yes!" And he drew a cigar from his pocket. "Perhaps there lies a crumb of comfort in the weed!"

The manager smoked contemplatively, like a man pushed to the verge of disaster, weighing the slender chances of mending his broken fortunes. But as he pondered his face gradually lightened with a faint glimmer of satisfaction. His mind, seeking for a straw, caught at a possible way out of this labyrinth of difficulties and in a moment he had straightened up, puffing veritable optimistic wreaths. He arose buoyantly; before he reached the inn the crumb of comfort had become a loaf of assurance.

At the tavern the manager immediately sought mine host, stating his desire to give a number of free performances in the dining room of the hotel. The landlord demurred stoutly. He was an innkeeper, not the proprietor of a playhouse. Were not tavern and theater inseparable, retorted Barnes? The country host had always been a patron of the histrionic art. Beneath his windows the mask and interlude were born. The mystery, harlequinade and divertissement found shelter in a pothouse.

In a word, so indefatigably did he ply arguments, appealing alike to clemency and cupidity—the custom following such a course—that the landlord at length reluctantly consented, and soon after the dining room was transformed into a temple of art, stinted, it is true, for flats, drops, flies and screens, but at least more tenable than the roofless theaters of other days, when a downpour drenched the players and washed out the public, causing rainy tears to drip from Ophelia's nose and rivulets of rouge to trickle down my Lady Slipaway's marble neck and shoulders. In this labor of converting the dining room into an auditory they found an attentive observer in the landlord's daughter, who left her pans, plates and platters to watch these preparations with round eyed admiration. To her that temporary stage was surrounded by glamour and romance, a world remote from cook, scullion and maid of all work and peopled with well born dames, courtly ladies and exalted princesses.

Possibly interested in what seemed an incomprehensible venture—for how could the manager's coffers be replenished by free performances?—Saint-Prosper that afternoon reminded Barnes he had returned from the village without fulfilling his errand.

"Dear me!" exclaimed Barnes, his face wrinkling in perplexity. "What have I been thinking about? I don't see how I can go now. Hawkes or O'Flaristy can't be spared, what with lamps to polish and costumes to get in order. Hum!" he mused dubiously.

"If I can be of any use, command me," said the soldier unexpectedly.

"You!" exclaimed the manager. "I could not think"—

"Oh, it's a notable occupation," said the other, with a satirical smile. "Was it not the billposters who caused the downfall of the French dynasty?" he added.

"In that case," laughed Barnes, with a sigh of relief, "go ahead and spread the inflammable dodgers. Paste them everywhere except on the tombstones in the graveyard."

Conspicuously before the post office, grocery store, on the town pump and the fence of the village church some time later the soldier accordingly nailed the posters, followed by an inquisitive group, who read the following announcement: "Tuesday, 'The Honeymoon;' Wednesday, 'The School For Scandal;' Thursday, 'The Stranger,' with diverting specialties; Friday, 'Romeo and Juliet;' Saturday, 'Hamlet,' with a jig by Kate Duran. At the Travelers' Friend. Entrance Free."

Shaking the reins on his horse's neck, he continued his way, while the sun, out of its city of clouds, sent beams like a searchlight to the church spire; the fields, marked by the plow; the gaunt stumps in a clearing, displaying their giant sinews. Then the resplendent rays vanished, the battlements crumbled away, and night, with its army of shadows, invaded the earth. As Saint-Prosper approached the tavern, set prominently on the brow of the hill, all was solemnly restful save the sign, which now creaked in doleful doldrums and again complained wildly as the wind struck it a vigorous blow. The windows were bright from the fireplace and lamp. Above the door the light streamed through the open transom upon the swaying sign and the fluttering leaves of the vine that clambered around the entrance.

In the parlor, near a deteriorated piano whose yellow keys were cracked and broken, in almost the seventh stage of pianodum, sans teeth, sans wire, sans everything, he saw the dark eyed girl and reined his horse. As he did so she seated herself upon the haircloth stool, pressed a white finger to a discolored key and smiled at the not unexpected result, the squeak of decrepitude. While her hand still rested on the board and her features shone strongly in relief against the fire like a cameo profile set in bloodstone, a figure approached and, leaning gracefully upon the palsied instrument, bent over her with smiling lips. It was the grand seignior, he of the equipage with silver trimmings. If the horseman's gaze rested not without interest on the pleasing picture of the young actress, it was now turned with sudden and greater intentness to that of the dashing stranger, a swift interrogation glancing from that look.

How had he made his peace with her? Certainly her manner now betrayed no resentment. While motionless the rider yet sat in his saddle an invisible hand grasped the reins.

"Shall I put up your horse?" said a small voice, and the soldier quickly dismounted, the animal vanishing with the speaker as Saint-Prosper entered the inn. Gay, animated, conscious of his attractions, the fop hovered over the young girl, an all pervading Hyperion, with faultless ruffles, white hands and voice softly modulated. That evening the soldier played piquet with the wiry old lady, losing four shillings to that antiquated gamester, and, when he had paid the stakes, the young girl was gone and the buoyant beau had sought diversion in his cups.

"Strike me," muttered the last named personage, "the little stroller has spirit. How her eyes flashed when I first approached her! It required some tact and acting to make her believe I took her for some one else on the road. Not such an easy conquest as I thought, although I imagine I have put that adventurer's nose out of joint."

CHAPTER IV.

So well advertised in the village had been the theatrical company and so greatly had the crusade against the play and players whetted public curiosity that on the evening of the first performance every bench in the dining room—auditorium—of the tavern had an occupant, while in the rear the standing room was filled by the overflow. Upon the counter of the bar were seated a dozen or more men, including the schoolmaster, an itinerant pedagogue who "boarded around" and received his pay in farm products, and the village lawyer, attired in a claret colored frock coat, who often was given a pig for a retainer, or knotty wood, unfit for rails.

From his place well to the front the owner of the private equipage surveyed the audience with considerable amusement and complacency. He was fastidiously dressed in double breasted waistcoat of figured silk, loosely fitting trousers, fawn colored kid gloves, light pumps and silk hose. Narrow ruffles edged his wristbands, which were fastened with link buttons, while the lining of his evening coat was of immaculate white satin. As he gazed around upon a scene at once novel and incongruous he took from his pocket a little gold case bearing an ivory miniature and, with the eyes of his neighbors bent expectantly upon him, extracted therefrom a small white cylinder.

"What may, that be, mister?" inquired an inquisitive rustic, placing his hand on the other's shoulder.

The latter drew back as if resenting that familiar touch and by way of answer poised the cylinder in a tiny holder and deliberately lighted it, to the amazement of his questioner. Cigarettes were then unknown in that part of the state, and the owner of the coach enjoyed the dubious distinction of being the first to introduce them there.

The lighting of the aboriginal American cigarette drew general attention to the smoker, and the doctor, not a man of modern small pills, but a liberal dispenser of calomel, jalap, castor oil and quinine, whispered to the land lord:

"Azeriah, who might he be?"

Came forward and addressed the "good people."

"Sho! Going to take possession at the manor?"

"He calilates to, I guess, ef he can."

"Yes; ef he can," significantly repeated the doctor. "So this is the foreign heir? He's got wristbands like a woman and hands just as small. Wears gloves like my darter when she goes to meeting house. And silk socks! Why, the old patroon didn't wear none at all, and corduroy was good enough for him, they say. Wonder how the barn burners will take to the silk socks. Who's the other stranger, Azeriah?" indicating with his thumb the soldier, who, standing against a window casement in the rear of the room, was by his height a conspicuous figure in the gathering.

"I don't exactly know, Ezekiel," replied the landlord regretfully. "Not that I didn't try to find out," he added honestly, "but he was so close I couldn't get nothing from him. He's from Paris, France; may be Louis Philippe himself for all I know."

"No; he ain't Louis Philippe," returned the doctor, with decision, "'cause I seen his likeness in the magazine."

"Might be the dolphin, then," suggested the boniface. "He's so mighty mysterious."

"Dolphin!" retorted the other contemptuously. "There ain't no dolphin. There hasn't been no dolphin since the French revolution."

"Oh, I didn't know but there might 'a' been," said the landlord vaguely.

From mouth to mouth the information gleaned by the village doctor was circulated. Speculation had been rife ever since the demise of the last patroon regarding his successor, and, although the locality was beyond the furthermost reach of that landholder, their interest was none the less keen. The old master of the manor had been like a myth—much spoken of, never seen without the boundaries of his acres—but the new lord was a reality, a creditable creation of tailor, hatter, hosier, cobbler, which trades had not flourished under the old master, who bought his clothes, cap and boots at a country store owned by himself. Anticipation of the theatrical performance was thus relieved in a measure by the presence of the heir, but the delay incident to a first night on an improvised stage was so unusual that the audience at length began to evince signs of restlessness.

Finally, however, when the landlord's daughter had gazed what seemed to her an interminable period upon the lady and the swan, the lake and the greyhound, painted on the curtain, this picture vanished by degrees with an exhilarating creaking of the rollers and was succeeded by the representation of a room in a cottage.

Kate was Volante—not Tobin's Volante, but one fashioned out of her own characteristics; supine, but shapely; heavy, but handsome; slow, but specious. Susan, with hair escaping in roguish curls beneath her little cap, her taper waist encompassed by a page's tunic, the trim contour of her figure frankly revealed by her vestment, was truly a lad "dressed up to coxen" any lover who preferred his friend and his bottle to his mistress. Merry as a sand boy, she danced about in russet boots that came to the knee, lithe and lissome in the full swing of immunity from skirts, mantle and petticoats.

Deadly Catarrh

It Can Be Cured.

CATARRH is the beginning of more diseases than all other causes combined. It is capable of attacking most organs of the body. It is the prevailing plague, the foremost scourge of America. It hovers ominously over every city and nestles treacherously in every hamlet. Its vampire wings cast a dark shadow of despair over the length and breadth of the land. Its stealthy approach and lingering stay make it a dread to the physician and a pest to the patient. It changes the merry laugh of childhood to the wheezy breath of croup, and the song of the blushing maiden to the hollow cough of consumption. In its withering grasp the rounded arm of the fond wife and mother becomes gaunt and spectral and the healthy flush of manhood turns to the sallow, haggard visage of the invalid. Cough takes the place of conversation, speech gives way to spitting; the repulsive odors of chronic catarrh poison kisses; the thickened membranes bedim sight, impair hearing and destroy taste. Because of catarrh a cry of distress has gone out from many a household and the mildew of woe clings to numerous hearthstones.

CATARRH IN SOME FORM Catarrh at some stage lurks as an enemy in the slightest cough or cold and thickens its deadish work in the "blighting white plague" consumption. Few tissues, functions or organs of the body escape its ravages; muscles wither, nerves shatter and secretions are contaminated from its destroying presence. It devastates, destroys, devours and establishes a gloomy empire of misery and death. It is not only a filthy and disgusting disease, making the breath odious and repulsive, but if allowed to run, it in time becomes dangerous to life.

THE POISONOUS SECRETIONS following up the mucous tracts, get into the throat and injure the voice, into the head and impair hearing, into the stomach and produce dyspepsia, into the blood and become scrofula, into the respiratory organs and cause consumption.

NOT HALF THE BLIGHTING INFLUENCE of this disgusting and destructive disease has been told. So stubborn and difficult of cure is catarrh that to invent an efficient remedy for it has been the ambition of many aspiring physicians. Is it therefore any wonder that the multitude of people who have been cured by Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are lavish in their praise?

IT HAS CURED THOUSANDS That these tablets render the cure of catarrh a practical certainty is not only the testimony of people who have observed or used them, but many medical men declare it to be true.

If you love health, a sweet breath and a clear head, you should try Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at once. For sale by all druggists, 50 cents per box.

"I wrote to Doctor Pierce, who sent me a very kind letter and advised me."

Thousands of weak and sick women can trace the beginning of a new life of perfect health to that letter written to Dr. Pierce.

Sick and ailing women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures weak and aching backs, headaches, nervousness and other womanly ailments by curing the womanly diseases which cause them.

"In the spring of 1900 I became very ill," writes Mrs. Alvina Scholts, of Lake Washington, Lesueur Co. Minn. "my back was very weak and ached so that I could do no work at all, so I was obliged to take to my bed. I felt a constant desire to urinate and the pains in abdomen were almost unbearable. I wrote to Dr. Pierce, who sent me a very kind letter and advised me to take his 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I took six bottles of each and am a well woman now. I cannot say enough in favor of Dr. Pierce's medicines."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the most desirable laxative for delicate women.

Pandora Range

A VENTILATING OVEN THAT VENTILATES.

There is only one practical way of ventilating the oven in a range and that way has been adopted in the "Pandora"—is an actual working feature and not a mere talking point.

Fresh air is drawn from the outside through small vents into the oven and is quickly heated and disseminated, while the odors and cooking fumes escape through small vents into the smoke flues and up the chimney.

Result is that expensive, juicy roasts retain their rich, natural flavors and are entirely free from cooking odors and taints, to which the palate is so sensitive. Puddings, bread, etc., when baked, are always light fresh and free from taint.

In the production of the "Pandora" range you have all that scientific study, practical experience, skilled workmanship, and an immense and finely equipped plant combined, can produce.

Burdock Blood Bitters

CURED THEM.

It is well-known to all that bad blood is the direct cause of all skin diseases and it is necessary for the blood to be cleansed before the eruptions will disappear. For this purpose there is nothing to equal Burdock Blood Bitters as the thousands of testimonials we have on hand will testify.

Mr. Willard Thompson, McNeill's Mills, P.E.I., writes us as follows: "I wish to state to you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Some time ago my blood got out of order and many boils appeared on my neck, legs and arms. They were so painful that I could not sleep at night. After having tried many different remedies without any success, I finally decided, on the advice of a friend, to use Burdock Blood Bitters. Before I had quite used two bottles the boils had completely disappeared, and I wish to emphasize the fact that I think Burdock Blood Bitters the best blood purifier on the market to-day."

Lakefield, Dec. 2nd.—A meeting of the hockeyists and hockey supporters of the village was held in the town hall on Friday evening, Nov. 18th for the purpose of electing officers for the coming season. There was a good attendance and the following officers were elected: Pres., Irwin Hambley; Vice-Pres., H. J. Stuart; Sec.-Treas., H. Montgomery; Captain, Harry Moore; Vice-Captain, Frank Gray; Managing Committee, F. Gray, R. Bravender, H. Montgomery, A. Bourgea. Delegates to convention to be held in Peterborough, Theo. Crawford, Roy Bravender. After some further business the meeting was adjourned.

Keene, Dec. 2nd.—The prospects for hockey here this winter are none too bright. Several of our old reliables are not available this season and the team in consequence will be considerably weakened. It is felt that since larger towns are to be admitted into the T.V.H.L. the object of its creation is lost, i.e., to foster the spirit of the winter sport in villages not strong enough to compete in the O. H. A. It was from this will being that the idea of the T. V. H. L. originated and we are not ashamed of it. Its has served its purpose well and if its projeny becomes too active to confine itself to paternal surroundings we will willingly see it on its road to spheres of greater usefulness; and at the same time time bring forth another to fill its place.

Belleville, according to the Intelligencer, of that city, may enter a team in the Trent Valley League. The article says: "Some people in this city think that it would be a good plan for Belleville to enter a team in the Trent Valley Hockey League. There are in the city some players who are hardly swift enough for the senior O.H.A. team and too old for the junior O.H.A. team. They could unite and form a septette which would make things highly interesting for any team in the Trent Valley League. Picton has made application for membership, and it might not be a bad idea for Belleville to do the same thing. Think it over, gentlemen. The indications are that the Trent Valley will have the largest membership in its history this season. Clubs throughout this district who have been identified with the league in the past and any clubs wishing to join should correspond with the secretary at once, advising him regarding the prospects of the game in their respective districts this winter. Mr. E. S. Clarry, Peterborough, is the secretary."

PAYING INVESTMENT FOR PETERBOROUGH.

Ald Rush Evolves Plan to Provide Isolation Hospital

And at same time Produce a Revenue to the Town—The Hilliard Farm may be Purchased.

During the years in which Ald. H. Rush has been a member of the town council, he has served his constituents and the town faithfully, and, to his painstaking efforts may be traced many much needed reforms in municipal matters. During 1903, as chairman of the Finance Committee he has guarded carefully the town exchequer, and, as a crowning triumph to his other acts in the pub-interest, at the Council meeting held Tuesday night, brought forward a project, which, if adopted, will doubtless result in great benefit to the town.

For some time the town has been face to face with a most serious problem—one which affects the public health, and the solution of which would relieve not only the members of the council of considerable anxiety, but also the entire population of the town of a sense of insecurity, as far as the public health is concerned. The hospitals found that it was undesirable to admit to their wards patients suffering from contagious diseases, and as a result, the town was notified by the authorities of both hospitals that after November 1st, 1903, they would not be able to accept for treatment any person suffering from contagious diseases. This action taken by the hospitals, is one with which no fault can be found, because it is a fact universally recognized that the interests of health demand that contagious diseases should not be accepted and treated in a building in which ordinary surgical and non-contagious patients are confined.

Upon the notification of the decision by the hospital boards, the council found itself in a position which required the best thought of the members to arrive at the adoption of the most feasible plan to meet the difficulty confronted. A number of alternate propositions were considered, none of which appeared to meet the case fully, until Ald. Rush evolved a scheme which promised not only to provide a way out of the immediate difficulty, but also one the adoption of which would prove a very profitable venture for the town.

The chief difficulty in the way of establishing an isolation hospital for the caring for of those who are suffering from contagious diseases, the treatment of whom the hospitals already established could no longer undertake, was that no suitable site on which to build such an institution, could be located. Ald. Rush, however, after carefully investigating the conditions, secured an option on the Hilliard farm, situated on the bank of the Otonabee river, in the northern part of the town, consisting of 65 93-100 acres, according to the estimate of the town engineer.

It is pointed out that this would provide an admirably located site for the erection of such an hospital, and the nature of the soil makes it otherwise a most profitable investment.

The option which Ald. Rush has been successful in securing on the property from Mr. W. F. Hilliard, of Regina, N.W.T., calls for a purchase price of $10,000, the option to expire on February 1st, 1904.

The soil on this farm is of a gravelly nature, and on it is a considerable amount of stone. This property, therefore, would prove a very valuable asset to the town. Year after year it is becoming increasingly difficult to procure gravel and stone, of which an increasing quantity is being used, both for granolithic walks, and macadamizing purposes, and a report of the town engineer gives the information that "the eastern part of the property contains an immense ridge of excellent gravel of different grades, from heavy coarse gravel to sand, sufficient to supply the town for many years. There is also a large quantity of field stone piled along the fences and in heaps, roughly estimated at 1,200 cords."

The value to the town of this stone and gravel so close at hand, is made more apparent, when the amount of money paid out by the council during the last four years for these items is known. The town records show that since 1900 the sum of $5,842.20 has been paid on this account. The figures are as follows:

	Stone.	Gravel.
1900	$ 331 27	$ 153 56
1901	800 36	275 93
1902	1410 82	312 73
1903 (to Sept. 12)	1071 02	495 49
	$4604 47	$1237 73

Accepting the statement made by the Town Engineer that on this property there is sufficient stone and gravel to supply the town for many years, it will be seen that the property will soon pay for itself in gravel. The Engineer however says further: "The gravel banks are so situated that when they are excavated to the level of the lower lands, the property will be left in good shape for disposing of as factory or building sites. The G. T. R. is so situated as to make it quite easy to lay a siding into the property." Thus it will be seen that an additional advantage would come to the town by acquiring the property.

There is, too, a considerable revenue to be derived from the property from the tenants that are now on it. This may be enumerated as follows: From Rawlings for farm, etc....$150
" Billington.....27
" McMillan.....72
" Hilliard.....120

Gross revenue.....$414

The property is at present assessed for $8750, the taxes on which at 19 mills, amount to $166.25, must be deducted from the gross revenue, making the net revenue, $247.75.

This revenue could be increased from various sources, and Ald. Rush believes that $400 per year could easily be obtained from the property, so that it will be seen that it would more than pay for itself.

Ald. Rush has conducted the negotiations looking to a purchase of this land by the town, with an eye to the public interest, and deserves the thanks of the town for his excellent services.

That the other members appreciate the advantage which would come to the town by securing this property was made evident by the unanimity with which the proposal was adopted by the council. A motion was passed authorizing the town solicitor to prepare a by-law providing for the purchase of this property on thirty-year debentures, this by-law to be submitted to the electors in January.

ASTONISHING SCENE IN LOCAL POLICE COURT.

Edgar Wall Threatened to Commit Suicide Now out on Bail.

At the police court yesterday afternoon, Edgar Wall, a boy aged about 14 years, was arraigned before Police Magistrate Dumble charged with stealing fishing tackle from a local boat house to the value of $15. Several witnesses were called, whose testimony went to confirm the charge. Wall was found guilty, and the Magistrate remarked that he would send him to the Reformatory, whereupon the accused, but a mere child, threatened to commit suicide, and so escape his years of punishment. The Magistrate and Crown Attorney Wood stood aghast at hearing the young desperado so violently assert his intention, while the defending lawyer smilingly showed his admiration for his young client's audacity. The next move on the part of the magistrate was to remand Wall for a week, but it was found that the sheriff would not take him into the gaol, as he was under age; consequently, he was allowed out on bail for one week to receive judgment then.

AFTERMATH OF THE CROCKFORD CASE.

Prisoner was Committed for trial—The Evidence.

At the police court yesterday afternoon more evidence was taken to substantiate the case against Edgarth Crockford, who was arraigned before Police Magistrate Dumble charged with writing a letter to Mrs. Rev. W. T. Lorymer, of Sawyerville, Quebec, in which he threatened to shoot her husband, Rev. Wm. Tindal Lorymer, a Baptist minister.

THE EVIDENCE.

Alex. Reid was the first witness called and on being sworn, said—I am an expressman, and about six week ago was employed by the prisoner to take his trunk from 256 McDonel street to the G.T.R. station. However, when I got there I found that he had employed another carter. I saw him on the station platform and asked him to pay me for my journey, but he refused.

Crockford's landlady being sworn—I live at 256 McDonel street, and the prisoner boarded with me up to Nov. 7th, when I think he left for Toronto. I do not know his wife, but know he was a married man. I belive his wife was working at Breese's, Stony Lake, this summer. I only know Mr. Lorymer by sight. On one occasion the prisoner said if he was to meet Lorymer he would knock him down. Reid came about 8.10; Crockford had gone out before that to get another carter. He had his breakfast about 7. I did not see him go out or come back but know he left the house before driving away to the station, as I went through all the rooms of the house.

After considering the evidence before him the Magistrate committed Crockford for trial.

RAILWAYS WILL PAY ON A MILEAGE BASIS.

Railways Admit That They Expect to Pay More Taxes.

Mr. MacMurchy for the C. P. R. and Mr. Lynch-Stanton for Bell Telephone Company Have Lively Hearings Before the Legislative Assessment Committee—Willing to Pay a Fair Tax—The Bell Case.

Toronto, Dec. 4.—The case for the corporations, i.e., the railways and telephone companies, was argued all day yesterday before the Legislative Committee on Assessment. Mr. MacMurchy, for the C. P. R., and Mr. Lynch-Stanton of Hamilton for the Bell Telephone Company, made elaborate presentations against the proposed assessment of franchise-holding bodies. They said they were willing to submit to a system of taxation which would yield a fair tax, but not on their net earnings. During the hearing of the argument the chairman, Hon. J. M. Gibson, gave it as his opinion that an arrangement could be made to tax the railway on a mileage basis which would be preferable to any other system, as it would obviate the necessity of going into multi[illegible]us details.

Acquiring Branch Lines.

Mr. MacMurchy resumed when the committee got down to business. His early references, he said, were to branch lines in the province, which had been acquired by the Grand Trunk and the C.P.R.

Mr. Carscallen said it was notorious that those branch lines passed into the hands of the large companies because they were not in a position to operate profitably.

Mr. Hoyles mentioned the Toronto and Nipissing, which was taken over when it was paying, and was sold out at a profit.

Mr. MacMurchy argued that there was no water in C.P.R. stock. Originally only about 65 cents on the dollar was realized on the stock, and it ran down to 34. The railway should pay taxes, but not on the basis of their earnings. The earnings could only be found by taking into consideration the operation of the railways, not in the province but throughout the Dominion. And it would cost more than would be got in taxes to find out what proportion of the earnings was actually due the province. The municipalities should continue to assess on real property, and if the Government wanted more taxes it should levy on the net earnings. He said the railways get more protection from the province for $5 a mile than they get from the townships.

Capital of Grand Trunk.

Mr. J. F. Beam asked what was the capital of the Grand Trunk, and Mr. Hellmuth answered $200,000,000, of which $110,000,000 was common stock on which there had been no dividend at all. The total amount received, including bonded debt, was $320,000,000. The road had cost between $90,000 and $92,000 a mile, which equalled the average cost in the United States.

Here Mr. Beam observed that the G.T.R. from Montreal to Sarnia was built at $40,000 a mile. Mr. Hellmuth replied that the cost of double tracking and heavy steel bridges was to be added to that.

A general discussion followed as to the best method of levying the tax Mr. Carscallen thought it should be on earnings, but Mr. Hellmuth thought track mileage would be a better basis. The railway was willing to submit to any taxation on a just basis on their ability to pay, but it could not pay anything like the railways of the United States pay.

Mr. Pettypiece said the railways' ability to pay should not be considered as the ability of the farmers to pay was not considered. If the railways suffered from the sparsity of population, other people were at the same disadvantage. If the railways improved their property it was for the purpose of making more money, and they should be taxed accordingly.

The chairman observed that there was an insistent demand that the railways be further taxed. Mr. Hellmuth agreed that they were likely to be required to pay more, and said they would rather do it with good grace.

Case For Bell Company.

Mr. Lynch-Stanton of Hamilton appeared on behalf of the Bell Telephone Company. He said the purpose of the bill was, after assessing the company for all it was worth, it should be taxed on an intangible something called a franchise. If the Bell Company is assessed on that basis, the hotel-keepers should be assessed on the value of their furniture.

The suggestion was made that hotel-keepers were assessed on that basis, and Mr. Lynch-Stanton said his company paid a heavy tax to the municipalities.

He argued that the telephone companies had as much right to the use of the streets as any one else. The privileges are a part of the privileges which all classes are entitled to. Why should you tax telephone poles more than the posts or any other privileges enjoyed by the ordinary citizen? The streets were intended for the use of everybody.

Mr. Carscallen—Do you use the streets for the purpose of making money?

Mr. Lynch-Stanton—Not any more than anyone else uses them for making money. The man who has a front door uses it to let people into his store for the purpose of making money. The streets are for the use of the public.

Continuing, he said if the people taxed the company for its franchise they should not tax for its property.

Mr. Lynch-Stanton said no corporation in Toronto paid such an unjust assessment as the Bell Company.

No Demand For Franchise Tax.

Assessor Foreman of Toronto remarked that the company was assessed in Toronto on its street plant under an agreement. The amount was $478,000.

Mr. Lynch-Stanton said there was no demand for a franchise tax. If the machinery of other manufacturers was exempt the Bell Company should be exempt. In reply to Mr. Preston, he said he would be willing to submit to a business tax if treated on the same basis as others.

Mr. Duff pointed out that there were a great many municipalities where telephone poles were not assessed, and Mr. Lynch-Stanton said they were assessable.

Mr. Whitney observed that in a great many municipalities they were assessed, but it was a question whether they were assessed enough.

Suggests a Plan.

Mr. Lynch-Stanton suggested that the easiest way to tax telephone companies would be to assess on the gross revenue in the cities and towns and in the townships on their mileage. He was willing to be caught both ways and did not object to paying his full share of taxes.

Mr. Carscallen asked how it would be to assess on the number of instruments in use. This point was discussed in all its bearings, and when the committee rose at 5 o'clock there was no apparent agreement among the members. Another session will be held to-day.

RUSSIA STILL SILENT.

Japan Fretting Over Delay in Replying to Her Proposals. The Tension is Now Acute.

London, Dec. 4.—The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Mail says it is reported on credible authority that at Tuesday's Cabinet Council it was actually proposed to send an ultimatum to Russia, but that this grave step was eventually abandoned in favor of the milder course, which was ultimately adopted. The correspondent says the tension is acute, and it is generally felt that a few days will see important developments.

Demanded an Answer.

Yokohama, Dec. 4.—It is reported at Tokio that Japanese Minister Kurino at St. Petersburg twice within the past ten days had demanded Count Lamsdorff's reply to the final proposals of the Japanese Government. Count Lamsdorff proposed proceeding to Alexandroy for the purpose of securing the sanction of the Czar to the drafts of the answer drawn by Viceroy Alexieff and Baron de Rosen, the Russian Minister to Japan, but had so far been prevented from so doing owing to the illness of the Czarina. The Emperor of Japan, it is expected, will open the Diet Dec. 8, when it is hoped that definite developments in the Far Eastern situation may avert the impending crisis and allay the domestic impatience.

A FAIRY STORY.

The Toronto News, which has earned distinction as an "independent" journal, first gave to the public the very prettty fairy story of the beneficent corruption fund of the Ontario Conservative Association, raised to combat corruption by spending more money. In a recent issue the News actually talks as if it believes the story, and it makes admissions as self-evidently true, as others it makes are self-evidently absurd. For instance, with a candour, evidently intended to disarm auspicion, the News admits that "a thoroughly corrupt Conservative machine existed; it did many rascally things; it may even be responsible for enticing Liberal workers into paths of evil." Then it goes on to point out that in 1900 and in 1902, the Conservative party fought elections with central funds amounting to only $19,673, and $28,895, respectively. This, the News does not assert, it merely suggests. But in another paragraph it positively asserts that $28,895 was the only corruption fund the Conservatives had in 1902, and that, "of this, only $22,158 was actually expended, while only $17,525 went into the constituencies, or an average of about $170 to each." Does the News know that this is true? No; the election courts inform us that into several constituencies $500, and as much as $700, was sent—and the courts also show that in one, at least, of these constituencies, this $700 was only a drop in the bucket compared to the corruption money that was spent in the Conservative interest. The News insists that this was the only central fund. Where then was the corruption fund raised whose expenditure led to the crooked work that unseated four Conservative members elected with a corruption fund which only allowed $170 to each riding? (Why the Conservative whiskey bills in North Norfolk and the "Soo," couldn't be paid with $500, not to speak of $170.

The organ of the "purity" politicians must take the people for fools when it asks them to believe such fairy stories. If the $28,000 was a bona fide "purity" fund, let us have particulars. There is no harm in giving them. Who subscribed the money? Let us know the names so that a curious world may gaze on a veritable freak — a Conservative, a practical politician, who subscribes money to purify politics! Let us have the details of the expenditure; if it was purely spent, that would be another revelation—there would be no harm, but an infinite amount of good would be done in revealing to the world how money could be spent for double value—to, at the same time, purify Conservative election methods and unseat Conservative members for corrupt practices.

THE DOWNFALL OF DOWIE.

The irretrievable collapse of that strange enterprise, which took shape in Zion City, on the shores of Lake Michigan, half way between Chicago and Milwaukee, came sooner, but with no more widespread disaster than was expected by unprejudiced onlookers, says the Toronto Globe. On the surface it seems unthinkable that in one of the chief cities of the American Republic, a scheme so erratic and so contradictory of all the principles of democracy should gain any sympathy or support. That thousands of people, many of them not without education and technical skill, should give over their intellectual and moral independence, and all their earthly possessions to the absolute keeping of such a man as Dowie, and should follow his lead to the uttermost limits of absurdity, suggests one of the unsolved and growingly threatening problems of American civilization. Dowie's extravagant dogmatism, the very extravagance of his claims to absolute authority over his followers, his imaginatively impressive pretensions to a special Divine commission, and his altogether masterly use of the spectacular, appealed to certain grades of intellectual and emotional natures, and made him an autocrat as undisputed in his sway as a Sultan. The fact of his amazing success and the widespread misery of his failure, raise old-time questions in economics, sociology, and morals, which have not been settled by our rule-of-thumb theories.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

Public ownership of the street railway is popular and profitable in Port Arthur. The Times-Journal of that city supplies the testimony in these words: "Port Arthur has shown the world that public franchises owned and operated by the people are just what is claimed for them. This year the franchise will pay four mills on the general assessment in addition to operating expenses and large additions to the plants. The street railway has purchased several thousand dollars' worth of rolling stock, besides putting the whole system in splendid repair and adding to the value of the franchise. Track and equipment both show the impetus that has been given by the increase of population. With the people to carry, there is no doubt of the line being a splendid taxpayer, and all the time the unseen part of such an enterprise—the franchise — is constantly growing in value."

Operations Avoided.

Hospitals in our great cities are sad places to visit. Three-fourths of the patients lying on those snow-white beds are women and girls.

Why should this be the case? Because they have neglected themselves.

Every one of these patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in that bearing-down feeling, pain at the left or right of the womb, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back. All of these things are indications of an unhealthy condition of the ovaries or womb.

What a terrifying thought! These poor souls are lying there on those hospital beds awaiting a fearful operation.

Do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an examination and possible operation. Build up the female system, cure the derangements which have signified themselves by danger signals, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from the hospital. Read the letters here published with the full consent of the writers, and see how they escaped the knife by a faithful reliance on Mrs. Pinkham's advice and the consistent treatment of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

READ THE FOLLOWING LETTERS:

"I was taken sick very suddenly July 13th with severe cramps, or pains. I summoned a doctor and was in bed a week lying on my back all the time. The pains left me very sore. In a few weeks I was feeling better but was soon taken sick again with those pains and had another doctor. This one said I had neuralgia pains of the stomach and ovaries. He injected morphine and eased me again, but I remained sore and weak from the pains and continued to flow for one month and three days without stopping for one day.

"The doctors wanted to scrape the womb, saying the lining was inflamed. I had a pain at times in my right ovary and felt weak nearly all the time. Am only twenty years old, never was sick until this sickness in July. Menses never lasted more than four days and never an ache or a pain.

"I began the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon was feeling better. I am now well and strong again. Your medicine has relieved me of the pain in my side and stopped my flowing which the doctors could not do.

"I feel very grateful to you and can recommend your medicine to all suffering women."—LUCILLE A. GAINES, 2348 Pine St., St. Louis, Mo.

"I suffered with female trouble for over eight years, had womb trouble and painful menstruation. Have been under the care of doctors who said I would have to submit to an operation before I could be cured. I suffered everything.

"One day I picked up a paper and noticed your advertisement and a testimonial from a friend I knew, stating your medicine had cured her so I thought I would try it. I told my husband I would give up all doctors and try your medicine. I began using your medicine just two months ago and cannot say enough on its praise. Menstruation comes freely now without pain.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health, joy and happiness to me. My advice to all suffering women is to try your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. FRED MCNAUGHTON, Box 401, Breckenridge, Minn.

TO FOLLOW CANADA

Views Expressed at Paris by Mr. Bodington.

CANADA IS EMPIRE'S THINKER

Britain's Adoption of Preferential Tariff Would Not Disturb the Friendly Feelings Between France and Great Britain—No Race in Canada Would Raise Difficulties Between These Two Countries.

London, Dec. 4.—(C.A.P.)—Speaking at the banquet of the British Chamber of Commerce at Paris yesterday, President Bodington declared there was no ground for believing that Britain's adoption of the preferential tariff would disturb the friendly feeling existing between France and Great Britain. Canadians, especially French-Canadians, were determined to lend themselves to no plan to raise difficulties between Great Britain and France. He believed such a policy would ultimately lead to a general reduction in tariffs all over the world.

From the gold fields of the Yukon to the steel mills of Ontario, Canada was by far the most prosperous colony in the Empire. What Canada thinks commercially to-day the Empire would think to-morrow. The Imperial economist cannot afford to be indifferent to Canadian sentiment. Lord Alverstone and others in England on the Alaskan award did not realize that when the United States wanted one pound of flesh it began by asking for two.

Ritchie and Balfour.

Mr. Ritchie, speaking to the Croydon Conservative Workingmen's Club yesterday, declared he was strongly opposed to Mr. Chamberlain's policy, but nothing in Premier Balfour's policy was opposed to the principle of free trade. Although Premier Balfour announced a certain policy, members of the Government were going about the country announcing a totally different policy. If protection was adopted living would become higher.

J. Brailsford, chairman of the Ebbvale Iron Company, said the Top mill, which had been working for one hundred years, was now closed by dumping. Premier Balfour's program only went half way. To be complete, they wanted the trade of the colonies. If by a preference they could sell goods at a reasonable profit, there were grand times for England yet.

Afraid of Tariff Revolver.

Referring to Germany's announcement of continuing the most favored nations treatment to the British colonies, The Telegraph says: "Count Buelow knows if he begins penalizing Canada he will simply become an exceedingly effective canvasser for Chamberlain."

The Express says: "Germany is afraid of the tariff revolver."

The Leader refers to the Montreal Board of Trade's protest re the French Islands under the heading "Canadian Alarmists."

MR. BELL'S WARNING.

Surplus Products of United States Will Be More Than Ever Dumped in Britain.

London, Dec. 4.—The Board of Trade Journal for December prints a warning to British manufacturers from Seymour Bell, the British Commercial Agent in the United States, prophesying an extensive invasion of the British markets by American firms in the future. Mr. Bell writes that the decreasing demand in the United States for many classes of goods indicates that American firms will soon be looking abroad for markets in which to dispose of their surplus products at almost any price.

"It would be well, therefore," says Mr. Bell, "to bring before British manufacturers and shippers in an unmistakeable manner the progress made in recent years by American exporters in securing hold on the markets within the British possessions, particularly for certain classes of goods which could be manufactured in the United Kingdom."

He says that while the total of American exports during the past year has decreased 4.6 per cent., American exports to the British possessions have increased 17 per cent., and this, Mr. Bell adds, is a decidedly larger increase than is shown in the statements of exports from the United Kingdom.

Read the following highly creditable testimonials, endorsing Mr. McGregor's work:

From the Firm of Bennet & Wright, Plumbing, Heating and Electrical Contractors, Toronto.

This is to certify that Duncan McGregor has been in our employment steady for about fifteen years and, during that time we have found him to be steady, honest and trustworthy. He has given every satisfaction as a practical mechanic in each of the following branches: Plumbing, steam and gas fitting, also electrical and conduit work, and for some time has had charge of some of our largest contracts with satisfactory results.

From Illsley & Horn, General Contractors, Toronto.

The bearer, Mr. Duncan McGregor, had charge of the electric wiring at the King Edward Hotel Building. The job was a large and complicated one and by the way Mr. McGregor handled the work he proved himself a mechanic of more than ordinary ability. We unhesitatingly recommend him as a first-class mechanic to anyone needing his services.

From Mr. J. Ross Robertson, of the Evening Telegram.

Mr. Duncan McGregor, who has been connected with the Bennet & Wright Co. for some years, and who has superintended the work of plumbing and heating for the Bennet & Wright Co., is not only in my opinion, but also that of my architect, a fully competent mechanic. His work, my architect informs me, has been most satisfactory. Anything that has come under my own supervision has been likewise satisfactory.

An Extract Taken from the June Number of Domestic Engineering.

During the recent convention of the Canadian Electrical Association held in the King Edward Hotel, a thorough examination was made of all the electrical work in the hotel, and it was pronounced second to none on the continent. Therefore, great credit is due Mr. Duncan MacGregor, who superintended the entire conduit, electrical and power system for the firm of Bennet & Wright, of this city, who were the contractors for all the different branches of the electrical work in the new hotel.

Strengthen the Friendship

Washington, Dec. 3.—Sir Mortimer Durand, the new British Ambassador, was formally received by the President yesterday. In addressing the President he said: "His Majesty King Edward has directed me to assure you of his earnest desire that the friendly relations which exist between the United States and Great Britain may be maintained and strengthened, and I have received His Majesty's command to keep this object constantly in view."

The Hold-Up a Fake.

Toronto, Dec. 2.—Charles Winters, the farm laborer, who told the police day before yesterday that he had been held up for $480 in Hogg's Hollow, yesterday confessed that he had fabricated the story in order to stand well with the people of his young wife. He was let go with a reprimand.

G. T. R. GUARANTEE

Company Had No Difficulty in Raising $5,000,000.

DEPOSIT IN BANKERS' HANDS

Payment to Government Delayed in Order to Allow the Company an Opportunity of Modifying the Contract—No Difficulty in Having Guarantee Underwritten, and Government Has Agreed to Conditions of Delay.

Montreal, Dec. 4.—Mr. Edwin Hanson, Canadian representative of Coates & Sons English bankers, says: "The statement that the Grand Trunk Railway had any difficulty in securing the $5,000,000 required as a guarantee for the Pacific project is a fallacy. The company could get the money without the slightest trouble. While there might be some difficulty in getting the large amount of capital required for the entire project, there would not be any in getting such a small amount. A short time ago, when the company made an issue of a little more than $3,000,000, it was underwritten by the public within a couple of hours. The difficulty cannot be a financial one, although money is not as plentiful in England as some time ago."

The Grand Trunk Railway yesterday announced that the necessary $5,000,000 deposit had been provided by the company, and was in the hands of bankers. Payment to the Government was delayed in order to allow the company an opportunity of modifying the contract. No difficulty had been experienced in having it underwritten, and the Government had agreed to the conditions of delay.

London cables yesterday stated that the Canadian Pacific Railway had effected a sale of £2,800,000 to £3,000,000 of four per cent. debenture stock at prices from 106 to 109. The officials at headquarters were not prepared, however, to make a statement on the subject. This is the stock the management was authorized to market to pay for extensive terminal improvements and the steamships acquired last summer.

SHOEMEN TO SIGN CONTRACT.

Quebec Strikers to Accept Conditions of the Manufacturers.

Quebec, Dec. 4.—It was stated that the shoemen decided last night to accept the conditions of the shoe manufacturers and to present themselves at their respective factories to-day to sign the contract drawn out by the Manufacturers' Association. The shoe factories will then be opened Monday if nothing untoward happens.

Strike At Guelph.

Guelph, Dec. 4.—The weavers of the Guelph Carpet Company have gone out on strike, owing to a misunderstanding which arose between the officials and themselves.

Situation Gets Acute.

Toronto, Dec. 4.—The situation between the G.T.R. telegraphers and the company's officials is becoming more acute. The demands of the operators east of the Detroit River for an increase of 23 per cent. in wages has up to date been practically turned down. The company offered a compromise of 8 per cent., which was yesterday refused. The matter was consequently handed over to the International body to deal with.

200 Men Out of Work.

Windsor, Dec. 4.—The Saginaw Salt and Lumber Company of Sandwich has closed down for the winter months, throwing two hundred men out of work. It will re-open in the spring.

Non-Union Conductor Shot Him.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—Ejected from an electric car because he had refused to pay his fare to a non-union conductor, Omer R. Burke, secretary of the Steam Fitters' Union, pursued the car for five blocks, assaulted the conductor, and received a bullet wound which probably will cause his death.

DANGEROUS SURGERY,

Death Follows the Surgeon's Knife—Not the Surgeon's Fault, of Course—He Can't Help It—You Can.

Pyramid Pile Cure Cures Piles Quickly, Painlessly, Without Danger.

People go along for years suffering with piles. They try this and that and the other thing from carrying a buckeye to getting treatment from a physician. They obtain temporary relief, maybe, but they are never quite cured. A little strain in lifting, excessive fatigue, a little constipation or a little diarrhoea and the piles come back.

They don't seem to amount to much, but they banish sleep and appetite. No position is comfortable. There is intense local pain and that dreadful feeling of weight in the perineum.

Maybe in the early stages some of the many salves on sale will afford temporary relief. If the case is of long standing there is only one speedy and sure remedy. It is Pyramid Pile Cure. Even in light cases it is the safest thing to use. Other applications may cure and may not. Pyramid Cure is always certain, always reliable, always brings comfort at once. Its prompt use saves months of severe suffering. In extreme cases it will save surgical operations, and their attendant dangers and discomforts. It is better than a knife. Will cure easier, quicker and safer. Thousands have used it. Thousands have been cured by it. The cost is trifling compared with what it does. The price is 50 cents. Most anybody would gladly pay ten dollars to be rid of piles.

All druggists sell Pyramid Pile Cure. Write Pyramid Drug Company, Marshall, Mich., for their book on Causes and Cure of Piles, which is sent free for the asking.

Did They Succeed?

London, Dec. 4.—Messrs. Clergue and Dandurand have sailed without fulfilling their promise to let the Canadian press know the result of their mission.

STRONG FEELING OVER THIS.

Prescott Man Breaks Jaw of Girl He Courted 12 Years.

Prescott, Dec. 4.—No trace has yet been found of H. H. Hiscox, whose brutal assault on Miss Minnie Cosgrove on Saturday afternoon has occasioned a great deal of strong feeling here. Hiscox is a well-known citizen and has hitherto borne a good reputation. He was for many years secretary of the Citizens' Band, of the Hockey Club and of the Fair Board. He had a fierce temper, however.

For twelve years he has been courting Miss Cosgrove, daughter of James Cosgrove, a wealthy contractor, who opposed her marrying Hiscox. Last week an old admirer of the girl's turned up, and Hiscox became jealous. On Saturday he met Miss Cosgrove and walked with her until near her home, when suddenly he struck her heavily in the face. She fell and he ran. Her jaw is very badly broken and she is suffering severely from nervous shock.

The Brockville police were notified, but Hiscox has not been seen since Monday morning.

WRECKAGE OF THE EMERALD.

Munroe Chatterson Picked It Up and It Was Identified.

Brighton, Dec. 4.—Munroe Chatterson, living on Presque Isle Point, while plowing in a field near the lake shore on Wednesday, Nov. 18, observed a mass of wreckage on the beach. He hauled it out of the water, and it proved to be about three-quarters of the side of a cabin of a vessel. It was painted white on the inside and drab on the outside, and had a window in it. Wednesday it was identified by Mr. Nix, brother-in-law of Capt McMasters, and another sailor as being part of the Emerald's cabin. This seems to corroborate Mrs. Sharp's story of seeing a wreck on Nov. 17, the day before.

DROWNED AT KINGSTON.

Hugh Ramey, a Sailor on Schooner Danforth Goes Down.

Kingston, Dec. 4.—A man named Hugh Ramey, about forty years old, a sailor aboard the schooner Danforth, was accidentally drowned in the slip at the foot of Princess street, where the schooner's cargo was discharged, yesterday. The accident, which occurred about 7 o'clock, was not witnessed, but Ramey's cry was heard. Before assistance could be rendered he had sank. The body was recovered shortly after the accident. His friends at Port Colborne have been notified.

Contributory Must Pay.

Toronto, Dec. 4.—An important decision was rendered yesterday at Osgoode Hall, by which it was ordered that A. S. Green of Berlin, a contributory to the Atlas Loan Co., is liable on the balance due on his shares. The National Trust Company, liquidators, brought the action and the Master-in-Ordinary so decided. It was a test case and may be fought higher, as it is a precedent.

Had an Arm Cut Off.

London, Dec. 4.—James Smith, a young man who has been working for the Columbia Handle Works for four days, lost his left arm below the elbow by its coming in contact with a circular saw on a dowelling machine. Smith is a stranger in the city, having come from England recently. His father is inspector of postoffices in the city of London, England.

Elevator Men Injured.

Port Arthur, Dec. 4.—Two men employed on the G.N.R. elevator were injured yesterday, one case is thought to be serious. While unloading timber from a car, one of the pieces rolled on Jos. Patten, injuring him internally, the other man was struck by a piece of tile.

The Fires of Eczema.

So keen is the suffering of many people who endure the stinging, itching sensations of Eczema that they speak of the skin as being on fire. By its soothing, healing, antiseptic influence Dr. Chase's Ointment positively cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and every form of itching skin disease. It is of inestimable value in every home, and when once introduced becomes a household necessity. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the standard the world over, and has no worthy rival.

A Cat and a Mouse.

Many, says a contributor, are distressed by the way in which a cat "plays" with a mouse before killing it. That the mouse does not suffer so much as might be expected is proved by certain facts told me by a friend a short time ago. Her cat after catching a mouse and "playing" with it for some time left it to go and eat some meat in a plate on the floor. To my friend's surprise, the mouse followed in spite of a broken leg and fed for awhile out of the same dish, the cat occasionally pushing the mouse aside when it came too close. When both had finished, the cat ate up his companion, who evidently feared death as little as the condemned murderers who, we are often told, "ate a hearty breakfast on the morning of their execution."

Mastication.

The primary object of mastication is to break up the food so as to facilitate the swallowing of it and, still more important, to insure its intimate admixture with the digestive juices, not only within the mouth, but throughout the entire digestive tract. Mastication has, however, other important and far reaching effects. Thus it promotes the flow of saliva and, when properly performed, secures a due insalivation of the food; it increases the quantity of alkaline saliva passing into the stomach; it stimulates the heart and circulation, and it finally influences the nutrition of the jaws and their appendages by stimulating the local blood and lymph circulation.

Living in a Grave.

A remarkable saint has recently made his appearance in Bengal and professes to effect miraculous cures of incurable diseases. During the recent cold weather he passed fifty-one days in a tank by keeping nearly the whole of his body under water, and now he is living inside a "pucca" grave six feet deep. This has been wholly covered over with masonry, keeping only a small hole (the diameter of which is about two inches) through which to serve him with his daily food, simply consisting of an orange or pomegranate juice with one almond only. In this state he will remain for fifty-one consecutive days, and through the hole a string has been passed into the grave, one end of it being tied to a bell suspended on a bamboo post to enable him to give an alarm in case of any danger or mishap. He also uses it to respond to calls inquiring after his health, signifying thereby that he is all right. The saint entered the grave with his bedding, some holy books, two or three bottles of rose-water and one or two vials of attar of roses, after which the opening was blocked up, barring the hole, and then, leveling the place with earth, some greens were sown, which, being regularly watered, thrive nicely. The saint has taken the rosewater with him in lieu of plain water to wash his face, hands and feet before saying his prayers. But the saint was not without an eye to the main chance, for one day a money order came to his address from Bombay, which, being rolled up, was dropped into the grave through the hole. It was shortly after passed back duly signed by the holy man.—East Indian Exchange.

THE C. G. E. BENEFIT SOCIETY CONCERT.

An Enjoyable Evening Spent in Forester's Hall Last Night.

The C. G. E. Benefit Society last night held the first of a series of entertainments which the society purpose giving during the winter in the Foresters' hall, Simcoe street. There was a good attendance and the entertainment was of a very pleasing character. After the concert a few hours were enjoyably spent in dancing. The chairman of the gathering was Mr. Jas. Hickey, who, in his address, spoke of the objects of the society and announced that during the winter a number of similar entertainments would be held. A very enjoyable programme was then given, the first number on which was an instrumental duet by the Misses Picaurd. Mr. S. Rogers followed with a cornet solo, "Alice, Where Art Thou," and in response to a recall gave "Home, Sweet Home." Miss A. Pedlar then gave a vocal solo, "My Home ius Where the Heather Blooms," and so enthusiastically was she applauded that she gave a second selection, "Four Leaf Clover," Miss Houlihan also gave two delightful vocal solos, "The Song I Heard one Sunday Morning," and "When You Were Sweet Sixteen." Mr. Jos. Legg favoured the audience with two solos given in his usual musical style, "Tick Tack Too," and "I'm Wearing My Heart Away for You, being his selections. Mr. C. Akey, to the evident satisfaction of the audience gave a recitation, "My Courtship," to which an encore was demanded, Mr. Akey responding with "The Troubles of a Married Man." Miss M. Clancy gave a vocal solo, "Dreamy June" and graciously responded to an encore.

Miss K. Hurley and Miss M. McCabe acted as accompanists during the evening.

All who were fortunate enough to attend the concert last night will look forward with interest to the announcement of the coming entertainments. The committee wishes to thank those who kindly contributed to the programme.

THE SOCIAL WORLD.

Interesting Personal Items Gathered by Reporters.

Miss Clare Belleghem spent yesteray in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Meagher, of Chicago, Ill., are visiting the former's parents at 118 Lansdowne street, town.

Hon. J. R. Stratton came down from Toronto to-day to attend the funeral of the late Thomas Blezard, which takes place this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

A CREDITABLE ORGANIZATION.

Mr. Gliddon's Orchestra Comes in for Considerable Praise.

In the report of St. Andrew's Young Men's Guild Concert in yesterday's Examiner, mention of the part taken by the orchestra was omitted in order that special mention might be made in a separate article. This is a permanent musical organization, and, under the leadership of Mr. Gliddon is rapidly becoming one of which the town may well be proud. The music rendered Wednesday night, both before the regular programme and the selection on the programme, "Thistles," was thoroughly enjoyed, and many complimentary remarks upon the value to the town of the organization were made. Few places of this size can boast of as good an orchestra as Mr. Gliddon has gotten together.

A Sight Worth Seeing.

People have no idea until they come and see what a beautiful sight the Aylmer street greenhouses present at present. The large display of fresh and healthy looking house plants in bloom, the lovely ferns, fern pots and foliage plants, basket and other cute designs, and the great variety of material for floral decorations, are well worth seeing. Fresh Carnations out every day. Open till ten o'clock every evening. Jos. H. Cobb, Florist.

CORONER'S JURY RENDERED VERDICT.

On the Cause of Death of Late John Donnelly—G. T. R. Should use Greater Caution.

The Coroner's Inquest held to inquire into the cause of the death of Mr. John Donnelly, the G. T. R. watchman who was injured on Tuesday night, Nov. 24th, concluded its sittings last night. The jury composed of Messrs. C. N. Brown, foreman, F. M. Cobb, W. H. Dayman, W. H. Isaac, D. W. Little, G. A. MacPherson, M. L. Henry, S. A. Oke, John Irwin, D. Menzies, Jas. Mongraw, B. R. Poole, Frank Burdette and J. G. Hardill, after considering the evidence submitted, rendered the verdict as follows:

"Your jurymen sworn to enquire into the death of John Donnelly, signalman for the G. T. R. system, find that said John Donnelly came to his death as the result of injuries sustained by coming into contact with a horse and cutter while attending to his duties in so far as equipment supplied him would permit, the driver of said horse and cutter considering himself justified in crossing owing to the usual caution not being displayed, meaning neglect of said railroad to furnish sufficient equipment to operate gates, also recommend rules to be placed in signalman's house governing the operations of the gates and supply a reserve of red lantern lobes at the signal house."

A PRETTY BAZAAR IN THE Y. M. C. A. HALL.

Success Crowns the Efforts of George Street Girls Guild.

No one should miss the opportunity of attending the annual bazaar which the George Street Church Girls' Guild are holding in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, which, to the great credit of that organization, is most prettily decorated for the auspicious event, showing that the young ladies themselves have spent great pains to make the hall as attractive as possible and consequently the sale equally successful. The two side rooms are devoted to another purpose—that of refreshment. In one the most delicious oysters are obtainable, while dainty afternoon teas can be had in the second. The booths in the hall are well stocked with pictures, sweets, very artistic, fancy work, dolls and other almost innumerable things the low prices of which immediately strike the eye. In the centre is the Ladies' Home Journal booth, which is, perhaps the most magnificent of them all. It is intended that this evening all that is left over will be sold by auction, however this from all appearances at a late hour this afternoon will be absolutely unnecessary.

LIQUIFACTION OF THE ATMOSPHERE.

Interesting Lecture and Demonstration in the Opera House

By Professor Patty Under the Auspices of All Saints' Young Men's Guild—A Good Attendance.

Of all the excellent, and they are many, entertainments, which have been given this year, perhaps not one was more interesting than the lecture on, and demonstration with, liquid air, given in the opera house last night under the auspices of the Young Men's Guild of All Saints' church, who are to be congratulated on the large house which they obtained. Many did not go thinking the prices exorbitant; however, those who went were thoroughly recompensed for after all only a trifling expenditure.

Speaking prior to his experiments, Professor Patty said that liquid air was only ordinary air liquified at a temperature of 312 degrees below zero, and a pressure of about 2500 pounds to the square inch. When brought to a state of liquifaction, air is more powerful than steam, and an infinitely higher explosive than gunpowder, dynamite or gun-cotton, the three most explosive substances now known. Its powers, he said, are truly marvellous, for it never destroys anything which is treated with it. Were a piece of the most delicate fabric, such as very fine silk, to be immersed in liquid air, the first thing one would notice was that the silk had been made intensely cold, having been reduced to the same temperature as the liquid air. Next it would be observed that although the silk had been put into a liquid, it was not even damp, still less wet. Liquid air when poured into a vessel of normal temperature, boils violently for a few minutes, then as the vessel is reduced to its own low degree of cold, it subsides gradually. It is a bluish liquid and must be kept away from the atmosphere, for that is to the liquified air at 312 degrees below zero, as molton lead is for us to handle. The attempted liquifaction of air occupied many years and was first suggested to the scientific mind when in 1823 Faraday succeeded after many years of work, in liquifying chlorine and other similar gasses, by bringing them to a reduced temperature at a great pressure. In 1881 chemists took a stride forward by liquifying oxygen and nitrogen. These, as every person knows, are the two chief, some say only, gases, which when united in certain quantities form what is termed "air." In 1895 air was first liquified. For this operation nowadays, the air is passed into what is termed the first separator, whence it is passed into the second separator, where it is reduced to the temperature of water. It is then sent through the third separator, where it is dried and all the impurities are taken out after which it goes back through the second separator to the first compressor where it has a pressure of 84 pounds to the square inch. In the second compressor, to which it next passes, the pressure is increased to 300 lbs to the square inch, making it intensely hot. It next expands in an 18-inch connection in its passage to the third compressor where a pressure of 1,250 lbs to the square inch is applied. This pressure can be more comprehensively realized when it is explained that the ordinary railroad locomotive is driven at a pressure of from 150 to 200 pounds to the square inch. Passing from the third compressor the air goes to the second separator where it is again cleaned and dried. It is then forced through a pipe about one-eighth of an inch in diameter, where the pressure is extremely great. The expansion in passing from the small aperature to the liquifier is so extensive that the air is reduced to 320 below zero, at which temperature it liquifies. The process is still a very expensive one and air cannot be used yet for commercial purposes owing to its cost to manufacture. Later on, said the lecturer, houses will be heated in winter and cooled in summer by a liquid air plant. The navies of the world will discard gun cotton, cordite and similar dangerous explosives and use liquid air. In those days instead of the gun barrels becoming red hot with friction, icicles will be formed on the outside. It will, in time be used for domestic refrigerating purposes. By its aid a car of fruit can be sent from San Francisco to New York in the hottest part of the summer time and be received at that city in as excellent a condition as when it left the Pacific coast. Prof. Patty next made a number of astonishing demonstrations, rendering carnations, rubber, tin, cranberries and other substances as brittle as glass. He next froze alcohol and mercury of which thermometers are made, afterwards explaining that the temperature of liquid air was ascertained by means of an air thermometer. Copper, gold, silver and platinum are four metals which are unaffected by liquid air. He next burned steel and froze cranberries at the same time and in one vessel, following by freezing the flames of an alcohol lamp on the bottom of a kettle and then scraping them off and passing them around for the audience to see. These are only a few of the almost marvellous things done last night. Having concluded his demonstration with liquid air Prof. Patty explained the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy. He had a receiver and transmitter on the stage and by ether waves sent and received several messages in code. His excellent lecture was highly appreciated and were he to come to Peterborough again there is no doubt he would be greeted by very large audiences.

THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

The Postponed Basket-ball Game Played Last Night.

Campbellford has Organized Hockey Club Will Enter Trent Valley League Bobsaygeon in the League.

HOCKEY.

The proposed amendment to the O. H. A. Constitution, by the adoption of which teams will not be allowed to play exhibition games during the progress of the O.H.A. season, is raising considerable opposition on the part of a number of teams. The Sault Ste Marie team is instructing its representative to strongly oppose this amendment, as it is feared that if only the scheduled O.H.A. games are played in the town, until after the close of the season, the town will see very few hockey games.

Sometimes exhibition games with fast Intermediate or Senior teams, serve a very good purpose in swelling the coffers of the teams, and it would seem too bad if the teams were to be deprived of the privilege of taking advantage of the opportunity until the close of the season, which is usually so late that it would be impossible to find ice to play on.

Possibly to teams in older and more thickly populated parts of the province, where the districts have a greater number of teams in them, the amendment would not prejudicially effect.

The Belleville Intelligencer says of the team in that city: "The local hockey team has commenced practice, although if one or two of them don't quit shooting so hard and knocking boards off the end of the rink, they will have trouble with the management. Paderwaki McGuire was thinking seriously of having his hair cut, but his friends prevailed on him to let it alone. The boys have developed several startling combinations, and play so fast that people who try to watch them closely have actually become cross eyed. No doubt of it, Belleville's auburn-haired hustlers will be the whole tip this year."

(Port Hope Guide.)

The St. Georges of Toronto would like to play here on Christmas night, and it is quite probable that the game will be arranged. As yet the line up of the Ontarios for this season is a secret, but one thing is certain—that it will be a local seven.

This has been the request of the Port Hopers for several years, and as the hockey executive has granted it there is no doubt but that the citizens will give it their earnest support.

And this little move has created quite a feeling among the hockey players of the town, and we feel safe in saying that at the first practice there will be seen a large number working hard for position. And that is what we want. No favours will be shown and the best seven shall make the line up.

Further the same seven will make it interesting for most of them. You will remember how the Ontarios won the Midland League championship year after year, tied the famous Nationals of Guelph, entered the O. H. A. and reached the finals. It is not long since and the line up at that time was composed of a local seven.

The question arises, why can they not do it again? They can do it. All that is necessary is earnest, systematic practice. And if the team indulged in that there is not much doubt as to the result.

The success of this year's lacrosse team was due to the system they had. The players were agreeable, took instructions from each other, and the outcome was that the lacrosse lovers witnessed the prettiest and fastest games ever played in Port Hope.

But then, 'tis said that there are one or two of the hockey players who will not stand for instruction. They are of the "know all" class. Well, the best thing for them is to place them with the "has beens," for any person who will not listen to a little sound advice should not play the game.

At the hockey club meeting on Monday night, Mr. H. B. R. Dryden was elected as delegate to the annual meeting of the Trent Valley League, which is to be held in Peterborough on Dec. 12.—Campbellford Despatch.

• • •

The Owen Sound Ladies' Hockey Club has re-organized for the coming season. The rink company are giving the ladies every encouragement, and an effort will be made in the near future to secure matches with Kincardine, Southampton, Toronto, or any other place in Ontario where the fair ones play the game.

TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE MATTERS.

Secretary E. S. Clarry of the Trent Valley League, has received a communication from Mr. Maurice Welsh, secretary of the Bobcaygeon hockey club, stating that his team will be in in the T.V.L. this season again, and that they will be considerably strengthened.

Secretary Lockwood, of the Brighton team, states that the formation of the new district along the front, is proceeding satisfactorily.

Colborne writes that they are in shape to enter the schedule at once.

BASKET-BALL.

Word was received yesterday morning from Toronto closing an arrangement for a game between the West End Y. M. C.A. and a team from the league to be played on Christmas eve here. Our boys should put up a good game after such keen playing in the league.

Campbellford, Dec. 3rd.—The annual meeting of the local club was held on Monday night at the St. Lawrence hall, and, judging from the large number present, old, young and middle-aged, hockey is to boom in Campbellford this year. Mr. T. Naylor made a very efficient chairman. The meeting was one of the most enthusiastic ever held here, many important propositions being discussed. It was decided to enter a team in the Trent Valley League. The officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows: Patron and Patroness, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Naylor; President W. C. Roddy; vice-President, Dr. F. Hershey Sehenk; Manager, Richard Cole; Secretary-treasurer, Chas. Nadon; Managing Committee, J. D. Reesor; R. Humphries, Geo. Haig.

The proposed game in the basket ball league, between the Athletics White and the Alerts, was played last night, and resulted in a win for the Athletics, the score being 37—11. This lead puts the Athletics in the lead for the championship. The teams lined up as follows: —

Athletics White — Robinson, Cavanah, Forwards; H. Dunford, centre; Dillon, Glover, defence.

Alerts — Morgan, Canniff, forwards; G. D. Hall, centre; Howson, Renton, defence.

The standing of the different teams in the league now is as follows:

Athletics White	3	0
Arrows	3	1
Alerts	2	2
Brownies	1	2
Harriers	1	2
Athletics Blue	0	3

ENGLISH PRONUNCIATION.

The Way Some Names Are Maltreated on the Other side.

We usually laugh at the foreigner's efforts to master the pronunciation of our mother tongue, but most of us are not without doubt when we come to pronounce certain proper nouns. Any number of surnames and geographical names receive as many as four different renderings, and it is quite impossible to persuade any one that his or her way is not the correct one. Some surnames are so maltreated as to be quite unrecognizable from the spelling. No wonder the average individual finds an English dictionary indispensable.

Probably the most remarkable quartette are Colquhoun, Marjoribanks, Cholmondeley and Bagehot. They look much less impressive when spelled as pronounced — Cohoon, Marshbanks, Chumley and Bajot. Phonetic spelling deprives many names of their terrors. That awful name Geoghegan would become simply Gagan, Ruthven would be Riven and Cockburn Koburn.

Some people are much annoyed if they are not addressed in their own special way. Mr. St. John likes to be called Sinjin, but as a geographical term he does not mind your saying Saint John. Anstruther is doubtful, but often shortens into Anster. The "Macs" also are very susceptible regarding their surnames. If you want to be friends with McLeod and Maclean call them Makloud and Maklane, and if you have intentions regarding Mr. Strachan's daughter don't call him Strakan if you value your chances, but Strawn. Following these good intentions, you must address Beauclerk as Beauclare and Beauvoir as Beever.

In case you ever move in ambassadorial circles or make friends on the Riviera, don't forget the Baron de Longueville is called Loneveal. M. St. Cyr will answer you if you say Sanseer. Markyarvelee will be as near as you can get to Machiavelli, but possibly you may be able to avoid this distinguished personage.

A couple of "Saints" are rather puzzling. St. Clare should be rendered Sinclair, and if you would win a smile of approval pronounce St. Leger Sellinger or Selleger.

Duchesne has such an awe inspiring appearance it is a pity we must pronounce it Dukarn. Heathcote is shortened into Hatheut, and Dillwyn has quite an Irish flavor when pronounced Dillon.

Desquesnes is not so difficult as it looks Dekane would pass muster, and you may also come across Dekann Regarding Charteris and Sandys, you will win approval in high society if you stick to Charters and Sands, and those individuals known as Jervis, Berkeley and Derby like to hear the first "e" turned into "ah." Why, it is difficult to say.—London Tit-Bits.

PETERBOROUGH'S TRADE.

A copy of the Trade and Navigation Tables of Canada, for the year closing June 30th, 1903, gives some interesting information in illustration of the growth of Peterborough's trade during the last three years.

The customs receipts are usually considered as being a fair index to the volume of trade, and if this be accepted as true, as there seems no reason to doubt, the position of Peterborough is indeed a pleasing one, when compared with other places of equal, or even greater population.

The customs receipts on goods imported during the year ending June 30th, for the entry port of Peterborough, amounted to $213,548.74, an increase over 1902 of $66,195.25, the amount collected that year being $147,353.49. The figures for 1901 were $130,010.28, the increase for the last fiscal year over that of 1901 being $83,538.46, showing an increase of 62.2 per cent.

The value of the goods imported during those years was as follows:

1901—$743,940.00.
1903—$1,605,193.00.

When these figures are compared with the returns from other towns and cities, the position of Peterborough is still more satisfactory.

Belleville, in 1903, paid into the public treasury, $81,138 77 for duty on goods imported. Lindsay paid $27,299.83; Brockville, $148,498.21; Port Hope, $18,750.53, and Woodstock, $77,556.29.

The duty paid at the port of Peterborough amounted to $65,433.29 more than that of Belleville, Lindsay, Port Hope and Cobourg combined, and places it preeminently in the lead as far as volume of trade is concerned, of any town in Midland Ontario.

INTEREST IN CHILDREN'S AID.

It appears that some little misunderstanding has arisen over an article which appeared in the Examiner yesterday, referring to the Children's Aid Society, and an explanation is gladly offered. The article in question was written with the hope that an increased interest in the Society's work might be induced, and this paper is glad to know that there is more interest being displayed than the article referred to would have the reader believe. The officers of the Society state that the small attendance at the sewing meeting held on Monday afternoon, was not an indication of lack of interest, but from the fact that the meeting was announced in only one church.

The officers of the Society wish it known that they have always found those to whom an appeal is made for assistance, ready and willing to do all possible for the work, and the interest taken in the Shelter is evidenced by the generous support given it.

BETWEEN THE SEASONS.

Remaining Relics of Summer Take on New Interest—Brilliant Contrasts of Scarlet and

The searching, penetrating air of winter persistently impresses the universal law of change. It comes supremely indifferent to its welcome, and regardless of the petty human activities it interrupts. The remaining relics of summer take on a new interest. Birds are not careful gleaners, and the berries still clinging to the withered and shrunken stalks of the solomon's seal and wild lily of the valley betray their negligence. Even the freely-displayed berries on the viburnum have been overlooked in many places. The wintergreen and partridge berry reveal their brilliant contrasts of scarlet and green in perfect indifference to the passing seasons. But the most brilliant display of the closing year is made by the bitter-sweet, as it clings and struggles over shrubbery unable to withstand its strangling coils. This vigorous climber sometimes sways loose, in apparent indifference to the sturdy tree that supports it. A slight hold on a branch, in a lofty, spreading top, is all the support it demands, and it swings to the ground like a big, idle rope, light and flexible, inviting various speculations as to how it contrived to climb without taking hold. Sometimes the bitter-sweet will clasp a tree scarcely as large as itself, coiling round and round about it like a serpent, and slowly strangling it to death. The dead and attenuated victim may remain in the great overgrown coils, while the serpentine trunk reaches up among the branches of other trees. Its handsome display of rich, red fruit is now revealed among the naked branches, and, in spite of its tempting appearance, is carefully neglected by the birds. The three-valved, spherical orange pods that cluster irregularly on the smaller branches are now open and turned back, displaying the bright red pulpy covering of the seeds. This fruit has the reputation of being poisonous, but while birds avoid it, other bipeds collect it for decorative purposes. It is very enduring, and dries without losing its form or color. The bright colors now displayed among the naked branches are an attraction to the feathered gleaners, but while they linger and flit about they are not further tempted by appearances.

The bracing air is an inspiration to all animated nature. A brightly-decked jay pulls the last remaining acorn from the highest branch of a red oak, shaking in his strength the clinging bunches of withered leaves. He flies to another tall branch to display his handsome mottling of blue and white, but is too busy even to gratify his vanity. The chirp of a junco comes from the close foliage of the cedars, but he cannot remain in hiding. His active energy is contagious as he struggles with the problem of a food supply. Birds become sociable with the approach of winter. Their more somber colorings seem to eliminate all class distinctions. Juncoes, chick-a-dees, and free sparrows gather together in communal activity. The tree sparrow, distinguished by a little black dot in the centre of his otherwise plain breast, seems to take special delight in hiding and concealing his identity, while his friend the chick-a-dee has nothing to conceal, and completely ignores his most curious visitors. The remaining robins are congregating in flocks and rehearsing for the long migration by lofty, aimless flights. And away up, almost among the grey clouds, a belated flock of wild geese appear like a geometrical form of black dots as they move slowly and steadily southward. That angled outline in the silent distance is moved by a guiding instinct as certain as the calculations of the navigator. Autumn seems incomplete if the wild geese slip away unseen. Their familiar formation is looked for with the old expectancy from year to year. It awakens the all-pervading instinct of migration, the spirit in which self and surroundings are lost as the mind soars away with the wheeling years.

Under a New Title.

The Washington Post credits a white haired matron of that city with a clever musical joke. She was listening, in company with a young man from the state department, to the music of a pianist.

The selections were all new to the young man till the "Wedding March" of Mendelssohn began.

"That's familiar," said he. "I'm not strong on music, but I know I've heard that before. What is it?"

The matron's eyes twinkled with mischief. "That," said she, "is the 'Maiden's Prayer.'"

ONE DEATH BY FIRE

Main Building, Ottawa University, Destroyed by Fire.

LOSS ABOUT HALF A MILLION

Professors, Students and Domestics Leap For Life, and Are Injured, some of Them Probably Fatally—Exit of Students and Others Cut Off By Smoke and Fire—Will Rebuild on Safer Plan.

Ottawa, Dec. 3.—The University of Ottawa, one of the eldest educational institutions in Canada, was completely destroyed by a fire which broke out shortly before 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Several priests, engaged as professors in the institution, and students were severely injured or burned in jumping from the building. The loss is about $500,000, and the insurance $250,000.

The fire started in the Academy hall of the main building and gained headway at a surprising rate. The flames swept down the big corridors and as there were no fire walls between the different sections of the building there was nothing to stay the progress of the fire.

The students had just finished their breakfast, and some of them were in their rooms when the fire broke out. They suddenly found their exit cut off by smoke and fire, and at once commenced jumping from the windows, some of them three or four storeys.

Miss Danis, domestic, was burned to death.

Father Bayon, an elderly priest, jumped from the third storey, breaking a leg and sustaining severe internal injuries.

Father Fulham had a leg and arm broken and was severely burned.

Father McGurty was frightfully burned and may die.

Students named Colin, Down, Nagle and Bouchier were also seriously injured.

Three servants, Mrs. Bastien, Mrs. Dupuis and Miss Tremblay, employed in the college, were hurt in getting out, and firemen were cut by falling glass.

The entire fire brigade of the city was called into service, but their efforts were futile.

The Scientific hall and St. Joseph's Church across the street were saved with difficulty.

The University of Ottawa has grown up with the capital, and contained about 500 students, some 250 of whom stayed in the building.

Practically nothing was saved, and the loss is a very heavy one. Some 80,000 volumes in the library were burned.

The institution is a Catholic one, directed by the Oblat Fathers. A more modern building will probably be erected now.

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK

Food taken into the stomach which from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them they must be starved. It would be just as sensible for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man to starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good strong healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbance in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the sustenance and maintenance of the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means body and brain get all the good, nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry out his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some new fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a year-old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken limb, which is of course not used during the process of repair.

The Solar Plexus.

Is the largest nerve centre in the sympathetic nervous system, is situated just back of the stomach, and supplied nervous energy, the vital force of the human body, to the stomach, heart, lungs, kidneys, liver, etc. By creating more force Dr. Chase's Nerve Food directly aids the solar plexus in supplying the power which runs the machinery of digestion and so cures nervous dyspepsia, headache, dizzy spells and bodily weakness.

Clydesdale Stallion Championship at the Chicago Live Stock Show.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 3.—At the Live Stock show, in Clydesdales, Graham Bros., Claremont, Ont., won the stallion championship with the three-year-old Caironshill, the beautiful black horse winner of the first in his class at the last Toronto show. The horse also captured the special $100 gold medal given by the Clydesdale Society of Great Britain and Ireland.

In the class for mares the championship also goes to Canada, to Robert Davies, Toronto, for Lady Superior, by Cedric, lately bought from her breeder, Col. Holloway of Alexis, Illinois. Mr. Davies wins second for mares with another of Col. Holloway's breeding, and second for yearling fillies with Thorncliffe Duchess. In this clas Daisy McQueen won third place for her owners, Hodginson & Tisdale, Beaverton.

In the Galoway sale the top price was brought by Duke of Gorman, bred by Lieut.-Col. D. McCrae, Guelph. This two-year-old bull sold for $805, just the price which his sire, Lord Wedholme, brought three years ago.

BOOST IN COTTON PRICES.

Advances to Be Made Will Range From Five to Ten Per Cent.

Montreal, Dec. 3.—The Canadian cotton mills will announce in a few days an advance in prices that will prove an eye-opener to the trade. Practically all cottons will be put up on a higher scale, with advances ranging from 5 to 8 and 10 per cent. in several cases.

This announcement was made yesterday morning by a director of one of the leading concerns in Canada, and he said also that the advance was absolutely necessary in view of the sensational rise in raw cotton.

The raw material reached the highest price on record in the New York and New Orleans markets Tuesday. The Canadian mills are said to be practically bare of raw cotton, and will have to go into the market for their supplies at the existing figures.

Biggest Corundum Works.

Toronto, Dec. 3.—Patents have been granted to a combination of capitalists, mostly from Buffalo, for the incorporation of the Corundum Refiners, which has secured concessions amounting to 600 acres of land in Raglan township, Renfrew County, where will be erected the largest corundum reduction plant in the world. The entire works are to be in operation by July, 1905, and the entire output for the succeeding two years has already been sold for use in an aluminum enterprise across the line.

A Month For Dr. Jolley.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

Which Was Insulted?

A private of an infantry battalion stationed at Mhow, India, was recently sentenced to 168 hours' hard labor for calling his lance-corporal a "Bredrick." The private, after being sentenced, asked whether he was being punished for insulting the Secretary of State for War or the lance-corporal. The court remained silent. —London Daily Mail.

LOVER'S STRANGE LAWSUIT.

Rejected, He Sued the Father of His Fickle Sweetheart.

In the backwoods of New Brunswick, where hard work is plentiful and money very scarce, the course of true love is often as rough as a corduroy road, and Cupid is inclined to be businesslike. This has recently been well illustrated at Sheffield, where Charles McBeath adopted a most ungallant course toward Sadie Jordan, because, after he had courted her for ever so long and showered her with gifts, she changed her mind and told him that she "had no notion" of marrying him.

Charles was willing to charge up his time to profit and loss, but the memory of the presents was bitter to him, and so he brought suit against Sadie's father, she being under age, to recover the value of said presents. The case was tried before Squire William Harrison, and was heard by the entire population of Sheffield village.

Charles sued to recover on the ground that Sadie had broken her promise to marry him, on the strength of which alleged promise and for no other consideration the presents had been given.

The mercenary lover put in the following bill for things wasted upon Sadie Jordan, who had fooled him:

The jury gave a verdict for plaintiff, allowing the full bill, with costs, and McBeath was for a few minutes jubilent. As he was about to leave the court-room, however, he was arrested by Provincial Constable Warren Day upon a warrant sworn out by Miss Jordan, charging him with assault, and was remanded to await trial.

The Bluethroat.

There is conclusive evidence to show that in one unbroken nocturnal flight the European bird known as the northern bluethroat passes from central Africa to the German sea, a distance of 1,000 miles, making the journey in nine hours. From its winter home in Africa observations have determined that it starts after sunset, arriving at its far northern summer haunts before dawn on the next morning.

The All Powerful Hat.

"Now, my dear," said the indulgent husband, "I have managed to save up enough money to justify us in building a new home. But, first, I am going to give you a choice between that and the new fall hat you so much desire."

"Well," said the beautiful wife, "you know I can't wear the house on my head."

Woman.

They put the interrogation to Thomas De Quincey. "Why are there more women than men in the world?" and he answered them: "It is in conformity with the arrangement of nature. We always see more of heaven than of earth."

Her Advice.

"Ah," he said as he led her back to her seat after the waltz, "I just love dancing."

"Well," she replied as she attempted to repair a torn flounce, "you're not too old to learn."

Made It Warm.

"I got a cold supper when I went home tonight, and you bet I kicked about it."

"Did that do any good?"

"Well, my wife made it warm for me."

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Receipts of live stock at the City Cattle Market were 94 cars, consisting of 1583 cattle, 1180 sheep, 1178 hogs and 43 calves.

The quality of fat cattle generally was not good, and with the exception of a limited number, was just about as common and as ill-bred and ill-fed a lot as can well be imagined, the bulk of them coming from the east.

Our representative sales given below have only to be read to get an idea of the quality of cattle sold at the city market to-day.

The feeders and stockers, with a few exceptions, were on a par with the fat cattle as regards quality.

Trade was as good as could be desired for the best classes, which were quickly bought up, but the rubbish was slow of sale at as low figures as at any time this season.

The highest price quoted for exporters was $4.50 per cwt., but one lot of Christmas butchers' cattle were sold at $4.75 to the Harris Abattoir Company, and that price was refused for another lot of Christmas butchers'. According to quality, prices in all classes of live stock ranged about the same as on Tuesday, with the exception of the eastern stuff, which was lower in price than usual and slower of sale. Sheep, lambs, calves and hogs were all unchanged.

Milch cows, of which there were about 25 offered, were not in such good demand as they have been for some time past, selling all the way from $30 to $51 each.

TORONTO JUNCTION LIVE STOCK.

Receipts of live stock at the Junction Cattle Market were 23 cars, consisting of 431 cattle, 5 sheep, 6 calves and 1 horse.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, Dec. 3.—About 500 head of cattle, 600 sheep and lambs and 10 calves were offered for sale at the East End Abattoir to-day; most of the cattle to-day were held over from yesterday's market and only a few of them were of medium quality and 3¾c per lb. was the top of the market. There was very little demand for the common stock and many of them will have to be held over for next week's market. Sales were made of these at from 2½c to 3c per lb. The calves to-day were a rather poor lot and sold at from 3c to 5½c per lb. Sheep sold at from 2½c to 3½c, and the lambs at from 4c to 4½c per lb. Fat hogs continue to decline in price, selling at from 4½c to 5c per lb., weighed off the cars.

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM

Author of "Under the Rose."

Conscious that his identity had been divined and relishing perhaps the effect of its discovery, the young patroon gazed languidly at the players until the entrance of Constance as Juliana, when he forgot the pleasing sensations of self thought in contemplation of the actress. He remarked a girlish form of much grace attired in an attractive gown of white satin and silver, as became a bride, with train and low, shimmering bodice, revealing the round arms and shoulders, which arose, ivory-like, in whiteness. Instead of the customary feathers and other ornaments of the period, specified in the text of the play, roses alone softened the effect of her dark hair. Very different she appeared in this picturesque Spanish attire from the lady of the lane, with the coquettish cap of muslin and its "brides," or strings.

The light that burned within shone from her eyes, proud yet gay; it lurked in the corners of her mouth, where gravity followed merriment as silence follows laughter when the brook sweeps from the purling stones to the deeper pools. Her art was unconscious of itself and scene succeeded scene with a natural charm, revealing unexpected resources, from pathos to sorrow, from vanity to humility, from scorn to love awakened. And when the transition did come every pose spoke of the quickening heart; her movements proclaimed the golden fetters; passion shone in her glances, defiant though willing, lofty though humble, joyous though shy.

The play jogged on its blithesome course to its wonted end, and the well pleased audience were preparing to leave when Barnes, in a drab jacket and trunks trimmed with green ribbon bows, came forward like the clown in the circus and addressed the "good people."

"In the golden age," said the father of Juliana, "great men treated actors like servants, and if they offended, their ears were cut off. Are we in brave America returning to the days when they tossed an actor in a blanket or gave a poet a hiding? Shall we stifle an art which is the purest inspiration of Athenian genius? The law prohibits our performing and charging admission, but it does not debar us from taking a collection if"—with a bow in which dignity and humility were admirably mingled—"you deem the laborer worthy of his hire?"

This novel epilogue was received with laughter and applause, but the audience, although good natured, contained its proportion of timid souls who retreat before the passing plate. The rear guard began to show faint signs of demoralisation when Mauville sprang to his feet.

"I am not concerned about the ethics of art," he said lightly, "but the ladies of the company may count me among their devout admirers. I am sure," he added, bowing to the manager with ready grace, "if they were as charming in the old days, after the lords tossed the men they made love to the women."

"There were no actresses in those days, sir," corrected Barnes, resenting the flippancy of his aristocratic auditor.

"No actresses?" retorted the heir. "Then why did people go to the theater? However, without further argument, let me be the first contributor."

"The prodigal!" said the doctor in an aside to the landlord. "He's holding up a piece of gold. It's the first time ever patroon was a spendthrift!"

But Mauville's words, on the whole, furthered the manager's project, and the audience remained in its integrity, while Balthasar, a property helmet in hand, descended from his palace and trod the aisles in his drab trunk hose and purple cloak, a royal mendicant, in whose pot soon jingled the pieces of silver. No one shirked his admission fee, and some even gave in excess. The helmet teemed with riches. Once it had saved broken heads; now it repaired broken fortunes, its properties magical, like the armor of Pallas.

"How did you like the play, Mr. Saint-Prosper?" said Barnes, as he approached that person.

"Much, and as for the players," a gleam of humor stealing over his dark features, "'peerless' was not too strong."

"'Your approbation likes me most, my lord,'" quoted the manager, and passed quickly on with his tin pot in a futile effort to evade the outstretched hand of his whilom helper.

Thanking the audience for their generosity and complimenting them on their intelligence, the self constituted lord of the treasury vanished once more behind the curtain. The orchestra of two struck up a negro melody, the audience rose again, the women lingering to exchange their last innocent gossip about prayer meeting or about the minister who "knocked the theologic dust from the pulpit cushions in the good old orthodox way," when some renegade exclaimed, "Clear the room for a dance!"

Jerusha's shawl straightway fell from her shoulders, Hannah's bonnet was whipped from her head, Nathaniel paused on his way to the stable yard to bring out the team, and a score of willing hands obeyed the injunction amid laughing encouragement from the young women, whose feet already were tapping the floor in anticipation of the Virginia reel, Two Sisters, Hull's Victory or even the waltz "lately imported from the Rhine." A battered Cremona appeared like magic, and

In his shirt of check and taffowed hair
The Soldier sat in his bulrush chair,

while "'Twas Monnie Musk in busy feet and Monnie Musk by heart"—old fashioned "Monnie Musk" with "first couple join right hands and swing," "forward six" and "across the set," an honest dance for country folk that only left regrets when it came to "good night for aye to Monnie Musk," although followed by the singing of "Old Hundredth" or "Come, Ye Sinners, Poor and Needy," on the homeward journey.

In the parlor the younger lads and lasses were playing snap and catch 'em and similar games. The portly Dutch clock gazed down benignly on the scene, its face shining good humoredly like the round visage of some comfortable burgher. "Green grow the rushes, O!" came from many merrymakers. "Kiss her quick and let her go!" was followed by scampering of feet and laughter, which implied a doubt whether the lad had obeyed the next injunction, "But don't you muss her ruffle, O!" Forming a moving ring around a young girl, they sang, "There's a rose in the garden for you, young man." A rose indeed, or a rosebud, rather, with ruffles he was commanded not to "muss," but which nevertheless suffered sadly.

Among these boys and girls the patroon discovered Constance, no longer "to the life a duchess," with gown in keeping with the "pride and pomp of exalted station," but attired in the simple dress of lavender she usually wore, though the roses still adorned her hair. Shunning the entrancing waltz, the inspiring "Monnie Musk" and the cotillon, lively when set to Christy's melodies, she had sought the more juvenile element, and when seen by the land baron was circling around with fluttering skirts. Joyous, merry, there was no hint now in her natural, girlish ways of the capacity that lay within for varied impersonations, from the lightness of coquetry to the thrill of tragedy.

He did not know how it happened as he stood there watching her, but the next moment he was imprisoned by the group and voices were singing:

"There he stands, the booby! Who will have him for his beauty?"

Who? His eye swept the group—the merry, scornful glances fixed upon him; the joyous, half inviting glances; the red lips parted as in kindly invitation—shy lips, willing lips.

Who? His look kindled. He had made his selection, and the next moment his arm was impetuously thrown around the actress' waist.

"Kiss her quick and let her go!"

Amid the mad confusion he strove to obey the command, but a panting voice murmured "No, no!" a pair of dark eyes gazed into his for an instant, defiantly, and the pliant waist slipped from his impassioned grasp; his eager lips, instead of touching that glowing cheek, only grazed a curl that had become loosened, and before he could repeat the attempt she had passed from his arms with laughing lips and eyes.

"Play fair!" shouted the lads. "He should 'kiss her quick and let her go.'"

"Oh, let her go first!" said the others.

"'Kiss her quick,'" reiterated the boys.

"He can't now," answered the girls.

The voices took up the refrain, "Don't you muss the ruffles, O!" and the game went on. The old clock gossiped gleefully, its tongue repeating as plainly as words:

"Let her go!—ho!—ho!—one—two—three!"

Three o'clock! Admonishingly rang out the hour, the jovial face of the clock looking sterner than was its wont. It glowered now like a preacher in his pulpit upon a sinful congregation. Enough of snap and catch 'em, enough of Hull's Victory or the opera reel; let the weary fiddler descend from the bulrush chair, for soon the touch of dawn will be seen in the eastern sky! The merrymaking began to wane and already the sound of wagon wheels rattled over the log road away from the tavern. Yes, they were singing, and as Hepsibeth leaned her head on Josiah's shoulder they uplifted their voices in the good old orthodox hymn, "Come, Ye Sinners," for thus they courted and worshiped in olden times.

"Good night, every one!" said a sweet voice, as Constance passed calmly on with not a ruffle mussed.

"Good night," answered the patroon, a sparkle in his eyes. "I was truly a booby."

"What can you mean?" she laughed.

"There's many a slip 'twixt—lip and lip!" exclaimed Susan.

With heightened color the young girl turned, and as she did so her look rested on the soldier. His glance was cold, almost strange, and, meeting it, she half started and then smiled, slowly mounting the stairs. He looked away, but the patroon never took his eyes from her until she had vanished. Afar, rising and falling on the clear air, sounded the voices of the singers:

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow; Praise him all creatures here below," and finally, softer and softer, until the melody melted into silence:

"Praise him above, ye heavenly h-o-s-t"—

"One good turn deserves another," said Barnes to Saint-Prosper, when Susan and Kate had likewise retired. "Follow me, sir—to the kitchen! No questions, but come!"

CHAPTER V.

A KEEN observer might have noticed that the door of the inn kitchen had been kept swinging to and fro as certain ones in the audience had stolen cautiously but repeatedly in and out of the culinary apartment while the dancing and other festivities were in progress. The itinerant pedagogue was prominent in these mysterious movements, which possibly accounted for his white choker being askew and his disposition to cut a dash not by declining Greek verbs, but by inclining too attentively toward Miss Abigail, a maiden lady with a pronounced aversion for frivolity.

The cause of the schoolmaster's frolicsome deportment was apparent to the soldier when he followed Barnes into the kitchen, where in a secluded corner near the hospitable oven, in the dim light of a tallow dip, stood a steaming punch bowl. A log smoldered in the fireplace, casting on the floor the long shadows of the andirons, while a swinging pot was reflected on the ceiling like a mighty eclipse. Numerous recesses containing pans and plates that gleamed by day were wrapped in vague mystery. Three dark figures around the bowl suggested a scene of incantation, especially when one of them threw some bark from the walnut log on the coals and the flames sprang up as from a pine knot and the eclipse danced among the rafters overhead, while the pot swung to and fro.

As the manager approached the bowl the trio, moved by some vague, impelling impulse, locked arms, walked toward the side door, crossed its threshold in some confusion, owing to a unanimous determination to pass out at one and the same time, and went forth into the tranquil night, leaving Barnes and Saint-Prosper the sole occupants of the kitchen. The manager now helped himself and his companion to the beverage, standing with his back to the tiny forks of flame from the shagbark. His face expanded with good fellowship; joviality shone from his eyes beaming upon the soldier, whom he unconsciously regarded as an auxiliary.

"Here's to our better acquaintance," he said, placing his hand with little ceremony on the other's shoulder. "The billposter!" Raising his cup. "You gathered them in"—

"And you certainly gathered in the contents of their pockets."

"A fair robbery," laughed Barnes, "as Dick Turpin said when he robbed the minister who robbed the king who robbed the people. A happy thought that, turning the helmet into a collection box. It tided us over, it tided us over."

Not Just What She Meant.

A little community of colored people in Alabama had raised the money to build a new church, and the dedication was to take place the next day. "Where are you going tomorrow?" the schoolteacher asked one young girl. Smiling radiantly, she answered, "I'se going to the degradation of our church!"

His Thought.

"I'm going to tell him what I think of him," said the angry man. "What do you think of it?"

"I think," was the reply, "that he must be a smaller man than you are or else you think pretty well of him."

"I was well; I would be better; here I lie," is the epitaph on a tombstone in England.

"I sleep well enough at night,
And the blamedest appetite
Ever mortal man possessed."

Riley's farmer is the very picture of a man advanced in years, yet in the enjoyment of perfect health. A good appetite, good digestion and sound sleep, are the chief factors in a vigorous old age. Life is sustained by food, when it is properly digested and assimilated. When digestion fails, there is a loss of nutrition which soon shows itself in physical weakness, nervousness, sleeplessness, etc.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It strengthens the body in the only way possible,—by enabling the assimilation of the nutrition extracted from food.

"I used ten bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and several vials of his Pleasant Pellets a year ago this spring, and have had no trouble with indigestion since," writes Mr W. T. Thompson, of Townsend, Broadwater Co., Montana. "Words fail to tell how thankful I am for the relief as I had suffered so much and it seemed that the doctors could do me no good. I got down in weight to 125 pounds, and was not able to work at all. Now I weigh nearly 160 and can do a day's work on the farm. I have recommended your medicine to several, and shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Pierce and his medicines."

Familiar to Canadians.

In the latest list of accessions to the Balfour Government will be found a name that is familiar to many Canadians. It is that of Mr. William Bromley-Davenport, who has been appointed Financial Secretary to the War Office. Mr. Bromley-Davenport is not known in Canada, but his next eldest brother, Mr. A. H. Bromley-Davenport, was a resident of Toronto for some years in the early nineties. His residence was on St. Patrick street, and he was a prominent member of the Toronto Cricket Club, on whose best elevens he was able to qualify for a place. Mr. Davenport had learned his cricket at Eton, where all the boys of the family are sent for their schooling, and his effective, though hardly finished style of batting, helped the Toronto Cricket Club to many victories. As an amateur actor, Mr. Bromley-Davenport was very clever. Doubtless many Torontonians will remember the capital performance of "A Scrap of Paper," which was given by the club in the Grand Opera House, some fourteen years ago. Mr. Davenport, Mr. Grant Stewart, Mr. Townsend and others combined to give an excellent presentation of the bright little comedy. Mr. Davenport's interest in theatricals continued, and it was not long before he secured a minor part with Mr. Willard. His conscientious study soon brought him promotion. After some years with Willard he joined Mrs. Langtry's company, appearing here with her two or three years ago. Mr. Davenport is now in England, where he is making rapid strides in his profession.—Toronto Globe.

The Rhodum Sidus.

An amusing story told by Hood describes how a country nurseryman made a large sum out of sales of a simple little flower which he sold under the name of the Rhodum sidus. This charming name proved quite an attraction to the ladies, and the flower became the rage of the season. It was one of those freaks of fashion for which there is no accounting. At length a botanist who found that the plant was not an uncommon weed requested to know where the nurseryman got the name from. He elicited the following reply: "I found this flower in the road beside us, so christened it the Rhodum sidus."

PETERBOROUGH FIFTH WARD'S EARLY HISTORY.

"Scotch Village" Settled in the Twenties by a Hardy Race.

STIRRING TIMES IN THE EARLY DAYS

Railway Terminus in 1854—Incorporation as Village of Ashburnham in 1859—Some of the Men who Were Prominent in Making History.

Otonabee — Scotch Village — Peterborough East—Ashburnham—Fifth Ward of Peterborough. This, in a word, is the story of the evolution of the latest acquisition to Peterborough, and with which there is an interesting history connected. Now that the village is about to end its individual existence and become a part of the greater Peterborough it may not prove inappropriate to review briefly some of the most important events in the life of the municipality which has had a long and honourable existence.

In the twenties, and before Peterborough was known as such, there was a settlement on the east side of the Otonabee River, then known as "Scotch Village," the name being applied, as may be imagined, because of the fact that the majority of the residents consisted of those of Scotch birth. It was thought at that time that the centre of population would be located on that side of the river, and that the settlement on the Peterborough side would not amount to much either in size or importance.

RAILWAY TO THE SCOTCH VILLAGE

The first bridge over the Otonabee River at this point was constructed in 1830 and was on the site of the present Hunter street bridge. The village, of course, at that stage, was but small, but it developed gradually into a place of considerable importance, so much so in fact that a railway was soon built connecting it with Cobourg. Although this railway terminated in Scotch Village, it was called the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway, the original intention being to construct a bridge across the river and enter the village of Peterborough. This railway was made necessary by the expanding lumber industry of which there were a number of mills situated along the river at and above this point. The practice in use before the construction of the railway was to float the lumber down to Gore's Landing where it was loaded on waggons, hauled to Cobourg and from there shipped in schooners to Rochester and other American Lake Ontario ports. The railway was completed in the autumn of 1854 and the occasion of the entry of the first train into the village was a very important one to the inhabitants. At that time there were no sidewalks in the village and in order that it might not appear too rural Mr. Peter Glover, who had come to the village the year before, circulated a subscription among the residents and secured sufficient money to construct a three-foot plank walk from the bridge to the station at the point where the G. T. R. tracks and Elizabeth street now intersect. Thus two signs of urban life made their appearance at the same time, a railway and a sidewalk. The first however, was not long to remain with the now awakening village. After three years of a struggling existence it was abandoned, not, however, before the two villages of Scotch Village and Peterborough had ben honoured by a visit from the Prince of Wales, now His Majesty King Edward VII, who made the journey from Cobourg over the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway, which ran across the widest part of Rice Lake on Piles. The late Donald Sutherland was the station master of the railway. Among the business men in the Scotch Village at that time were Mr. R. D. Rogers, who kept a store on the site of which Mr. Wm. Collins' store is now situated; Frank Armstrong, whose place of business was where Mr. J. C. Sullivan's store now is; a Mr. McDonald, tailor, and Mr. Moore, shoemaker; Mr. A. B. Downer conducted a hotel where Lipsett's hotel now stands, Samuel Detcher also had a hotel on the present market corner, and shortly afterwards John Manioce built a hotel across the street from Downer's building. The Otonabee Mills, now McAllister's Mills, were also running, they having been built in 1847 by Hon. Z. Burnham. They were operated until 1855 by Mr. R. D. Rogers, but in the latter year Mr. Lewis Glover rented them and for a number of years ran them with success. During this period he also built a store and conducted a growing business. Perhaps however, was Morey's foundry situated just east of the Hunter street bridge. This foundry was owned and operated for many years by Mr. Marcello Morey and his son, of whom he had several. It is only recently that the building in which this business was conducted was torn down. Quite an extensive lumber business was carried on too. The Dickson Company had a large steam mill on Little Lake near the outlet of the present Trent Valley Canal. A smaller mills. In 1856 a steam saw mill was built on the shore of the Little Lake by Ludgate & McDonald. It was operated until 1868 when it was burned. Mr. J. Clarke also owned a tannery on the opposite side of the road from the foundry and just south of the bridge. Thus it will be seen that the village was taking on considerable importance.

THE LATE REV. MARK BURNHAM.

THE OLDEST INDUSTRIAL ESTABLISHMENT

THE INCORPORATION.

In 1859 the residents of the village thought it time that some form of individual government should be established, consequently they sought, and obtained, incorporation, changing the name to "Ashburnham," in honour of the Burnham family, to whom practically all the land upon which the village was built, belonged originally. Hon. Zac. Burnham, of Cobourg, was the first owner, and upon his death it fell to Rev. Mark Burnham, rector of St. John's church, who in 1858 built "Ingle Brow," and lived in it until his death. Mr. C. B. McAllister has since purchased the property, rebuilt the house and now occupies it.

The first reeve of Ashburnham was R. D. Rogers, and the other members of the council were A. B. Downer, Donald Sutherland and Henry Bennett. In the years 1860 and '62 Mr. F. Armstrong occupied the administrative office, and Mr. R. D. Rogers was again reeve for the years of 1861-63-64-65. In 1866 Mr. A. C. Dunlop held the office.

A MILITARY ORGANIZATION.

In 1861 the Ashburnham Light Infantry Company was formed, with R. D. Rogers as captain, H. S. Strickland as lieutenant, J. Z. Rogers, ensign, and George (now Dr.) Burnham, colour sergeant. This company flourished for a number of years.

In 1865 Mr. H. Calcutt built a flax mill at the point, on the site of the present Riverside Park, but it was operated only for a comparatively short time, the building afterwards being turned into a skating rink. The present brewery was built by Mr. Calcutt in 1869, after one which he had purchased from Mr. A. H. Peck, on the lake shore, had been burned down.

ASHBURNHAM'S POSTMASTER.

The first and only postmaster that Ashburnham has ever had was Mr. R. D. Rogers, who kept the post office in connection with his store. It was in his employ that the present postmaster of Peterborough was, and where he probably learned the rudiments of the business. Mr. Rogers resigned from the office to contest the riding for a seat as a member of the House of Commons, in which, however, he was not successful. No postmaster was appointed to fill his place, and since that time the one post office has served both municipalities.

EDUCATIONAL AND RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS.

The Bible Christian church was the first to be established in Ashburnham. The building is that now known as the Mark street Methodist church, with which denomination the Bible Christians afterwards united.

In 1876 St. Luke's parish was formed, chiefly through the efforts of Rev. Mark Burnham, who gave very material assistance to its establishment. The first incumbent was the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw.

The school, too, was in a sense, a monument to Rev. Mark Burnham, as he gave to the village the land upon which the building was constructed. In this connection a document written in 1860 may be of some little interest. It is a resolution passed by the village council thanking Mr. Burnham for effecting the transfer of certain lots. The resolution is as follows:

Ashburnham, 6th July, 1860.

Reverend Sir,—

I am directed by this council to transmit you the following resolution as a mark of their appreciation of the gift and transfer of market lots to this municipality, therefore it is.

Resolved,—That this council is of opinion that the Reverend Mark Burnham has conferred a special benefit, to this municipality by transfer of lots No. 139 and 140 west of Mark street, in lieu of the original allowance east of said street, and Moved — by Donald Sutherland, seconded by Samuel Dickson, that the Reverend Mark Burnham and his lady, receive the thanks of this council in consideration of the generous manner that they have bestowed the aforesaid valuable donation to this municipality.

Carried unanimously.

I am, Reverend Sir,

Most respectfully your Obedient Servant,

THOMAS McDOUGALL,

Clerk.

To the Reverend M. Burnham,

Ashburnham.

The above resolution is beautifully written, and the ink after a lapse of 42 years, remains a brilliant black. The paper is in a perfect state of preservation.

The first superintendent of public schools in Ashburnham, was Rev. J. S. Douglas, who filled the office in '65 and '66, being succeeded by Rev. J. W. R. Beck. In 1869, Mr. James Stratton, father of the Provincial Secretary, with George Burnham, were members of the School Board, Mr. Daniel McDonald, a well-known character being chairman.

Of the earlier residences built in Ashburnham, "St. Leonard's," built by Rev. J. W. R. Beck, Rector of St. John's church, was one of the most pretentious. It was built on the present site of St. Joseph's Hospital. After Mr. Beck disposed of it, it was occupied by Mr. A. H. Campbell of Toronto, and later by Dr. H. C. Barritt, also of Toronto. It was destroyed by fire and never rebuilt.

SOME OF THE OLDER RESIDENTS.

The honour of having been a resident of the village for the longest period belongs as far as can be learned, to Mr. A. H. Peck, the present treasurer of the village, who came there in 1839 and has lived there ever since with the exception of a short time during which Mr. Peck was in England. There are eight others now alive who lived there previous to the entry of the railway in 1854. They are Mrs. Swanson, Mrs. Doram, Mr. and Mrs. John Craig, Mr. J. Z. Rogers, Mrs. Kno, Mrs. John Burnham and Mr. P. Glover. There may be others, but as far as the Examiner has been able to learn, these are all who were residents of the village prior to 1853. Of the men who, in their lifetime, were prominently associated with the public life of the municipality, but who have passed away the names of Mr. John Ludgate, who built the house now occupied by Mr. W. Irwin, Donald Sutherland, the station master of the Peterborough and Cobourg Railway, and William Mills, Justice of the Peace, might be mentioned. Among those who came to the village in 1839, 40 and 41 and who were afterwards prominently associated with the public life of the village were: M. Morey, Wallis Bros., H. Dunsford, F. Ferguson, J. J. Wrighton, J. Craigie, Joseph Smith, S. Wither, J. Gow, Jas. Armour, Mrs. Trail, J. Robinson, Jas. Sargent, Wm. Payne, Col. Brown, Major Sharpe, G. Brown, Wm. Taylor, McDonald, A. B. Downer, two Brown brothers and two sisters, Walter Sheridan, McFarlane.

THE FIFTH WARD AS IT IS TO-DAY.

Although the growth of the village has not been as rapid as that of Peterborough, the last few years has seen a considerable improvement and the new fifth ward now compares very favourably with any of the older wards of the town. During the last year there have been a number of new residences erected, among them being a brick house erected by Mrs. Newell, on Stewart street, a terrace by Mr. J. Rutcher, brick residence by D. Conroy and another by Barney Kelly on Lake street Mr. Carlyle has just completed the erection of a terrace on Driscoll terrace. Mr. McGregor, a residence on the old cricket grounds, and Mr. McIntyre, Mr. Hall, Mr. Devlin, Mr. Kerr and Mrs. Sedgewick, have each built brick residences on Brown street, so that it will be seen that building operations have been carried on as extensively in proportion to the population in the fifth ward as it has in any of the other parts of the town. In addition to the residences mentioned above the Dickson Co has erected a large saw mill in the village on the shore of Little Lake and the Calcutt Brewing and Malting Company, during the last summer made an extension to its works, all of which evidences a growing volume of trade.

A BUSINESS CENSUS.

A canvass of the business portion gives the information that there are eleven grocery stores, the proprietors of which are: Messrs. Gross; Kylie, Thos. Manioce, John Kerr; J. Weir; J. C. Sullivan; Cain; J. Malan; Hennessy; Wm. Collins, and Mrs. Swanson. Messrs. Geo. Wheeler and Cain conduct butcher shops. Mr. F. Hamilton is alone in the boot and shoe business, while Mr. S. Clancy and J. Craig represent the blacksmiths. Two hotels are conducted by Mr. Geo. Lipsett and Mr. P. Hogan. Mr. Geo. Stevens is the owner of an extensive business in a number of different lines. Messrs. Scott and Hogg conduct a good fuel business. McAllister's Mills are an important adjunct to the life of the community, while a growing business is the Ultimator works, as is also the mattress manufactory conducted by Councillor Faint.

ONE OF THE EARLY INDUSTRIES.

The brewery and saw mill about complete the list of business and industrial establishments.

In Ashburnham the town is gaining a valuable addition, the value of which will doubtless become more apparent as time proceeds, and on the other hand, it is a distinct advantage to the smaller municipality to become part of Peterborough and thus share more fully in the prosperity with which this town is meeting.

The evolution of the new fifth ward has been a most happy one and it has at last found its proper place as a part of "Greater Peterborough."

Studios That Are Workrooms.

All of the artists' studios in New York have not the magnificent interiors that romance suggests. On the contrary, a great many of the most effective pictures are turned out from rooms that are absolutely destitute of furniture, except for the working tools of the artist himself. Costly draperies, beautiful objects of art, often take the attention of the painter from his work, and there are quite a number of the most successful artists in the city whose studios are bare and comfortless as far as decorations are concerned. They are regarded by the painter as workrooms pure and simple, and aestheticism is confined to the imagination of the painter himself.

LORD STRATHCONA'S STIRRING ADDRESS.

Declares That Canada is True to the Motherland.

Canada's Love for Motherland is Spontaneous, Says Lord Aberdeen—Farmers and the Tariff—Mr. Farrer's Ominous Symptoms Should Speed Britain to Offer Canada a Preference While There is Time.

London, Dec. 5.—(C.A.P.)—Lord Strathcona, speaking at the banquet of the Edinburgh Merchant Company last night, said that 33 years ago Canada was the first nation born within the Empire, a nation true as steel to the Motherland. In ten years the population of Canada would be doubled. They would be able to send England every pound of breadstuff needed. So conscious of this were the Americans, that during the last three years more than one hundred thousand had gone to the Northwest. Canadians had no misgivings in their loyalty. McGill and Toronto Universities were as good as England's. Britain must not show indifference to the colonies. Canada would give a preference without any return to show its gratitude.

Canada's Splendid Attachment.

Lord Aberdeen, speaking before the Edinburgh United Liberal Free Trade Committee, declared the splendid attachment of Canada was spontaneous, adding: "Don't try to galvanize into artificial growth a plant growing naturally itself."

Farmers and the Tariff.

Three hundred and sixty-two farmers interested in over 150,000 acres of Herts and Essex forwarded a petition to Mr. Chamberlain yesterday. While approving of the changes in the fiscal policy, they did not consider the proposed duties on foreign corn, meat and dairy products sufficient to stimulate a greater production here. From the colonies they want flour of all classes and manufactured articles, and a heavy duty placed on hay and straw.

Stop Steel Imports.

The Executive Council of the Iron and Steel Association of South Wales and Monmouthshire passed a resolution favoring Chamberlain's policy re steel imports, and wants the Government to immediately stop such imports.

Not Opposed to Scheme.

The Morning Post, quoting President Drummond's speech, says it is clear Canadian manufacturers are by no means opposed to Chamberlain's speech.

Dumping Yankee Steel.

American steel is being dumped on the Glasgow market at one pound a ton under Scotch makers' prices.

Annexationist Unmasked.

The Financial News referring to Edward Farrer's article under the heading, "Annexationist Unmasked," says the writer is an ominous symptom and the article should speed England's determination to offer Canada a preference while there is time.

Iron From Canada.

MacDonald, speaking under the auspices of the Independent Labor Party at Birmingham yesterday, asked if it was likely that England would give a preference to Canada, which at the present time is dumping on our shores iron products made cheap by the fact that the Canadian Government paid bounties on iron produced in Canada by Canadians. He said that Chamberlain, who is notable for picking out certain products, should say what each colony can supply this country.

ROYAL CITY LIVE STOCK SHOW.

Will Be Better Than Ever This Year—Greater Number of Exhibits.

Guelph, Dec. 5.—Bigger and brighter and better in every direction, the Ontario Provincial Winter Fair will open here Monday to continue until Friday. Many exhibits are already in place. The town is rapidly filling up with visitors, and arrangements are complete for a week of unusual energy among the stock fanciers of Ontario.

The cattle exhibits pass the 2,000 mark, while there are 576 exhibits of sheep, 1,137 swine and a proportionate increase in the poultry display. This refers to the number of exhibits, not the number of separate animals, which are also largely in excess of a year ago. Many of these include the prize winners of the International Live Stock Exposition at Chicago. The championship Clydesdale stallion and mare will be on exhibition here.

Live Stock Grievances Removed.

Toronto, Dec. 5.—G. C. Creelman, superintendent of Farmers' Institute, and A. P. Westervelt, secretary of Live Stock Associations, returned yesterday from a visit to the International Live Stock Exhibition at Chicago. While in Chicago, they had an interview with officials of the St. Louis Exhibition, who informed them that the grievances complained of by Canadian live stock men would be adjusted to the satisfaction of every one, with the exception of the law which prevents a Canadian exhibitor from selling exhibits without bringing them back to Canada, to ship them to purchasers. This would have to be changed by Act of Congress.

TO THE PUBLIC.

The report that is being so assiduously circulated around town by interested parties that the Otonabee Power Co. and the Peterborough Light & Power Co. have amalgamated and are all one, is absolutely false and untrue in every particular.

The Otonabee Power Co. have never at any time in their history, in any way, shape or form, offered to sell out or amalgamate with any company, least of all the Peterborough Light & Power Co., being perfectly satisfied that we would receive a loyal support from every citizen having the present as well as the future welfare of Peterborough at heart. The Otonabee Power Co. has come to stay, and therefore ask the people to stay with the company that broke the monopoly, and we will stay with you.

PROGRESS ON MUSIC FOR "VERDI" NIGHT.

57th Band Preparing Programme to be Presented on Dec. 18th.

If there is one organization in town which deserves the support of citizens, it is the 57th Regiment Band. It must have been a source of extreme pride to all lovers of good music to see the progress which this band has been making under the leadership of Mr. Gliddon, and the town now can boast of the best regimental band outside of the larger cities. This state of proficiency has not been reached without long and consistent practice, and a visit to the band room on practice nights is sufficient to amply demonstrate the fact that the members of the band put their hearts into their work, the result being, as has already been said, the best band in Canada, outside the larger cities, and one of the best without exception. This fact is not appreciated by the citizens at large as fully as it should be.

Just now the band is working on the music to be presented at the "Verdi" convert, which will be given on December 18th. The Examiner, on the invitation of Mr. Gliddon, heard the rendition of two numbers by this great Italian composer at the practice last night, and, if the other numbers on the programme are equally meritorious with those two, the music-loving public may look for a rare treat.

The first taken up was "The Reminiscences of Verdi," which the players are mastering with pleasing alacrity. The second number was the prelude to Verdi's great "Traviata." Starting out with a beautiful passage by the wind reed instruments, the whole strength of the combined instruments is gradually brought out ending in a soul-stirring passage by the whole band. The spirit of the composer has been caught by the musicians, and the rendition of the "Traviata" alone will repay one for going to considerable trouble to hear it.

Mr. Gliddon is to be congratulated on his enterprise in attempting to place before a Peterborough audience the works of the composer Verdi and it is to be hoped that the public will appreciate the efforts of the band and its leader.

FAIRNESS AND DECENCY IN POLILICS.

The Peterborough Times this morning says:

"To the Times it is plain to be seen that our contemporary, the Review, for some time has exhibited such an unseemly and undignified spell of violent language in attacks upon Mr. Stratton that it cannot treat with ordinary journalistic decency any political subject.

For our own part we have in the past, opposed Mr. Stratton, especially before he became a Minister, but we never have felt justified nor found it good policy, to employ any approach to the violent and abusive language our contemporary habitually uses. Since he became a member of the Government, the Times has given Mr. Stratton an independent support; and while we are not bound to him in any way, we like to see fair play in all things, and especially to one of ourselves, who has grown up amongst us, and has lived here all his life; and especially in view of what he has done in his representative and official capacity to advance the interests of Peterborough town and county.

Mr. Stratton, as said, has lived here all his life, and what he has done is to be seen of all men All his constituents have had an opportunity to watch his course, and the result of that scrutiny has given him a hold, as his services have given him a claim, upon the good opinion of the people, with the result that he has been returned as representative of the riding by continually increasing majorities. Mr. Stratton has been before the public for a quarter of a century, and has become a strong factor in the public life of the Province. We have little hesitation in expressing the conviction that the Premier and he saved the Ross Government from defeat at the last general elections. In spite, if not greatly in consequence, of the abuse he has received, and is receiving, Mr. Stratton is as strong a man as there is in Provincial politics to-day.

If the editor of the Review thinks he is weakening Mr. Stratton by his persistent and violent personal abuse, he is making a great tactical mistake and shaping a boomerang for the the party he is serving, not wisely but too well; for we know many Conservatives who opposed Mr. Stratton at the last election, who at another election will be decidely lukewarm in their opposition, or be ranked with his supporters.

For the sake of the credit of the journalistic guild, we do not like to see a contemporary, especially a local one, take a course that brings discredit upon decently conducted newspaper criticism. The organ of a party which has been called the "party of gentlemen," should, to be consistent, adopt a style of criticism superior to that of the now happily effete, backwoods country newspaper, and employ language more dignified than that of the gutter. It always pays in the end to be fair and decent.

If the Review desires to know the cost of campaigning and the mode of conducting their elections, it could perhaps get some valuable information from the Conservative party in West Peterborough."

AN INDEPENDENT OPINION.

The following is from the Ottawa Journal, an independent journal which has earned so far the possession of the distinction of being an independent newspaper which is independent:

"Mr. Whitney and the Conservative Opposition have given the people no reason to believe that Whitney rule will be any better than Ross rule. No reason of policy. No reason of morality. In what respect of policy has Mr. Whitney placed himself differently before the people? There have been voluminous platitudes about "improving" this or that and "developing" something else, and "safeguarding" the public chest, and all that sort of thing. But in what matter of public policy and practice has Mr. Whitney stood for anything vitally different to the Government orators?

LUNATICS IN LONDON.

London alone is responsible for the manufacture of 70 lunatics a week, and no limit can be placed to the increase to this number, stated the president of the psychological medicine section of the British Medical congress in an address deploring the influence of the large town on the mental condition of its inhabitants. The one saving circumstance in the situation is the natural law which decrees that town bred folks become sterile after three or four generations of town life.

So complicated is the environment of those who live in the great town, so many and so varied are the calls on their self control and on their effort making powers, that their mental machinery is apt to become complex, its parts require nicer adjustment, and construction, and the whole machine is more apt to get out of gear and to suffer derangement than in the more primitive and less emotional life of over half a century ago. It is not over work that is the determining cause of the disturbance of mental equilibrium, but care, worry and anxiety.

To the rich insanity is brought by indulgence in sensuous luxuries. To the poor, who are at the mercy of every economic crisis, whose financial circumstances spell indifferent nutrition, overcrowding, and unnormal surroundings, the conditions of modern life bring depression and despair. The natural result is that they attempt to drown their sorrows in the flowing bowl. Alcohol is the cause of one fifth of the insanity in males and of more than a half of that in the weaker sex.

What is then, the best remedy for the baneful and unnatural tension of the nervous system incurred as the inevitable price of the advantages of living in towns? How is the mind of man to be adjusted to his progressively complicated environment? The medical fraternity has yet to solve these problems.

BLAIRTON.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The congregation of the C. M. church here are putting forth great efforts to make their coming annual Christmas tree one of the best they have held for 35 years. It will be a Fowl Supper, and it will be that in substance as well as in name, as the prerequisites in bird kind are volunteered by great numbers.

We are sorry to say that Miss Kyle, who has so successfully managed our public school during the past year, and who, by the marked geniality of her demeanour, has endeared herself to all, has resigned her position here to teach elsewhere at a much advanced salary.

At our recent cheese meeting it was shown from the books that Mr. Robert Bonar, lot 6, concession 2, Township of Belmont, with five cows only and for six months only, cleared $40.52 per cow.

The Catholic bazaar at Marmora, in aid of the new church there, was a great event. There were 32 valuable prizes which were drawn to names far away, some in New York, some on the Pacific Coast, and in Western Canada. A. W. Carscallen, M.P., and J. W. Pearse, M.P.P. were given full control of the drawing of prizes, etc.

EFFICIENCY IN PUBLIC SERVICE

The railway mail clerks of Canada have been recently through the annual examination required by the post office department, and the results generally are said to be satisfactory, says the Kingston Whig. The post office department is one of the largest departments of the public service, and the railway branch, which is really its backbone is directed as efficiently and as economically as the business of any individual or syndicate.

The Hon. Mr. Mulock created a new position called controller of Royal mail service, and to this position he called B. M. Armstrong, formerly of the Toronto post office, and gave him authority to make the best of his commission. The men in the mail service are carefully selected, and their permanent engagement depends upon concrete evidence procured from systematic examinations. A standard of fifty per cent. on duties is expected the first year. After that ninety per cent is required for increases of salary, and an annual examination, taking in every clerk, gives the record. The duties and examinations are severe physical and mental tests, but the men recognize the importance of them and put in their spare time in keeping up the inspiration which the circumstances suggest. The postmaster-general expects a great deal from the men, but he does his part and had parliament adopt a new schedule of salaries, giving a liberal increase to those who show that they are deserving of it, and for this consideration he was presented with a letter of appreciation signed by all the clerks in the service.

The examinations are said to have shown almost incredible results. The indefinite information acquired by persistent effort is astonishing. For instance, there are 3,500 post offices in Ontario. A mail clerk will know where every one of them is; in fact he will sort cards, with a name upon each, no two alike, at the rate of thirty in a minute, and give definite and precise information in regard to each place will keep up the exercise for an hour and make less than half a dozen errors. He will also locate every train carrying mails of any description at any minute in the day in the province. He can route letters so that they will go miles out of the way and beat sometimes by hours the best time by nearest travelled routes. If a certain train be late and miss the usual connection he will promptly get the next best service for his mails though it may mean a rearrangement of the work he has already put up. Books of reference, including schedules of information, are furnished, but they are rarely used, as the clerk has no time to consult them and so well equipped is he mentally that he can work on for weeks without opening them.

The advantage to the people of having experts in charge of the mail service is very apparent. It means that every piece of mail matter makes the quickest transit possible. It means that while the work has increased perhaps 100 per cent., there has been no corresponding increase in the staff, each one doing the former work of two or three and doing it better. The government might, with benefit to the people, secure the same efficiency in every other branch of the public service.

HEALTH FOR BABY IN WINTER.

Winter is coming on, when baby will of necessity be confined to the house a great deal. Unless his constitution is rugged the close confinement will soon tell on his health. An occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets will act as a safeguard during the winter months. If begun before the winter arrives mothers can be reasonably certain that their little ones will retain good health during the months of indoor confinement. Baby's Own Tablets cure indigestion, sweeten the stomach, sweeten the stomach, break up colds, prevent croup, regulate the bowels and keep baby healthy and happy. Concerning the Tablets Mrs. G. G. Sawyer, Clarenceville, Que., says, "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my little girl and find that they are the very best medicine that I can give her."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold at 25 cents a box by all medicine dealers, or may be had direct by writing The Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Remember they are guaranteed to contain no poisonous drugs —they cannot possibly do harm, and always do good.

A NEW GOSPEL OF CHARITY.

The sensation which Mrs. Matthew Gold of Whitby, created in that town by permitting herself to be plunged into financial ruin through what her neighbours now believe must be a sort of philanthropic mania, has reached far beyond the confines of the little town by the lake. Mrs. Gold, who had a comfortable fortune in her own right a few years ago, has been secretly giving money to poor people and churches until she has not only exhausted her own resources, but distributed about $17,000 which she borrowed from her friends.

The history of this strange case has reached Chicago and is made the subject of editorial remark by the Chicago Record-Herald, which comments as follows:

While nobody is likely to find serious fault with Mrs. Gold for giving money to the poor and helping the churches by her generous contributions to spread religion, there are people who will insist that she had no right to go into the benefacting business on borrowed capital. Men and women who have money to give to charity generally want to distribute it themselves, or at least they desire, as a rule, to know where it is going.

But perhaps Mrs. Gold took the broad ground that in borrowing money and giving it away, so that the lenders could never hope to get it back, she was not overstepping the bounds of reason or righteousness any farther than they do who distribute millions which have been won from the masses through business practices that might be called sharp rather than shrewd. However that may be and while it is freely admitted that in addition to covering a multitude of sins charity is beautiful. Mrs. Gold's proceeding cannot be recommended for general emulation. If her borrowings had been made from such people as Mrs. H. Green and Mr. Russell Sage, for instance she might be encouraged to go on with the good work, but Mrs. Green and Mr. Sage don't lend money without knowing how or when they are going to get it back, hence the flaw in the Ontario lady's system.

"FOR ALL" CATARRHAL COMPLAINTS

Pe-ru-na is Most Excellent," Writes Congressman John L. Sheppard.

CONGRESSMAN JOHN L. SHEPPARD.

Congressman John L. Sheppard, Member of Congress from Texas, writes:

Gentlemen:—"I have used Peruna in my family and find it a most excellent remedy for all catarrhal complaints."—Congressman John L. Sheppard.

THERE are two things that the whole medical profession agree about concerning catarrh. The first is that catarrh is the most prevalent and omnipresent disease to which the people in the United States are subject. All classes of people have it. Those who stay in doors much and those who go outdoors much. Working classes have it and sedentary classes have it.

The doctor finds catarrh to be his constant and ever-present foe. It complicates nearly every disease he is called upon to treat.

The second thing about catarrh on which all doctors agree, is that it is difficult to cure it. Local remedies may give relief but they fail to cure permanently. Sprays or snuffs amount to little or nothing except to give temporary relief.

Catarrh is frequently located in internal organs which cannot be reached by any sort of local treatment. All this is known by every physician.

To devise some systemic internal remedy which would reach catarrh at its source, to eradicate it permanently from the system—this has been the desire of the medical profession for a long time. Forty years ago Dr. Hartman confronted this problem. He believed then that he had solved it. He still believes he has solved it. He cures thousands of people annually. During all these years Peruna has been the remedy upon which he has relied.

It was at first a private prescription, afterwards manufactured expressly for him in large quantities. This remedy, Peruna, is now to be found in every drug store and nearly every home in the land. It is the only reliable internal remedy ever devised to cure any case of catarrh, however long the case may have been standing.

A Case of Nasal Catarrh of Five Years' Standing Cured by Pe-ru-na.

Hon. Rudolph M. Patterson, a well-known lawyer, of Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I have been a sufferer from nasal catarrh for the past five years and at the earnest solicitation of a friend I tried Peruna and am glad to say it has afforded a complete cure. It is with pleasure I recommend it to others."—Rudolph M. Patterson.

A course of Peruna never fails to bring relief. There is no other remedy like Peruna. Its cures are prompt and permanent.

Mr. Camillus Senne, 257 West 129th street, New York, writes:

"I have fully recovered from my catarrhal troubles. I suffered for three years with catarrh of the head, nose and throat. I tried all kinds of medicine without relief, but at last I have been cured by the wonderful remedy called Peruna.

Mr. Camillus Senne.

"I read of Peruna in your almanac, and wrote you for advice, which I followed. After taking one and one-half bottles of Peruna I am entirely cured, and can recommend Peruna to anyone as the best and surest remedy for any catarrhal troubles."—Camillus Senne.

Hearing Lost by Catarrh—Restored by Peruna.

Mr. William Bauer, Burton, Texas, a Ginner and Miller, writes:

"Some years ago I lost the hearing in my left ear, and upon examination by a specialist, catarrh was decided to be the cause. I took a course of treatment and regained my hearing for a time but I soon lost it completely. I commenced to take Peruna according to directions and have taken eight bottles in all, and my hearing is completely restored, and I shall sing the praises of Peruna whenever an opportunity occurs.—Wm. Bauer.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President, The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

From the Firm of Bennet & Wright, Plumbing, Heating and Electrical Contractors, Toronto.

This is to certify that Duncan McGregor has been in our employment steady for about fifteen years and, during that time we have found him to be steady, honest and trustworthy. He has given every satisfaction as a practical mechanic in each of the following branches: Plumbing, steam and gas fitting, also electrical and conduit work, and for some time has had charge of some of our largest contracts with satisfactory results.

From Illsley & Horn, General Contractors, Toronto.

The bearer, Mr. Duncan McGregor, had charge of the electric wiring at the King Edward Hotel Building. The job was a large and complicated one and by the way Mr. McGregor handled the work he proved himself a mechanic of more than ordinary ability. We unhesitatingly recommend him as a first-class mechanic to anyone needing his services.

From Mr. J. Ross Robertson, of the Evening Telegram.

Mr. Duncan McGregor, who has been connected with the Bennet & Wright Co. for some years, and who has superintended the work of plumbing and heating for the Bennet & Wright Co., is not only in my opinion, but also that of my architect, a fully competent mechanic. His work, my architect informs me, has been most satisfactory. Anything that has come under my own supervision has been likewise satisfactory.

An Extract Taken from the June Number of Domestic Engineering.

During the recent convention of the Canadian Electrical Association held in the King Edward Hotel, a thorough examination was made of all the electrical work in the hotel, and it was pronounced second to none on the continent. Therefore, great credit is due Mr. Duncan MacGregor, who superintended the entire conduit, electrical and power system for the firm of Bennet & Wright, of this city, who were the contractors for all the different branches of the electrical work in the new hotel.

BODY WAS EXHUMED

Inquest Began Touching Death of C. Brown, of South River, Ont.

SUSPICION OF FOUL PLAY RIFE

Intoxicated He Left South River, and Next Afternoon His Body, Which Was Ascertained to Be Badly Bruised and Torn, Was Found By Directions Sent By a Passing Train Conductor.

South River, Ont., Dec. 5.—After lying undisturbed in the Machar Cemetery for about three weeks, a casket was removed on Wednesday afternoon, taken to the Library Hall, where the lid was lifted, and the now putrified remains of one Charles Brown were inspected by medical men and a jury. Some four weeks ago, Charles Brown, who had been working in Wright's camp, in Baxter township, came out to South River, in company with Tansy McDonald. He spent the evening in town, got intoxicated, and then when last seen by the clerk of the hotel was climbing on board the "blind baggage" of the moving midnight express south. He had neither money nor ticket.

Next afternoon a conductor on a passing freight noticed the body of a man lying apparently dead near the track, about one mile south of here. He wired the information from Sundridge, and the body was searched for and found by William Lewis, Fred Cook and Dan McNorton. His right arm was badly bruised and torn on the muscle. The top part of his coat was found 10 feet south of the body, his sweater was torn off, and he was lying immersed in a pool of water 12 feet west of the track, his face just out of the water, and between the body and the track were some high bushes.

Foul play was suspected, and an inquest was ordered to be held Coroner Best of Magnetawan holding it on Wednesday. The body was taken out of the grave, and Drs. Harcourt and Richardson held a post-mortem examination. Constable McFadyen of Huntsville was present. After four witnesses had been examined, McFadyen asked that the inquest be adjourned until next Wednesday morning, 9th inst., at 10 a.m. Several new witnesses will be summoned. Medical evidence testified that deceased came to his death from hemorrhage, cold and exhaustion.

Sudden's Slayer Known.

Windsor, Dec. 5.—Provincial Detectives Campeau and Mahoney of Windsor, have learned the identity of the negro who is said to have killed John Rudden, the Maidstone farmer, with a blow of a billiard cue, and are advertising for his capture. The suspected man is Edward Slaughter, a light-brown negro, 26 years old and about 5 feet 8½ inches high. He is of medium build, weighing 140 pounds. Slaughter belongs to Indianapolis.

Charged With Bigamy.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 5.—W. F. Hersch, an Ottawa man, is under arrest on a charge of bigamy. A warrant was sworn out by Mrs. Louisa Hersch, an employe of the steam laundry here. She says she was married to Hersch last November in Ottawa and afterwards learned that he had previously been married to Miss Nolan of Rochester.

WOMAN'S BURDENS

The Health of Many Women in A Precarious Condition.

Headaches, Pains Easily Accounted For and Functional Derangements Make Life Miserable.

Throughout the length and breadth of Canada there are thousands and thousands of grateful people who admit that they owe health and strength to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and who speak always—as they should do—in terms of warmest praise of this medicine. Among the many friends Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have made there is perhaps none more enthusiastic in speaking of the pills than Mrs. Edward Atcheson, of Orangeville, Ont., who for two years suffered intensely, but at last found a cure through the use of this remedy. To a reporter of the Orangeville Sun, Mrs. Atcheson said: "Three years ago I became very much run down. My appetite almost vanished, I grew pale, was subject to headaches, dizziness, palpitation of the heart and a ringing noise in the ears. I tried several medicines, but they did not help me, and I was consequently much depressed and feared I was doomed to go through life a chronic invalid. One day I read the cure of a woman whose symptoms were almost identical with my own, through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I sent for a box, and by the time it was finished I was sufficiently encouraged to send for another, and so on until I had taken six boxes, when I was in every sense of the word a different person. Every symptom of my late illness had vanished, and I was once more enabled to look after my household duties with old-time health and vigour. I feel that I owe all this to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I cheerfully recommend them to other weak and suffering women."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a real blessing to all weak, weary women. They build up the blood and cure all the functional ills from which so many women suffer in silence. These pills may be had from any druggist or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Remember that substitutes cannot cure, and see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around each box.

Killed By G.T.R. Train.

Toronto, Dec. 5.—Coroner Cotton has issued a warrant for the purpose of enquiring into the death of William Moore. The deceased was killed at the Bloor street crossing by a G.T.R. train. The accident happened about 6 o'clock last evening. Moore endeavored to cross the track in front of an approaching train, but was not quick enough. He was killed instantly. Deceased was a laborer, and lived at 99 Perth avenue. He was 65 years of age.

IF YOU HAVE THESE SYMPTOMS

Send for my Book.

If you want to feel better,
If you want more strength,
If you lack ambition,
If you can't do things like you used to,
If you lack confidence in yourself,
If your nerve—your courage—is leaving you,
If you lack vim, vigour, vitality,
If something is eating away your constitution, write to me for the book you need.

The book tells of my discovery. Tells how, after thirty years, I found the cause of the symptoms, and many others, given above.

The book tells how, by scientific experiment, I traced out the causes that bring on chronic diseases. It tells how I perfected my prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

I found invariably where there was a weakness that the inside nerves were weak.

Where there was a lack of vitality that the vital nerves lacked power.

Where weak organs were found, I always found weak nerves.

Not the nerves commonly thought of, but the vital organ nerves, the inside—the invisible nerves.

This was a revelation.

Then my real success began.

Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen, that would vitalize these nerves.

That prescription I called a restorative.

It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. After that I did not fail to cure one case in each hundred. In the extremely difficult cases, my failures for five years were one in each forty treated. I found cancer incurable. Cancer is for surgery, not medicine.

Then how to get this prescription to the sick ones everywhere was my thought.

I must announce it in the public press. But, thought I, will they realize the truth of my discovery—The real power of Dr. Shoop's Restorative? Then a way came to me—like a revelation.

"I will offer it to the sick on trial, said I. Then they will know I am sincere."

I wrote a reliable druggist in each city and village in America.

I got their consent to co-operate with me.

Now to any sick one

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Can be Taken on Trial.

For a full month I will let you use it entirely at my risk.

Send no money. Just write me for the book you need. When I send it I will tell you of a druggist near you who will permit the month's trial.

Use the Restorative a month. Then decide. If you say to the druggist, "It did not help me," that will relieve you of any expense whatever. He will bill the cost to me.

This is my way of clearing your mind of all doubts as to what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do.

No matter how prejudiced, you cannot dispute this absolutely security I offer. You cannot resist an offer like this if you are at all sick.

If you have a weakness, write me.

If you can't do things like you used to do them, tell me about it.

Write in confidence. As a physician I will tell you a way to help.

Get my book now—to-day.

IS THIS DOVE OF PEACE?

Russia's Answer, It is Hoped, Will Please Japan.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 5.—Russia's reply to Japan's proposals is almost completed, but will not be ready for transmission to Tokio till next week. A strong hope is expressed in official circles that the answer will prove acceptable to Japan in the main, if not in all the details. Russia will make concessions, but, in turn, proposes modifications, which, it is said, will not be of a radical character. It is reiterated that the present state of the negotiations is confined to a determination of the general question relating to the rights of the respective powers in Corea. The Czar and the Foreign Office have freely consulted Viceroy Alexieff in the preparation of the reply. While it is not admitted that the meeting of the Japanese Parliament on December 8th has hastened the matter, there has been unusual activity at the Foreign Office for several days.

FOUR CHINESE DROWNED.

Wagon Rolled Down Hill at Buffalo Into Erie Canal.

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 4.—Four of eleven Chinamen who were being smuggled into the United States from Canada were drowned in the Erie Canal at the foot of Breckenridge street a few minutes after 6 o'clock yesterday morning. The accident was due to the breaking of the tongue of a big covered wagon, in which the Chinamen were being transported from the landing place, just below the foot of Breckenridge street. The horses were freed when the pole broke, and the big wagon, laden with human beings, rolled zig-zagging down a hill into the canal. The seven Chinamen who escaped with their lives jumped out of the wagon when the descent began. The driver of the wagon and another white man, believed to have been with him, escaped.

500 HOGS CREMATED.

William Caldwell, Nurseryman of Galt, Burnt Out.

Galt, Dec. 5.—The cider mill and root house and piggery, owned by William Caldwell, nurseryman, were entirely destroyed by fire about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The town fire brigade was not called owing to the distance from the nearest hydrant. About 500 hogs were burnt. The fire, which originated at the engine house, spread so rapidly that nothing could be saved except a span of horses and a cow. The loss will be heavy.

Victim of Domestic Infelicity.

Kingston, Dec. 5.—Benjamin Case was found on Queen street with his throat cut. He was removed to an hospital. Case was a farm hand in Pittsburg, but came to Kingston and got employment in the Locomotive Works. He was said to have been married a week ago. Thursday night domestic disturbances arose, and he was so agitated he attempted suicide. He is from Gananoque, and is 30 years of age.

THE COTTON RISE.

Excitement in Manchester and Liverpool —New England Cotton Mills to Close— Canadian Cottons Go Up.

Montreal, Dec. 5.—The first advance in Canadian cottons comes from New Brunswick, the Cornwall and York Cotton Mills Company of St. John announcing an increase of 5 per cent., which may be followed latter by another increase. The other Canadian mills, including those in and about Montreal, will put the advanced schedule into effect immediately.

Excitement in English Markets.

London, Dec. 5.—The rise in cotton caused intense excitement in Manchester and Liverpool yesterday. American cotton advanced 28 to 44 points over Thursday's closing prices. It is said locally that if the official crop estimate of the United States Department of Agriculture, made public Thursday, is correct, it means a terrible calamity for Lancanshire.

Cotton Mills to Close.

Boston, Dec. 5.—Arnold B. Hanford, president of the American Cotton Yarn Exchange here, says: "The situation is very serious, and the outlook offers no encouragement. I can not see anything but a general curtailment. The conditions confronting the industry are the worst in many years. The mills will not manufacture at a loss, they must therefore curtail production and reduce wages. This will result undoubtedly in great suffering."

To Invade the U.S

London, Dec. 5.—One of the largest firms of cotton spinners at Bradford, Yorkshire, announce that they are preparing to erect mills in the United States, to which they will transfer hundreds of looms with their complement of combing, drawing and spinning machinery, the dismounting of which has already commenced.

The Best Remedy for Croup.

From the Atchison, Kan., Daily Globe. This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighbourhood. One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of his children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost in case of croup as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old-fashioned remedy for croup known as hive syrup, but some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw off the phlegm quicker and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as a croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to use. For sale by all druggists.

Eleven Miners Killed.

Liege, Belgium, Dec. 5.—Eleven coal miners were killed yesterday at the Gasson-Laquasse mine at Montegnee, through the breaking of the rope by which a cage was being hauled up. The men were precipitated to the bottom of the pit, and their bodies were horribly mangled.

Not From S. A. Colonies.

London, Dec. 5.—The correspondent of the Canadian Associated Press understands that the Foreign Office has received an intimation from Germany that the most favored nation treatment will not be withdrawn from the South African colonies.

Refused 20-Year Franchise.

Montreal, Dec. 5.—The City Council yesterday afternoon refused the Street Railway a twenty-year extension to the franchise by a vote of 20 to 6.

The Fires of Eczema.

So keen is the suffering of many people who endure the stinging, itching sensations of Eczema that they speak of the skin as being on fire. By its soothing, healing, antiseptic influence Dr. Chase's Ointment positively cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and every form of itching skin disease. It is of inestimable value in every home, and when once introduced becomes a household necessity. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the standard the world over, and has no worthy rival.

Barley Purity

The best malting barley in the world is grown in certain favored localities of Western Ontario.

All the barley used in Carling's Ale is grown in these districts, and the best crops are selected each year by Carling's own experts.

Before being used it is put through special machinery which separates all the impure and foreign substances.

Common grade ales, insufficiently aged, are heavy and taste sour, which causes headaches and biliousness to the consumer. Carling's Ale is aged for six months before being marketed.

Ask for Carling's Ale—accept no other, because no other is quite so good.

THE BAND AT WORK.

Opinion of a Competent Judge Upon the Quality of its Work.

A gentleman who heard a recent practice of the band has this to say of their preparation of the Verdi Festival Concert, on Dec. 18th:

"Verdi's music is operatic, and of the highly popular speaking order. The band shows a ready attack, and confident grasp, which reflect much credit upon their very capable leader. I am very much mistaken if the concert on the 18th does not awaken the enthusiasm of lovers of operatic music. Mrs. Eardley-Wilmot and Miss Davies in ballads and cavatine will of course prove a great attraction in themselves."

LAID AT REST IN WESTWOOD CEMETERY.

Funeral of the Late Thomas Blezard, Ex-M. P. P., on Friday Last.

The funeral of the last Thos. Blezard, ex-M.P.P., took place on Friday afternoon, Dec. 4th. It was conducted under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity, and the large attendance of the brethren of that order and of the general public testified to the high degree of respect in which the deceased gentleman was held in the community where he has ben for many years a prominent and creditable figure.

The funeral was conducted under Masonic auspices, the deceased having been a respected member of Keene Lodge of that body. R. W. Bro. J. M. Shaw, M. D., had charge, assisted by Rev. J. McKee McLennan, of Norwood and a large number of the Masonic fraternity from Peterborough and other places. There were altogether about one hundred Masons present in testimony of the high degree of esteem in which was held the late W. M. of Keene lodge by his brethren of the society generally. The religious services were conducted by Rev. H. Foley, assisted by Rev. J. McKee McLennan and Rev. W. B. Seccombe. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Frank Birdsall, Jas. McNeil, Wm. Sharp, Richard Hope, John Lancaster and R. Humphries. The floral tributes were very beautiful and numerous and the remains were escorted by over one hundred and fifty vehicles to the Westwood cemetery where they were laid at rest beside those of his wife, who predeceased Mr. Blezard about seventeen years. Thus closes the last chapter of the life of a resident of Peterborough who, in respect of long faithful and efficient representation of the East Riding, in respect of his prominent association with the most important interests of his native township and county, and in respect of his solid qualities of character, recalls the Shakesperian eulogy:

"He was a man take him for all in all, We shall not look upon his like again."

NOVEL METHOD OF DOING BUSINESS.

Mr. Tuck of the Co-Operative Grocery Will Divide Profits.

A window display in the Co-Operative Grocery, corner of George and Brock streets, is attracting considerable attention, due to a novel scheme of informing the public of a certain method of selling groceries. Mr. Tuck, the proprietor, has placed signs in his window announcing that after $2.50 profits have been made for the day, he will sell at cost. Mr. Tuck explains that he allows himself a profit of only $2.50 per day. When that sum has been gained, for the rest of the day all goods are sold at exactly what they cost, plus their portion of expense. In order to sell always at the lowest possible cost, Mr. Tuck reduces his running expenses to the lowest point. He pays cash for everything, thus having the advantage of the lowest prices; he sells only for cash, thus avoiding bad accounts, and therefore keeps no books.

When it was remarked that grocery stores are failing even as it is, and with the present high prices, Mr. Tuck said, "The trouble is that in many cases grocery men are extravagant themselves and teach their customers to be extravagant. Between their purchases on credit, their unnecessary expenses and their bad debts, they get into deep water and go under. I buy my goods for spot cash and thus receive the benefit of a discount. My customers receive the benefit in the end, however, as I am able to sell my goods cheaper. They pay cash for everything, and thus there are no books to be kept. I take great pains with my purchases and buy only from reliable people. I try to keep a first-class line of goods, and will not sell to others an article that my own family would not eat."

Mr. Tuck says his business has increased 50 per cent. during the past few weeks and there is every indication that success will crown his efforts to give his customers pure goods at low prices.

TEXT OF JUDGMENT IN KING VS. WASSON.

Mr. D. W. Dumble Gives Grounds for His Judgment.

Showed That Public Property had Been Interfered With—Penalty of $100 Imposed.

A case which has been occasioning considerable interest in local legal circles is that in the King vs. Wasson the latter being charged with having cut stop logs out of the dam at the head of Indian River.

The facts are briefly: Mr. Wasson is the owner of a mill on Indian River, the power for driving which is obtained from the above river. During the low water of this summer and fall Mr. Wasson found that there was not sufficient power to operate the mill, which, as a consequence, he had to close down. This condition prevailed for some time in spite of Mr. Wasson's appeals to those in charge of the dam at the head of the river, to allow more water to pass through and thus supply him with what he considered his lawful quantity. When his requests were not granted Mr. Wasson himself removed some of the stop-logs. For this act he was charged before Police Magistrate Dumble with having done an injury or damage to public property. After an exhuustive research into the conditions of the case Mr. Dumble fined Mr. Wasson the minimum amount provided by the law—$100. The following is the judgment given by Mr. Dumble:

The defendant is charged with having wilfully done an injury to the dam at Stony Lake, at the head of the Indian River, contrary to the rules and regulations made by the Governor-General in Council, under the Public Works Act respecting such waters.

These rules and regulations were made in 1892, and purported to be for the "management, maintenance, proper use and protection of the Government slides, booms and works in the Trent and Newcastle Districts."

It appears that before the Dominion Government took control of the waters in question, some one made a cutting in the rock bounding Gilchrist's Bay in Stony Lake, whereby there was an outflow of water from Stony Lake into the gorge or channel leading into White Lake, about fifty rods distant from the bay. This little lake is about three-quarters of a mile in diameter, and is the head waters of the Indian River, a stream running from White Lake into Rice Lake, through the townships of Dummer and Otonabee.

On the cutting stop logs were fitted to govern the flow.

There are some mills on the Indian River and it is probable that some of the mill owners sought more water for running their mills, and for this purpose tapped Stony Lake.

About fifteen years ago dam at Young's Point, where Stony Lake empties into the Otonabee River, was rebuilt, raised and improved so that all the waters of Stony Lake were raised about three or four feet. The effect of this would be to over-flow the stop-logs in the first cutting and so the Dominion Government in order to retain the waters of Stony Lake, and prevent it running away by the Indian River to the prejudice of the Otonabee River, constructed a new set of stop-logs in a cutting made for the purpose at a point a little nearer to White Lake and necessarily on higher ground than the former ones, now submerged. This last work was by the Government put in charge of Mr. Little, who lives near by and who has been permanently employed to look after the dam. He made and fitted in square stop-logs and put them in or removed them as directed by Superintendent Rogers.

The present season has been one of very low water, and Mr. Wasson who has a flour mill on the Indian River at Warsaw, six miles down stream, and who evidently wanted more water to run his mill, came up and took out some stop-logs, contrary to the orders of Mr. Little. Mr. Little put them in again, but Mr. Wasson got a cross-cut saw and cut a stop-log over which 11 inches of water were then running, and arming himself with a gun he guarded the race-way or outlet for part of two days, to enforce non-interference with the stop-logs by Mr. Little.

The Dominion Government owns the land on which the stop-logs are; the Government built the works, and have there a caretaker.

Several steamers navigate Stony Lake and reaches on Otonabee river, and these waters are also largely used for the flotation of timber, saw-logs, etc.

There was no evidence to show that the Indian River was by nature fed from Stony Lake, or that riparian proprietors on the Indian River were in any way prejudiced by the little dam and stop-log contrivance at Gilchrist's Bay. On the contrary it was shown that even when all the stop-logs were in there was a considerable leakage through them into White Creek and White Lake.

Of course the raising of the Stony Lake waters four feet must of necessity have given to White Lake by the cut channels a larger supply of water from Stony Lake than it could have had under natural conditions.

It was contended by counsel for Mr. Wasson that his act of cutting the stop logs was justified, or done under colour of right, by reason of his long use of the Indian River waters, but no evidence was offered to establish this proposition.

I find that the Government control the waters of Stony Lake and the Otonabee River throughout, that the stop-logs were put in by the Government, and maintained on their own lands for the control of the Stony Lake and Otonabee waters for purposes of navigation—the Government, in fact, having the pre-emptive right to the use of the waters for navigation purposes before any mill owner on the Otonabee River, and I cannot understand that owners of lands on the Indian River have any right whatever in the Stony Lake waters, as there was no natural outflow from Stony Lake into the Indian River.

It follows then that Mr. Wasson in entering the Government land and wilfully cutting and removing the stop-logs was guilty of wilfully doing an injury or damage to a public work in the Newcastle District, to wit, the dam at Stony Lake at the head of the Indian River, and as the smallest penalty the law provides for the offence is $100, I adjudge that he do pay a fine of $100 and costs, to be paid in 15 days, and in default of payment distress, and in default of distress imprisonment for 20 days.

(Signed) D. W. DUMBLE,
Police Magistrate.

GUILD ENTERTAINED.

By Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Torrance Yesterday Evening.

A goodly number of young men, representing St. Paul's Young Men's Guild, on invitation of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Torrance, spent a most pleasant evening at the manse last night.

Mr. Max Dennistoun addressed the Guild. Taking for his subject "The Story of the Argonauts," as told by Homer, he outlined the adventures of that bold band of fifty heroes, as in their ship "Argo" they sailed into unknown waters, under the leadership of Jason, and at last succeeded in bringing back with them the far-famed and much-sought-after Golden Fleece, much to the chagrin of King Aetes, in whose territory it was confined, guarded by a dragon of prodigious size.

On motion of Rev. J. A. Wilson and Mr. A. P. McLean a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker.

Music, games and refreshments brought to a close a most pleasant evening.

COLDS

WHAT WE HAVE WE'LL HOLD.

The Conservatives of East Peterborough at a convention held at Norwood on Thursday, nominated Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, of Belmont, as a candidate to contest the representation of the riding at the next Dominion elections. Personally, the selection is perhaps as good as could be made from the ranks of the party in the East, but it carries a heavy responsibility. Mr. Sexsmith will, perhaps, in his personal capacity, commend himself to a certain party of the electorate, but to the great body of electors, as the representative of a retrograde political policy, he will not be welcome, and will not have by any means, smooth sailing in his candidature. Necessarily, he puts himself in opposition to the Laurier Government, its policy, and its record. The personality of the Liberal leader, his broad imperialism, his unswerving fidelity to Canadian autonomy and interests, his robust grasp of public questions involving the best welfare of the country, have placed him so high in the esteem, not to say affection, of all classes of Canadians, that the task of displacing him will be a truly Herculean one.

The the policy of his Government, greatly aggressive and directed towards the exploitation and development of the magnificent and unbounded material natural resources of the country, will commend itself so strongly to the people that they will be very little inclined to replace it with a policy of practical retrogression and stagnation. And his policy will commend itself all the more strongly to the people because of the proof of its effective character, which seven years of fruitful application affords, as seen in the tremendous advance of the country all along the line, in the prevalence of a prosperity fairly rampant in its intensity, and of a development—all unprecedented in the history of this great country.

Mr. Sexsmith will find the people little anxious to exchange the seven fat years of the Laurier rule for the lean kine years the country vegetated under during the prevalence of Conservative rule. The people will see the difference between a discredited policy, which in Dominion matters seeks to make the people rich by taxing them, and a policy like that of the Laurier Government, which provides the conditions that leave the people free to achieve that success which their enterprising and energetic character, and the possibilities of our country, make possible. The people of Canada were the same in fibre and character, and in enterprise, for eighteen years before 1896 as they have been during the seven years of Laurier rule, but the difference is in the respective policies of government and of administration, which have resulted, in one case, in burdensome restrictions of national effort, and slow growth, and in the other, in freedom from such trammels, and in a growth and expansion, in the short course of seven years, in nearly all respects greater than during the eighteen years of a Government, whose policy and conditions Mr. Sexsmith is seeking to restore. Mr. Sexsmith will find that the electors of East Peterborough, as those of Canada at large, will act upon the conviction that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, and upon the determination that what they have they'll hold.

SATAN REPROVING SIN.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear sir,—The local Conservative organ seems to be in a bad way. The frame of mind of its editor is evidently reflected in blue, deep blue, tints in its columns. His long absence from Peterborough has not improved his frame of mind. His political ambitions seem to have missed their mark, and his coming back to Peterborough to take up the hopeless task of bringing the Opposition party out of the depths of the "cold shades" adds to the disappointment and to the hopelessness of political success which seem to rankle at his heart. He doesn't use even ordinary ink, He dips his pen in gall and writes bitter, bilious, Billingsgate, and outside the stainless ranks of his own party, he can find nothing good—nothing but corruption. He shows a pathetic interest in the promotion of political purity. In his self-denying zeal he seeks to befriend the party he has been fighting all his life. He wants to purge the Liberal party of its political uncleanness.

If he is really sincere in his desire to purify politics, let him take the great example of the short lived Ontario Conservative Association, which aimed to begin by "making its own house clean."

If he wants to improve things let him hold up his own party as a "horrible example." Let him print a list of the Peterborough contributors to the Conservative corruption fund for the last Dominion election campaign in West Peterborough, which is said to have amounted, including outside assistance, to $6,000 or $7,000 for this riding. And while he is about it he might compile a bill of particulars of the amounts contributed locally and the amounts sent in from outside to run the last local election campaign in West Peterborough.

Then the Review, having recently conjoined to its zeal for political righteousness an "in-the-morning" zeal for temperance, the editor might tell us the details about that barrel of whiskey, which, in the Dominion campaign, referred to, which was paid for by an official of a Conservative Association, and distributed throughout the riding, in interest of temperance and pure politics. If he wishes to pursue his investigations and to throw more light on the subject he has only to go to the former Dominion representative of West Peterborough, who, if he will, can, a tale unfold, and there will be forthcoming a shipload of information as to how much money has been spent during the past fifteen or sixteen years to purify politics in West Peterborough.

If the editor of the Review would begin at home in his own political family his crusade against political corruption he will find his hands full.

Some adventurers in moral reform have been known to make the best temperance speeches when they were well primed with whiskey. Our good friend of the Review seems to pen the most thrilling disquisitions on purity in the air of political rottenness which envelops his own political hearthstone. The open, outstanding sinner is shocking enough, but he is an angel of light compared with the holier-than-thou hypocrite, who, steeped in sin himself, conceals his vices under a cloak of smug piety and preaches virtue to his moral betters.

"Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, . . . who make clean the outside of the cup and platter, but within is rottenness," sayeth the Scriptures. Let the "scribe" of the Review and the Parisees, hypocrites," who practice political corruption in secret and preach purity from the housetops, take warning.

Yours truly,
CONSISTENCY.

CURES RHEUMATISM?

YES.

The widespread extent of Rheumatism in its several dangerous forms, and the largely fatal character of its effects, had for a long time set physicians to investigating as to its cause. The verdict of experience and study at the present day is that Rheumatism, of whatever nature, is a blood disease, and the best authorities agree that it is caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood. Now for the remedy. This must combine the most effective specifics, prepared with such care and skill as to leave no element of uncertainty. The result of such study and care is known as "Bu-Ju." This is a vegetable compound in the form of pills which stimulate weak kidneys and overcome clogged or sluggish conditions of these organs. The effect is at once apparent. The blood returns to its normal state of healthy purity and there is no basis for Rheumatism in the system. That this result can be obtained by the use of Bu-Ju is attested beyond question. A trial will convince you that the plain truth is good enough for Bu-Ju, the kidney pill that cures Rheumatism.

Trade-Mark Bu=Ju

Is put up in boxes of 50 pills, selling at 50 cts. at all drug stores. Refuse substitutes.

THE GERMAN SURTAX.

Goods, Fifty Per Cent. of Whose Value is German, Included.

Ottawa, Dec. 5.—An Order-in-Council has been passed confirming the provisional regulations in regard to the surtax on German goods.

No changes have been made in the regulations or in the certificates required to be made on invoices. But a clause has been added to the regulations defining and interpreting the clause in the act respecting the surtax, which provides for its application to articles, the chief virtue of which was produced in Germany, although they may have been enhanced in value by the labor of another country, notwithstanding the provisions of the British preferential tariff.

An illustration given is the case of necessities made in Great Britain or any country from silk fabric manufactured in Germany. If the market value of the fabric to the importer represents more than 50 per cent. of the value of the complete article, then these complete are subject to the surtax.

(Liquozone was formerly known in Canada as Fowley's Liquified Ozone.)

We Will Buy

A 50c. Bottle of Liquozone and Give it to You to Try.

Liquozone—liquid oxygen—is the only product that can kill germs in the body without killing you. No man knows any other way to destroy the cause of any germ disease.

It is new to America, and millions who need it don't know of it. For that reason we make this remarkable offer. We will buy the first bottle and give it to you if you need it. We will do it willingly, gladly, to convince you at once and forever that Liquozone does kill germs.

We Paid $100,000

for the rights to Liquozone for America. We tested this product for years in the most difficult germ diseases; then we bought these rights for the highest price ever paid for a scientific discovery.

We paid that price because Liquozone does what all the skill in the world cannot do without it. Any drug that kills germs is a poison to you and it cannot be taken internally. The best physicians, the world over, employ Liquozone alone for germ troubles; and any physician who doesn't is almost helpless in any germ disease

Just Oxygen.

Liquozone is simply liquid oxygen—no drugs, no alcohol in it. It is the discovery of Pauli, the great German chemist, who spent 20 years on it. His object was to get such an excess of oxygen in staple form into the blood that no germ could live in any membrane or tissue.

Liquozone does that. The results are so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a germ that it cannot kill. Yet oxygen is Nature's greatest tonic—the very source of your vitality. Its effects are exhilarating, purifying, vitalizing. But germs are vegetables; and this excess of oxygen—the very life of an animal—is deadly to vegetable matter.

We spend 14 days in making each bottle of Liquozone, and the result is liquid oxygen—the best thing in the world for you, yet certain destruction to disease germs, wherever the Liquozone-laden blood goes.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone kills the germs, wherever they are, and the results are inevitable. By destroying the cause of the trouble, it invariably ends the disease, and forever.

WARSHIP HARD AGROUND.

Feared Flora of Esquimalt Squadron Will Be a Total Loss.

Victoria, Dec. 4.—With a crash that shivered her from end to end the big cruiser Flora of H. M. Esquimalt squadron, ran on the rocks at Village Point, Denman Island, about twenty minutes after leaving the coal bunkers at Union, en route to Victoria.

The navigating officer who was in charge mistook the red spar buoy marking the reef at Village Point for a pole beacon. A fog prevailed at the time.

The vessel, when the tide was at its height yesterday afternoon, was submerged to her amidships. The bow has been badly damaged, and it is feared she may prove a total loss.

Admiral Bickford chartered a special train and hurried to the scene He is being followed by H. M. S. Egeria and the flagship Grafton. Both carry wrecking gear.

Steamer Absolutely Crippled.

Quebec, Dec. 4.—With her machinery considerably disabled as a result of the thick ice in the river, the propeller Orion, Capt. Leslie, which left here the other day, has been obliged to put in. The steamer cannot proceed either one way or the other in her crippled state, and may have to remain where she is for the winter. A Government steamer may be sent to the Orion's assistance.

NOT A TWINGE IN HIS BODY.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured W. J. Dixon's Rheumatism.

He was Crippled for Weeks Before he Tried the Great Kidney Remedy —How the Cure was Effected.

Barwick, Rainy River, Ont., Dec. 4.—Special.—The cold, wet weather, with its accompaniment of Rheumatic pains has set the people talking of the case of Wm. John Dixon. Mr. Dixon, who is well known in this neighbourhood, was a cripple from Rheumatism. To-day he has not a twinge of his old enemy anywhere in his body, and he gives all the credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I had an attack of Typhoid Fever," Mr. Dixon says in speaking of his cure, "and after I got over it, Rheumatism set in. I had pains in my back and in my right hip so bad I had to use a stick to walk. I had no comfort in sleeping and could no more than dress or undress myself for two months. For three or four weeks I could not put my right leg on my left knee.

"On my brother's advice I started using Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after taking three boxes I began to walk around and do my work as usual. I am all right now and Dodd's Kidney Pills did it."

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. The natural way to cure it is to get the uric acid out of the blood. If the kidneys are sound they will take all the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the Kidneys sound.

City at Mercy of Fire.

Schenectady, N.Y., Dec. 5.—The freight house and sheds of the New York Central Railroad Company in this city were totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning together with an immense amount of freight, the value of which it is almost impossible to estimate. The only means the Fire Department had of fighting the fire was with water obtained from the Erie Canal with two fire engines. The city has been without a drop of water in its mains since 9 o'clock Thursday morning on account of a breakdown at the pumping station, which shut off entirely the city's supply.

Strollers

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM

Author of "Under the Rose."

Saint-Prosper returned the manager's glance in kind. Barnes' candor and simplicity were apparent antidotes to the other's taciturnity and constraint. During the country dance the soldier had remained a passive spectator, displaying little interest in the rustic merrymaking or the open glances cast upon him by bonny lasses burned in the sunlit fields, buxom serving maids as clean as the pans in the kitchen and hearty maids not averse to frisk and frolic in wholesome rural fashion.

But now in the face of the manager's buoyancy at the success of a mere expedient, a hopefulness ill warranted by his short purse and the long future before him, the young man's manner changed from one of indifference to friendliness, if not sympathy, for the ever-sanguine custodian of players. Would the helmet, like the wonderful pitcher, replenish itself as fast as it was emptied? Or was it but a makeshift? The manager's next remark seemed a reply to these queries, denoting that Barnes himself, although temporarily elated, was not oblivious to the precarious character of "free performances," with voluntary offerings.

"What we need," continued the manager, "is a temperance drama. With what intemperate eagerness would the people flock to see it! But where is it to be found? Plays don't grow on bushes even in this agricultural district. And I have yet to discover any dramatists hereabout, unless," jocularly, "you are a Tom Taylor or a Tom Robertson in disguise. Are you sure you have never courted the divine muse? Men of position have frequently been guilty of that folly, sir."

"But once," answered the other in the same tone; "at college, a political satire."

"Was it successful?"

"Quite so. I was expelled for writing it."

"Well," retorted Barnes irrelevantly, "you have at least mildly coquetted with the muse. Besides, I dare say, you have been behind the scenes a good deal. The greenroom is a fashionable rendezvous. Where are you going? And what—if I may ask—is your business?"

"I am on my way to New Orleans," said the traveler after a moment's hesitation; "my business, fortune getting; in sugar, tobacco or indigo culture!"

"New Orleans!" exclaimed the manager, poising the ladle in midair. "That, too, is our destination. We have an engagement to play there. Why not join our band? Write or adapt a play for us. Make a temperance drama of your play!"

"To the success of the temperance drama!"

"You are a whimsical fellow," said the stranger, smiling. "Why don't you write the play yourself?"

"I? An unread, illiterate dotard! Why, I never had so much as a day's schooling. As a lad I slept with the rats, held horses, swept crossings and lived like a mudlark! Me write a play! I might let fall a suggestion here and there, how to set a flat or where to drop a fly, to plan an entrance or to arrange an exit! No, no; let the shoemaker stick to his last! It takes"—with deference—"a scholar to write a drama."

"Thus you disqualify me," laughed the other, drawing out a pipe, which he filled and lighted with a coal held in the iron grip of the antique tongs. "If it were only to help plant a battery or stand in a gap!" he said grimly, replacing the tongs against the old brick oven at one side of the grate. "But to beset King Bacchus in three acts! To storm a castle in the first, scale the walls in the second and blow up all the king's horses and all the king's men in the last—that is, indeed, serious warfare!"

"True, it will be a roundabout way to New Orleans," continued the manager, disregarding his companion's response, "but there is no better way of seeing the new world—that is, if you do not disdain the company of strolling players. You gain in knowledge what you lose in time. If you are a philosopher, you can study human nature through the buffoon and the mummer. If you are a naturalist, here are grand forests to contemplate. If you are not a recluse, here is free, though humble, comradeship."

His listener gazed thoughtfully into the fire. Was the prospect of sharing this gypsylike life attractive to him? An adventurer himself, was he drawn toward these homeless strollers, for whom the illusions of dramatic art shone with enticing luster in the comparative solitude of the circuit on the wilderness?

As he sat before the glow, the light of the burning shagbark, playing elfishly above the dying embers, outlined the stalwart yet active figure and the impenetrable, musing features. But when, with an upward shower of sparks, the backlog fell asunder and the waning flame cast yet more gloomy shadows behind them, he leaned back in his heavy, hewn chair and again bent an attentive look upon the loquacious speaker.

"Or, if you desire," resumed the manager after some hesitation, "it might become a business venture as well as a pleasure jaunt. Here is a sinking ship. Will the salvage warrant helping us into port—that is, New Orleans? There hope tells a flattering tale. The company is well equipped, has a varied repertory, while Constance"—tenderly—"is a host in herself. If you knew her as I do, had watched her art grow"—his voice trembled—"and to think, sometimes I do not know where the next day's sustenance may come from! That she"—

He broke off abruptly, gazing at his companion half apologetically. "We players, sir," he resumed, "present a jovial front, but"—tapping his breast—"few know what is going on here!"

"Therein," said the younger man, emptying his pipe, "you have stated a universal truth." He pushed a smoldering log with his foot toward the remnants of the embers. "Suppose I were so minded to venture"—and he mentioned a modest sum—"in this hazard and we patched up the play together?"

"You don't mean it?" cried the manager eagerly. Then he regarded the other suspiciously. "Your proposal is not inspired through sympathy?"

"Why not through the golden prospects you have so eloquently depicted?" replied Saint-Prosper coldly.

"Why not indeed?" exclaimed the reassured manager. "Success will come; it must come. You have seen Constance but once. She lives in every character to her heart's core. How does she do it? Who can tell? It's inborn—a heritage to her!"

His voice sank low with emotion. "Yes," he murmured, shaking his head thoughtfully as though another image arose in his mind, "a heritage, a divine heritage!" But soon he looked up. "She's a brave girl!" he said. "When times were dark she would always smile encouragingly, and in the light of her clear eyes I felt anew the Lord would temper the wind to the shorn lamb."

"One, two, three, four," rang the great clock through the silent hall, and at its harsh clangor Barnes started.

"Bless my soul, the maids 'll be up and doing and find us here!" he exclaimed. "One last cup! To the success of the temperance drama!"

In a few moments they had parted for their respective chambers, and only the landlord was left downstairs. Now as he came from behind the bar, where he had been apparently dosing and secretly listening through the half opened door leading into the kitchen, he had much difficulty to restrain his laughter.

"That's a good one to tell Ezekiel," he muttered, turning out the lights and sweeping the ashes on the hearth to the back of the grate. "To the temperance drama!"

CHAPTER VI.

DOWN the hill, facing the tavern, the shadows of night were slowly withdrawn, ushering in the day of the players' leaving. A single tree at the very top, isolated from its sylvan neighbors, was bathed in the warm sunshine, receiving the earliest benediction of day. Down, down came the dark shade, pursued by the light, until the entire slope of the hill was radiant and the sad colored foliage flaunted in newborn gayety.

Returning from the stable, where he had been looking after his horse, the soldier stood for a moment before the inn, when a flower fell at his feet, and, glancing over his shoulder, he perceived Susan, who was leaning from her window. The venturesome rose, which had clambered as high as the second story, was gone, plucked, alas, by the wayward hand of a coquette. Saint-Prosper bowed and stooped for the aspiring but now hapless flower which lay in the dust.

"You have joined the chariot, I hear," said Susan.

"For the present," he replied.

"And what parts will you play?" she continued, with smiling inquisitiveness.

"None."

"What a pity! You would make a handsome lover." Then she blushed. "Lud! What am I saying? Besides"—maliciously—"I believe you have eyes for some one else. But remember"—shaking her finger and with a coquettish turn of the head—"I am an actress and therefore vain. I must have the best part in the new piece. Don't forget that, or I'll not travel in the same chariot with you." And Susan disappeared.

"Ah, Kate," she said a moment later, "what a fine looking young man he is!"

"Who?" drawled her sister.

"Mr. Saint-Prosper, of course."

"He is large enough," retorted Kate leisurely.

"Large enough! Oh, Kate, what a phlegmatic creature you are!"

"Fudge!" said the other as she left the chamber.

Entering the tavern, the soldier was met by the wiry old lady who bobbed into the breakfast room and explained the kind of part that fitted her like a glove, her prejudices being strong against modern plays.

"Give me dramas like 'Oriana,' 'The Rival Queens' or Webster's pieces," she exclaimed, quoting with much fire for her years:

"We are only like dead walls or vaulted graves!"

"And do not forget the 'heavy' in your piece!" called out Hawkes across the table. "Something you can dig your teeth in!"

"Nor the 'juvenile lead,'" chimed in the Celtic Adonis.

"Adonis makes a great hit in a small part," laughed Kate, appearing at the door. "'My lord, the carriage is waiting!'"

"My lady, your tongue is too sharp!" exclaimed Adonis, nettled.

"And put in a love scene for Adonis and myself," she continued, lastly floating into the room. "He is so fond of me it would not be like acting!"

This bantering was at length interrupted by the appearance of the chariot and the property wagon at the front door, ready for the journey. The rumbling of the vehicles, the resounding hoofs and the resonant voice of the stable boy awakened the young lord of the manor in his chamber above. He stretched himself sleepily, swore and again composed himself for slumber, when the noise of a property trunk thumping its way down the front stairs a step at a time galvanized him into life and consciousness.

"Has the world come to an end?" he muttered. "No; I remember. It's only the players taking their departure."

But, although he spoke carelessly, the bumping of boxes and slamming and banging of portable goods annoyed him more than he would confess. With the "crazy quilt," a patchwork of heptagons of different hues and patterns, around his shoulders, clothing him with all the colors of the rainbow, he sat up in bed, wincing at each concussion.

"I might as well get up," he exclaimed. "I'll see her once more—the perverse beauty!" And, tossing the kaleidoscopic covering viciously from him, he began to dress.

Meanwhile, as the time for their going drew near, mine host downstairs sped the parting guest with good cheer, having fared profitably by the patronage the players had brought to the inn, but his daughter, Arabella, looked sad and pensive. How weary, flat and stale appeared her existence now! With a lump in her throat and a pang in her heart she recklessly wiped her eyes upon the best parlor curtains when Barnes mounted to the box, as robust a stage driver as ever extricated a coach from a quagmire. The team, playful through long confinement, tugged at the reins, and Sandy, who was at the bits, occasionally shot through space like an erratic meteor.

The manager was flourishing his whip impatiently when Constance and Susan appeared, the former in a traveling costume of blue silk, a paletot of dark cloth and, after the fashion of the day, a bonnet of satin and velvet. Susan was attired in a jupe sweeping and immensely full—to be in style!—and jacket with sleeves of the pagoda form. The party seemed in high spirits as from his dormer window Manville, adjusting his attire, peered through the lattice over the edge of the moss grown roof and leaf clogged gutters and surveyed their preparations for departure. How well the rich color of her gown became the young girl! He had told himself white was her best adornment, but his opinion veered on the moment now, and he thought he had never seen her to better advantage, with the blue of her dress reappearing in the lighter shade above the dark paletot, in the lining of the bonnet and the bow of ribbons beneath her chin.

"On my word, but she looks handsome!" muttered the patroon. "Might sit for a Gainsborough or a Reynolds! What dignity! What coldness! All except the eyes! How they can lighten! But there's that adventurer with her," as the figure of the soldier crossed the yard to the property wagon. "No getting rid of him until the last moment!" And he opened the shutters wider, listening and watching more closely.

"Are you going to ride in the property wagon?" he heard Saint-Prosper ask.

"Yes; when I have a part to study I sometimes retire to the stage throne," she answered lightly. "I suppose you will ride your horse?"

Fat or Oil in the Blood

Do you know that fats, or oils, exist in the blood only in emulsified form? How are these fats emulsified? Well, if the stomach is in good order and the other digestive organs all right, they will do the work, otherwise the fats are not properly emulsified, and are therefore rejected by the blood and their food value lost. The importance of artificially emulsifying food-fats is therefore apparent.

In Ferrol not only is the oil thoroughly and scientifically emulsified, but it is amalgamated with phosphorized Iron so intimately that the whole is ready for instant absorption and the digestive organs are relieved from the greater part of their arduous duties.

Ferrol is the only perfect nutrient because it contains all the elements necessary to the building up of the whole system, is pleasant to take, and so easy to digest that nursing infants assimilate it readily.

ENGAGED.

Marriage is very largely an accident. In few cases do men or women set up a standard of manly or womanly excellence and choose by it. In most cases people become engaged as the result of propinquity rather than because of any deep rooted preference.

And so it often happens that the wife enters upon the obligations of maternity just as thoughtlessly as she entered on the marriage relation, because no one has warned her of the dangers she faces.

Thousands of women become invalids for lack of knowledge of themselves. It is to this large body of women that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes as a priceless boon, because it cures womanly ills.

"Favorite Prescription" establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

"After my first child was born," writes Mrs. Jordan Stout, of Fawcettgap, Frederick Co., Va., "my health was very poor for a long time, and last winter I was so bad with pain down in back I could hardly move without great suffering. My husband got me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and a vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets,' which I used as directed. In four days I was greatly relieved, and now, after using the medicine three months, I seem to be entirely well. I can't see why it is that there are so many suffering women when there is such an easy way to be cured. I know your medicines are the best in the world."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the favorite family laxative. One 'Pellet' a laxative, two 'Pellets' a cathartic dose.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

Deadly Catarrh

It Can Be Cured.

CATARRH is the beginning of more diseases than all other causes combined. It is capable of attacking most organs of the body. It is the prevailing plague, the foremost scourge of America. It hovers odiously over every city and pesties treacherously in every hamlet. Its vampire wings cast a dark shadow of despair over the length and breadth of the land. Its stealthy approach and lingering stay make it a dread to the physician and a pest to the patient. It changes the merry laugh of childhood to the wheezy breath of croup, and the song of the blushing maiden to the hollow cough of consumption. In its withering grasp the rounded arm of the fond wife and mother becomes gaunt and spectral and the healthy flush of manhood turns to the sallow, haggard visage of the invalid. Catarrh takes the place of conversation, speech gives way to spitting; the repulsive odors of chronic catarrh poison kisses; the thickened membranes bedim sight, impair hearing and destroy taste. Because of catarrh a cry of distress has gone out from many a household and the mildew of woe clings to numerous hearthstones.

CATARRH IN SOME FORM Catarrh at some stage lurks as an enemy in the slightest cough or cold and finishes its fiendish work in the "blighting white plague"—consumption. Few tissues, functions or organs of the body escape its ravages; muscles wither, nerves shatter and secretions are contaminated from its destroying presence. It devastates, destroys, devours and establishes a gloomy empire of misery and death. It is not only a filthy and disgusting disease, making the breath odious and repulsive, but if allowed to run, it in time becomes dangerous to life.

THE POISONOUS SECRETIONS following up the mucous tracts, get into the throat and injure the voice, into the head and impair hearing, into the stomach and produce dyspepsia, into the blood and become scrofula, into the respiratory organs and cause consumption.

NOT HALF THE BLIGHTING INFLUENCE of this disgusting and destructive disease has been told. So stubborn and difficult of cure is catarrh that to invent an efficient remedy for it has been the ambition of many aspiring physicians. Is it therefore any wonder that the multitude of people who have been cured by Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are lavish in their praise? That these tablets render the cure of catarrh a practical certainty is not only the testimony of people who have observed or used them, but many medical men declare it to be true.

IT HAS CURED THOUSANDS If you love health, a sweet breath and a clear head, you should try Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at once. For sale by all druggists, 50 cents per box.

GOOD BLOOD IS NO GOOD UNLESS CIRCULATED

A Sick Man mistakes his illness, or his Doctor does

He shows symptoms of consumption, or dyspepsia, or what not, because improper blood nourishment of lungs or liver has brought them on. In such cases look to the heart; unless it pumps rich red blood through the system, your specific doesn't reach the spot.

Dr. Agnew's Heart Cure sends the blood coursing through the veins as nature intended. It heals the heart and thus helps the health of every organ.

REV. L. W. SNOWDEN, of Eldertown, Pa., writes:—"For many years I suffered with organic heart disease. I have tried many physicians and taken numberless remedies. I purchased a bottle of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart and received almost instant relief. The choking, beating, thumping and palpitation have now almost entirely disappeared. The remedy is wonderful."

Keep clean inside as well as outside. Dr. Agnew's Liver Pills are the correct form. Cleanse and stimulate the digestive apparatus. Only 10c. for forty doses. 24

QUOTATIONS ON THE WALL STREET MARKET.

The Fluctuations of the Leading Stocks

The first few minutes trading showed a tendency to take profits, with, consequently, lower prices. There was no lead from London market to guide traders, but a good many floor operators were working for a reaction. Western wire-houses were advising customers that the demand created by short interest had been pretty well satisfied, and market would show effect of elimination of bear account. Bnr. was a firm feature and there is probably no need to look for any other reason than the earnings which are excellent. Banks lost to sub-treas 100,000 on Friday.

The bank statement to-day was quite favourable.

People have no idea until they come and see what a beautiful sight the Aylmer street greenhouses present at present. THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

HOCKEY.

A meeting of the Hockey Club executive was held last night in Dr. Wightman's office, when a number of matters in connection with the club were discussed. A request has been sent to the rink management for certain practice hours. New uniforms will have to be purchased for the players this season. The club colours, however, have not been chosen yet.

An effort is being made to arrange for a game with a fast out of town team either for Christmas or New Year's Day, and a game will probably be played between Christmas and New Year's in the O. H. A. series.

* * * *

It is understood that a plan is on foot to organize a Young Men's Guild Hockey League, along the lines of the baseball league, conducted in the summer. A meeting of representatives from the different guilds in town will probably be held in a few days to discuss the matter. It is thought that with the cop-operation of the six Young Men's Guilds in town a league could be formed which would arouse considerable interest in the game and afford the talent in the members to be developed.

* * * *

The Toronto World says: Port Hope is the latest place that has made arrangements to organize a young ladies' hockey team. A meeting of the feminine enthusiasts of that town will be held shortly when a team will be organized and arrangements made for the coming season. Cobourg and Peterborough ladies are also organizing teams. This ought to make quite a lively district and as each town possesses a goodly number of the fair sex who are expert skaters, some lively contests should result. There are more applications for the position of referee than there are for the secretaryship of the O. H. A., and the only way the young ladies can decide is to appoint a "referess."

* * * *

The Cardage Co's team is practising on the Little Lake every night now until arrangements are made with the Rink Co.

The Junior Boys' Guild of St. Andrew's Church met last evening and organized their hockey club for the coming season with the following officers:

Hon.-President.—Rev. J. G. Potter.
President.—Mr. J. S. Ferguson.
Sec.-Treas.—A. VanEvery.
Manager.—E. Reid.
Captain—Hall Rosborough.
Executive.—The above officers and V. Tully, F. Richardson, S. Laing, F. Hall, H. Darke.

The following item from the Toronto News is a story with a moral: "The management of the Mutual Street Rink have decided to make a long-wanted improvement. This season they will fit up a place for the timekeepers and the men who are ruled off during the game. There was no such place last season, and on more than one occasion the men were penalised longer than they should have been."

This is something which the rink management here should also attend to.

Bobcaygeon, Dec. 4th.—The annual meeting of the Bobcaygeon Hockey club was held in Mr. Taylor's office Tuesday evening and the following officers were elected: President, E. J. Woollard; Vice-president, R. Pearson; Sec.-Treasurer, Maurice Welsh; Capt., W. McIntyre; committee, H. S. Garlick, Geo. Johnston, Cleophas Lacombe, Jno. Cameron, Mr. Jos. White, of Toronto, was added to the list of Honourary Members and Messrs. Welsh and McIntyre were appointed delegates to attend the annual meeting of the Trent Valley League, held in Peterborough on Saturday, December 12th.

"Presented to John J. Irving, of Peterborough county, 1903, by the Toronto Daily Star, for the largest Black Bass for the Year. Length, 23 inches, girth 17 inches, weight 7 lbs."

The above is the inscription on the fine split bamboo rod, which Mr. Dumble has just received for Mr. Irving from the Toronto Star. Accompanying the rod is a reel and line, and altogether the rod is the reel thing, a credit both to the enterprise and sporting spirit of the Star and the piscatorial potentialities of Peterborough waters. May the Star continue to twinkle with increasing lustre.

HAIR GROWTH

Promoted by Shampoos of Cuticura Soap

And Dressings of Cuticura the Great Skin Cure

Purest, Sweetest, Most Effective Remedies for Skin, Scalp and Hair.

This treatment at once stops falling hair, removes crusts, scales and dandruff, destroys hair parasites, soothes irritated, itching surfaces, stimulates the hair follicles, loosens the scalp skin, supplies the roots with energy and nourishment, and makes the hair grow upon a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp when all else fails.

Millions of women now rely on Cuticura Soap assisted by Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure, for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening and soothing red, rough and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings and chafings, for annoying irritations, or too free or offensive perspiration, for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet and nursery.

Cuticura remedies are the standard skin cures and humour remedies of the world. Bathe the affected parts with hot water and Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without hard rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment freely, to allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and, lastly, in the severer forms, take Cuticura Resolvent, to cool and cleanse the blood. A single set is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring skin, scalp and blood humours, from pimples to scrofula, from infancy to age, when all else fails.

Cuticura Resolvent, Pills, in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27, Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chemical Corp., Sole Proprietors.

Linen is pre-historic. We read of "People and Fine Linen" in the Bible, which is proof of its existence in the reign of Pharaoh. Besides the exquisite patterns and styles of the beautiful Thread Drawn Work are exclusive, and cannot be duplicated.

The Christmas dinner table looks twice as appetizing when the linen is white as snow with Teneriffe Hand Made Linen. Fair always picks the best, and you have the choice of the best here, and marvellously cheap :—

TRIED TO KILL TWO

Frank Johnson's Attempt at Double Murder at Hamilton.

THEN BARBER TRIED SUICIDE

Accused His Assistant of Robbery and Put a Bullet in His Neck—Wound Serious, But Man Will Likely Recover—Other Man Slightly Wounded in Hand—Saved By His Thick Skull.

Hamilton, Dec. 7.—Frank Johnson, 124 South John street, tried to commit a double murder and suicide Saturday night about 11.50. He fired five shots altogether. He had been drinking for several days. William Howard was conducting his shop for him, and he had engaged another colored man named Nathaniel Moore, who boards at 199 North Catharine street. Johnson came staggering in about midnight, accused Moore of cheating him out of part of the receipts and declared he would run his own business in the future.

Before Moore could make any reply, Johnson fired at him and the bullet hit him on the neck, ploughed through the flesh and lodged in his shoulder. Johnson then turned his attention to Howard, who was lying on a sofa in the hall. Howard implored him not to shoot, and threw up his hands. The drunken man sent two bullets in his direction. One took a little bit of flesh out from between his thumb and finger, but did no great harm. The other went wild.

Johnson went back into the kitchen, and turned the weapon on himself. He held the pistol to his forehead and pulled the trigger. His thick skull saved his life. With unsteady hand he took aim again, and the bullet grazed his shoulder, tearing out a piece of his shirt. He then threw the revolver behind the door in the belief that he had emptied all its chambers. That was lucky for Constables Barrett and Hassenfelt, who came rushing into the house with drawn revolvers. Johnson cursed his luck, and swore that they would never have left his place alive if he had any more bullets.

Moore, who is a man 50 years of age, was helped to No. 3 police station and from there to the City Hospital in the patrol wagon. Johnson followed in the ambulance.

Although Johnson held the pistol close to the top of the forehead, the bullet did not penetrate the skull, but simply made a tear about an inch long and bounded off again. Moore's wound is much more serious. The bullet entered the right side of the neck, and the doctors have not been able to locate it, but he will likely pull through all right. Johnson's wife says he threatened to shoot her last Sunday. She hid the revolver, but was forced to hand it over to him again.

Decapitated Daughter.

Florence, Italy, Dec. 7.—At Eboli, near here, a peasant woman named Laucia Mirra, decapitated her daughter. The woman, whose motive was jealousy, did not display the least regret for her act when she was arrested by the police. The girl was sixteen years old.

Traced Footprints in Snow

Morristown, N.J., Dec. 7.—Captured after an all-night pursuit by a posse which trailed him over the mountains by his footprints in the snow, Frank Bectas, a Hungarian miner, was locked up here yesterday, charged with killing Minnie Root, the ten-year-old daughter of Daniel Root, a mine foreman at Hibernia, about 20 miles from this place.

Beat Policeman With His Own Club.

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 7.—After seriously wounding two men, an unknown burglar yesterday succeeded in escaping. Emil Hettig, an engineer, was struck in the face with a hammer, and Patrolman John W. Casey was struck over the head with an iron bar and beaten into insensibility with his own club. Casey's condition is serious.

Statement of Zion's Assets and Liabilities Causes a Sharp Turn to Receivers in Possession and Creditors.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—By a stroke of diplomacy, John Alexander Dowie has established harmony between Zion, its receivers and its creditors in and out of it. He proposes to settle with his immediate creditors, to arrange with others on a reasonable time basis and to end the receivership.

At a conference between the attorneys representing the heaviest creditors and Jacob Newman, attorney for the receivers, Dowie showed the lawyers a statement setting forth Zion's assets and liabilities. He declared he valued Zion's estate at $14,000,000 above all liabilities. He exhibited large orders for lace and candy. He said neither the lace nor the candy factory could supply its orders. He showed an order for 75 carloads of candy from a Cincinnati firm. He showed a draft for $50,000 from a wealthy well-wisher, and declared he could draw for $200,000 more on one of Zion's friends in Wisconsin.

On this showing he offered to settle all urgent claims in cash and to put Zion on a cash basis in all future dealings with the outside world. With his heaviest creditors out of the way, he said his debts demanding immediate payment would not amount to more than $150,000. Samuel Stevenson's judgment notes for $100,000 are not yet due.

Dr. Dowie's presentation of figures and his offers of settlement were satisfactory to the attorneys. His plan will be submitted to-day to a meeting of the receivers, their attorneys and the attorneys for his creditors, and it is believed will be accepted. In that event receivers and all creditors will join hands with Dr. Dowie in a plea to Judge Kohlsaat to dismiss the pending litigation and permit Dr. Dowie freedom to gather funds and settle obligations.

TO PURCHASE GUNS

Sir Frederick Borden's Mission to England.

FIELD, SIEGE AND MAXIM GUNS

Every City Corps to Have a Maxim Company—Of Field Artillery There Will Probably Be Ten or a Dozen Batteries—Precautions Taken to Secure None But the Best—Conference on Militia Bill.

Ottawa, Dec. 7.—The visit of Sir Frederick Borden to England is for a double purpose. Not only will the Minister of Militia confer with the War Office in regard to the provisions of the militia bill under which it is proposed to appoint a Canadian officer to command the Canadian militia, but Sir Frederick will also purchase field artillery and siege and Maxim guns. Of field artillery there will probably be ten or a dozen batteries. As to Maxims, enough will likely be bought to enable a Maxim company to be formed in connection with every city corps. At present the number of Maxim guns in the country would not exceed fifteen. Doubtless the Minister would prefer to make his purchases through the War Office, but if that institution cannot guarantee the delivery of the guns within reasonable time the artillery will be got outside. Canada wants none but the best, and in order to insure that the guns shall be up to requirements Lieut.-Colonel Rutherford, Assistant Adjutant-General of Artillery, is accompanying the Minister.

CHINA WAKING UP.

To Immediately Organize Large Military Forces—Expulsion By Russians.

London, Dec. 7.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Tokio says that, according to a despatch from Pekin, the Chinese Government contemplates the raising of an army of 100,000 men to protect the Province of Chi Li in the event of hostilities. The Pekin despatch further states that Hoo Wei Teh, the Chinese Minister at St. Petersburg, has telegraphed to Pekin that Russia is disposed to pursue a peaceful policy.

The Daily Mail's Tien Tsin correspondent says that 1,000 Russians expelled the Chinese officials from the Treasury at Mukden and installed themselves in their places.

ELECTIONS COMING SOON.

Hon Raymond Prefontaine Gives a Hint at Montreal.

Montreal, Dec. 7.—Hon. Raymond Prefontaine, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, returned yesterday from a trip of inspection to Prince Edward Island, and left later for Ottawa. In the course of an interview he said that the call for a general election would almost certainly come within six months. When asked if it would not be found inconvenient to carry on a winter campaign in some quarters, he replied that it might, but he was afraid it would have to be faced just the same, and that those who had to take part would get used to it.

ADMINISTERING THE LIQUOR LAW.

From all parts of the Province, says the Globe, reports come of increasing activity in the enforcement of the regulations of the liquor license law. There seems to be method and purpose in the movement. The officials in county after county and city after city are having their zeal quickened. According to reports from local newspapers in various parts of the Province, a "dry" Saturday night and Sunday is becoming the rule. The hotelkeepers are finding it to their interest to observe the law, and it is being proved that, granted competent officials, the law can be enforced.

One of the obstacles in the way of administering the license law is the difficulty of securing competent officials. The remuneration is small compared with the disabilities of the position. In some places social and business interests make the duty of inspectors extremely irksome, and often the man needed for such service can find more congenial and more profitable employment for his energies, alertness, and force of character. While fault may be found with the conduct of some of these officials, justice demands a more considerate view, for in many cases the work has been done as efficiently as could reasonably be expected.

A growing number of hotelkeepers are beginning to learn that systematic defiance of the regulations of the license law is one of the elements in every popular campaign for more restrictive legislation. It is not the prohibitionists alone who are so steadily seeking the curtailment of the liquor traffic. Thousands of non-abstainers and thousands who are opposed to prohibitions altogether are growingly impressed by the dangers of intemperance, and are impatient at the disregard of the law on the part of many liquor dealers. If the best judgment of the people of this Province, beaten out through generations of experience, expresses itself in a law prohibiting the sale of liquor during certain hours, and if license to sell at all other hours involves a contract not to sell during those prohibited hours, the holders of such license are bound to observe their part of the contract just as truly as the state is bound to secure to them the privileges their license provides. The logical consequence of violation of such a contract on the part of the license holders is not a fine, but the immediate cancellation of the license. The time is coming when there will be no alternative to that logical consequence.

The present situation is indicative of the determination of the Government to secure stricter enforcement of the present law and to prepare the way for a better. From all classes, liquor dealers, officials and observant temperance people, the testimony comes, supported by ample evidence, illustrating and proving the determination of the Government. The Provincial Secretary is earning and will receive the frank commendation of all law abiding citizen for the business like and thoroughly capable manner in which he is grappling with and removing some of the chief difficulties in the way of liquor law enforcement.

THE INDUSTRIAL SITUATION.

Following the news of closing down of factories and reductions of wages in various parts of the United States last week, comes further information along the same lines. The International Harvester Company of Chicago, is trying to save $5,000,000 per year by the laying off of 7,500 of its 19,000 employees; 3,000 of these being in the Deering division and 1,500 in the McCormick division, the others being stationed at the mills at Milwaukee, Springfield, and elsewhere. A despatch from Boston, Mass., of November 30th, stated that the wages of some 32,000 cotton textile operatives were reduced on that day, this making the total number of New England workmen to have their pay cut down this fall, 64,000, and since then about 11,000 more have been reduced in New Bedford. The cut averages ten per cent. In Rhode Island practically every cotton mill has adopted the new schedule, about 20,000 hands being affected, and the new rates equalling a loss of income of something like $20,000 weekly. Apparently no very serious protest is being made against the reductions. Several of the paper mills in New York State and New England have closed down, though, it is believed, for only a short time. Unusually low water in the streams is given as the cause, though it is divined that owners of factories are glad to seize hold of an excuse to reduce their stocks, owing to trade conditions. At Patterson, N.J., a ten per cent. reduction in wages went into effect at the Passaic Steel Company's plant. The Boston Iron and Steel Works, at McKeesport, Pa., have also announced an indefinite shut-down. Against the above may be offset by the return to work of a number of employees at the Ohio works of the Carnegie Company, at Youngstown, which had been closed down for some weeks to reduce the output of pig-iron; also, there are reported indications that very shortly practically all the iron and steel factories in Braddock, Homestead, and other parts of Pennsylvania, will be working double time with a full complement of hands, after several more or less protracted periods of idleness.

It is very gratifying to be able to note that the employees of the Dominion Iron & Steel Company, at Sydney, C. B., who, it was reported, were planning to strike in consequence of the recently enforced wage reduction, have thought better of it. A mass-meeting was held on the 30th ult., at which this commonsense decision was arrived at. The citizens of the town generally, to whom a strike would have proved a disaster of the worst kind, did a good deal towards bringing about an adjustment. The company on their part offered to reduce the rent of their houses to the men by 50 per cent., and to supply them with coal at cost, two propositions which were gratefully accepted.—Monetary Times.

THE CIRISIS OF TRUTH.

Under this heading the Kingston Whig gives utterance to some truths which may be applicable to other towns than that in which they were published. It says:—

"Van Dein, one of the young bandits now under arrest in Chicago for murder, makes a sorry confession. It is that while his mother devoted much of her time to organizing 'clubs' to keep boys from smoking, drinking, lurid literature and other evils, he was running wild, and getting the education that has headed him for the gallows. There is a good deal of Van Dein's experience in the world. His mother is not the only woman who has made the mistake of caring for other people's sons while her own went unchecked to destruction. Is Kingston without evidence on this point? The number of boys at large about the streets, and in places of doubtful resort, at night, very large. Parental restraint seems to be missing. Later on some people will wonder why their boys did not turn out well. A little enquiry about the boys when they are young will avoid a great deal of worry and humiliation when they come to man's estate.

The Solar Plexus.

The largest nerve centre in the sympathetic nervous system, is situated just back of the stomach, and supplied nervous energy, the vital force of the human body, to the stomach, heart, lungs, kidneys, liver, etc. By creating more force Dr. Chase's Nerve Food directly aids the solar plexus in supplying the power which runs the machinery of digestion and so cures nervous dyspepsia, headache, dizzy spells and bodily weakness.

SMELTING IRON BY ELECTRICITY.

A Matter of the First Importance to the Dominion.

If Practicable it Would aid Materially in Development of Canadian Iron Ore Fields—Progress Made in Europe.

The Toronto Globe has a special despatch from Ottawa as follows.—"The Minister of the Interior contemplates sending a commissioner to Europe to visit the places where the electric smelting of iron ore is carried on, and so report whether the several processes would be commercially feasible if adopted in Canada. The question is of the very greatest importance to Canada. There are in Ontario and Quebec immense deposits of iron ore, which at present cannot be developed owing to the cost of fuel for smelting. It is true that in the west, and also in the Maritime Provinces, coal is found in abundance, but the cost of transportation to Ontario or Quebec renders its use impossible in those Provinces. Hence the problem of cheap fuel or economical treatment has to be solved before any progress can be made in the utilization of the iron ore with which Providence has so bountifully endowed this country. The problem seems to be on the eve of solution. If there is no coal in either Ontario or Quebec, any number of water powers exist. This means that electric energy can be easily developed, so cheaply as to permit of iron ores being smelted at a profit. But this is not all. Where smelting is done by electricity, deleterious ingredients, which are always present in coal or coke, are got rid of, and a purer pig iron and a better class of steel are obtained. Furthermore, in the case of blast furnaces, it is impossible to reach such a high degree of temperature as will enable use to be made of the basic slags, which are necessary for retaining titanium and phosphorus. On the other hand, by the electric process of smelting, ores containing as much as 12 per cent. of titanium have been turned out free of that material.

PROGRESS IN EUROPE.

"Accordingly, it does not require any demonstration to show the immense possibilities of electric smelting in Canada. In Europe considerable progress has been made in the matter of electric smelting. The position of Italy is somewhat similar to our own. There they have water-power, but no coal. The Italian Government have given considerable attention to the question, and have spent considerable sums of money in experiments, under the direction of Mr. Stassano. These have been favourably reported on. Again, there is in operation at Livot, France, what is know nas the Keller process. A second process in use in the French republic is the Harmet system. At Gysinge, in Sweden, steel is made from scrap and pig iron by electric process. This mode of treatment is, therefore, no longer an experiment, but an actually demonstrated fact. The question to be determined now is: Is the process commercially feasible? If it is, Canada is on the eve of a remarkable development of its iron resources. Judgment must be suspended, however, until a thorough inquiry has been made into the matter by experts. It would not be surprising if Hon. Mr. Sifton were to choose Dr. Haanel, the Superintendent of Mines for the Dominion, as one of the experts in question."

ABUNDANT HARVEST FOR MANITOBA FARMERS.

Interesting Letter From Former Resident of Peterborough County.

Farmers are Prosperous and Contented —Western Country Still has Room for Millions.

Mr. E. P. W. McIlmoyl, sends an interesting letter from Manitoba, which is published below:—

Some time has elapsed since I have written, and although your paper contains items of interest pertaining to the West, from time to time, I think that many of your readers will be glad to read even more about our Western land, especially when written by one who lives in the midst of Western agricultural activity.

The recent harvest was a peculiar one in many respects. In the midst of cutting there were heavy rains. Then, before all the grain was in shock, a heavy fall of snow visited us, covering up the shocks and completely destroying all standing grain. It is difficult to estimate the loss caused by the wet, frost and snow, but when you estimate a loss from 3 to 12 cents on every bushel of the millions of bushels of wheat raised in Manitoba and the Territories you at once see the enormous loss. Notwithstanding our heavy loss, through the inclemency of the weather, we have had a bountiful harvest, and even more money will be realized by the farmers of the plains than was realized in 1902.

There are now so many threshing outfits in our country, that the season is becoming very short, and to the great benefit of the farmer, all grain is threshed, and a great deal of it marketed before the snow flies.

This year there was comparatively little No. 1 hard wheat in the West, and indeed most of the wheat has graded No. 2 Northern, or two grades less than No. 1 hard. On the other hand the prices paid this fall have been much better than during the last three years—in the neighbourhood of 70 cents being paid for No. 1 wheat.

This year about 50,000,000 bushels of wheat were raised as compared with 52,000,000 in 1902. Many people of the East have a very erroneous idea of the size of Manitoba and the Territories. Some have the idea that the West is getting crowded, and that very soon the farmers will be cramped in his operations. We have at present half a million souls on an area capable of maintaining from twenty to thirty million people. We have now three million acres of land under cultivation, out of an area of two hundred and forty million acres! Are we cramped? Is our western country crowded?

Settlers are pouring in by the hundreds, and we are glad to see them come. Since Canada has been placed in the eyes of the world, as our present Federal Government has placed it, we are getting our share of immigrants, and for the most part desirable citizens. Americans are crossing the border and building homes for themselves, on our rich and at the same time cheap lands. The Eastern Provinces are contributing largely to our population. The Mother Land no longer regards us as the "Land of the Snow," and thousands of the hardier working classes of Englishmen are flocking to our shores. The Galacians, Mennonites, Swedes, Norwegians, and Finns are all proving good settlers.

During November we had a short spell of rather cold weather, but of late the weather has been rather mild. At present (Dec. 1st) there is a little snow on the ground, but the highways are in excellent condition and the farmers are busy hauling the remainder of their grain to market.

There is considerable political activity in the west. Already both parties are holding organization meetings, and in a quiet way preparing for the federal elections, which many believe will be held sometime during the present month.

DO NOT WEAR A LONG FACE.

It is a Great Handicap in All Business and Social Relations.

The man who looks as if he had lost his last friend is in no danger of being crushed by the jam of new ones unless he "cheers up." People are not going out of their way nowadays to associate with the man of mournful and melancholy appearance. They are afraid he will tell them his troubles and they steer clear of him as they all have plenty of their own.

The most universal cause of the forlorn and hopeless appearance today is dyspepsia. It unfits a man for every duty of life and causes him to become despondent and gloomy and necessarily his looks do not belie his feelings. He appears cast down and dejected and becomes a burden to himself and humanity in general.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the dyspeptic's certain relief. They do the work that his stomach is unable to do and by relieving that organ of its burdens, permit it to regain its health and strength and again become active and useful in its functions. They contain all the essential ingredients that enter into the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they actually take up the work and do it just as a healthy, sound stomach would.

By this means a man can go right ahead with his work and eat enough to keep him in proper working condition. His system is not deprived of its necessary nourishment as it it in the case of the "starvation cure" or the employment of some of the first class chicken foods now on the market. Starvation, even if it were a good thing, could not be continued long enough to effect a cure; for a disordered and worn out stomach is not going to become strong and healthy in two or three days.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets act naturally because they contain natural digestives. The principal component parts are aseptic pepsin, malt diastase and other ingredients with like properties that do the work regardless of the condition of the stomach. There is no unnatural or violent disturbance of the digestive organs as the result of their action. In fact the existence of the stomach is entirely forgotten, as soon as they have had time to begin their operations. They also possess very curative and healing properties and assist the stomach in getting well, while relieving it of its work. They perform the duties of both nurse and physician.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box, and there is very little danger of any druggist trying to sell you anything else that is just as good. They are so well established and have done so much good in the world that their name has become a household word, so the usual warning, "Accept no substitutes," is unnecessary in the case of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Tendency Toward Red.

Certain tints of red are having a great vogue, though other shades are considered in bad taste, says the New York Press. The purplish tinge is fashionable, but the pure vermilion seldom is worn. The most darling frocks in cerise and plum color are worn in the street.

THE FISCAL FIGHT.

London Daily News Asks Questions Regarding Hon. George E. Foster—The British Shipping Trade.

London, Dec. 7.—(C.A.P.)—The Leicester Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution declaring that the farmers must have a food tax besides retaliation.

The Parliamentary Committee of the Co-operative Congress protests against food taxes as their own societies produce £2,800,000 worth of flour, and Chamberlain's proposal would add a cost to the purchaser of at least half a million pounds. The tax proposed would add £800,000 to the cost of dairy products and £300,000 to meat. Ten per cent. on manufactured articles would seriously hit the co-operative movement, and Lancashire and Yorkshire especially.

Mr. Pease, M.P., who has lately been visiting Canada, says Canadians are not anxious that the Motherland should place a tariff on foreign articles. The average duty on British goods is 17 per cent., and on United States goods 13 per cent. Thus the Americans are getting a preference over the British Empire.

Hope From Canada's Example.

W. McConnell, chairman of the Monmouthshire Steel Company, says trade is suffering from dumping, and the only help is a tax like Canada's surtax on German steel.

A legal correspondent of The Standard, discussing international law in time of war, argues that protection and the colonial preference would make war with a maritime power more dangerous to England than free trade. With the bad outlet for the Canadian wheat field it would be dangerous to place complete reliance on the Canadian grain supply.

Chamberlain's Opponent Withdraws.

Mr. Davis, labor candidate in the west division of Birmingham, has withdrawn his opposition to Chamberlain.

Secretary Stevens of the Birmingham Operative Tin Plate Workers Society says the unemployed number only one per cent., and wages are better than ever before.

Lord Aberdeen on arriving at Edinburgh Sunday from London, and not finding a hansom, drove to his club in a milk wagon.

Earl Lytton, free trade Unionist, has refused a donation to the Middlesex Conservative Association on the ground of Premier Balfour's complete agreement with Chamberlain.

Increase of England's Shipping.

W. Orders, proprietor of Orders Steamship Company, speaking at Newport, said that, owing to free coal and imports the shipping of the country had more than doubled in the last thirty years. At the present time England owned more than half the total tonnage of the world.

The News says: "Mr. Foster, before returning to Canada, remarked that forty millions of people were hard to permeate with adequate ideas of the Empire. We rather suggest that twelve millions of colonists are hard to permeate with adequate ideas of the Motherland."

LIFESAVER'S BRAVE DEEDS.

Ferryman Went Under Ice and Saved Two Lives at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Dec. 7.—David Seguin, who operates the ferry between Gatineau Point and Rockliffe Park, saved the lives of two children of Joseph Letemp's of the Point on Saturday afternoon. The children, a boy and a girl, aged 9 and 6 years, went through the ice. Seguin rushed to the rescue and jumping into 30 feet of frigid water went under the ice and brought the boy out. He then jumped again and brought the girl to the surface. Both children were unconscious, but responded to medical treatment. This makes the second time Seguin saved the boy's life, and he has saved others.

SHOT HIMSELF DEAD

LEFT NOTE OF INSTRUCTIONS

Gave Father's Address in Quebec, the Combination of the Safe, Stated He Was Perfectly Sane, and That He Had Shot Himself, But Gave No Cause For the Act—Fred Bush Suicides.

Tilbury, Dec. 7.—Mr. McNaughton, manager of the Merchants' Bank of this place, committed suicide yesterday about 4.30 p. m. by shooting himself through the heart with a revolver. He had been here only about three or four weeks, coming from Gananoque, where he held the position of manager of the Merchants' Bank. His parents live in Quebec.

He was boarding at the International Hotel, and yesterday asked the proprietor to make out his bill, as he intended going away. Mr. Macdougall, teller of the Merchants' Bank, was reading in his room just above the bank when the shot was fired. He immediately ran down and tried the door, but found it locked with the key on the inside. He broke a window in order to get in and found Mr. McNaughton lying on the floor just behind the teller's office.

He ran out for the doctor, and had him there before five minutes had elapsed, but the man was dead. The doctor pronounced death to have been instantaneous. Mr. McNaughton had just come in from a walk. He went direct to the bank and wrote a note to Mr. Macdougall, giving him his father's address, and the combination of the safe, and stated that he had shot himself and was perfectly sane. No cause for the act is known yet.

Nearly every night he would go to the bank and walk up and down from about 10.30 until 12, as though he had something on his mind.

An inquest will be held to-day.

Fred. Bush Commits Suicide.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Dec. 7.—Frederick Bush, an unmarried man, about 40 years of age, living alone, was found dead in his home here about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Not having been seen since Thursday last the neighbors becoming alarmed notified Chief of Police Reid, who forced an entrance, and on making an investigation found Bush lying on the bed dead, a bloody razor on the window near by and a pool of blood on the floor. A small wound on the left arm showed where an artery had been cut, and the man slowly bled to death. It is supposed that brooding over financial affairs prompted Bush to take his own life. The coroner, on being notified, decided an inquest unnecessary, as all indications pointed to suicide. The deceased is survived by a mother and sister, who reside in Toronto, and who have been notified.

FELL INTO CANYON.

Young Man of Victoria, B.C., Meets With a Sad Death.

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 7.—J. A. MacIntosh arrived in the city last evening from Seymour Creek, on the north shore of Burrard Inlet, and reported that while on a prospecting expedition Saturday afternoon his companion, a youth named Wm. Moyes, slipped off a precipice at the head of the Seymour Canyon, falling some 300 or 400 feet to the rocks below. MacIntosh searched all the afternoon, but was unable to find Moyes, and then darkness coming on, had to camp for the night. In the morning he started for here to get assistance. A search party left last evening, but it is feared that Moyes cannot be alive,, as even if the fall did not kill him outright, his injuries and his exposure would probably prove fatal. Moyes was only 19 years of age. His family reside here.

ure would probably prove fatal. Moyes was only 19 years of age. His family reside her.

G.T.R. Brakeman Killed.

Barrie, Dec. 7.—A fatal accident occurred in the Allandale yards at 2 o'clock Saturday morning by which Brakeman Edward Lyon, second son of Capt. O. H. Lyon, was the victim. He was stooping to fix the air brake connections, when a yard engine coming in on the same track struck the other engine. The unfortunate man was crushed through the chest and had both arms taken off. Deceased was 30 years of age and leaves a widow and a child six months old.

Brother Shot Brother.

Belleville, Dec. 7.—Stanley Archer, a seven-year-old boy of Frankford, was accidentally shot by his brother Friday afternoon, and died at the hospital here Saturday morning. The elder lad was shooting at a sparrow with a rifle, and just as he pulled the trigger Stanley stepped out from behind a tree, where he had been unknown to his brother, the bullet striking the little fellow in the lower part of the throat, taking a downward course and lodging in the backbone.

Three Killed.

Worcester, Mass., Dec. 7.—The "owl" train, running between Boston and New York, ran into the rear end of a freight train at the east end of the freight yards. Conductor McGrath, of the freight, who was in the caboose, was killed. Two freight brakemen are missing.

STRUCK ON FERRYLAND HEAD.

Norwegian Vessel Founders on Newfoundland Rocks and All Lost.

St. John's, Nfld., Dec. 7.—An unknown square-rigged vessel, believed to be a Norwegian craft, struck on Ferryland Head, Cape Race, during a furious storm at midnight Saturday, and every soul aboard perished. One body was washed ashore yesterday morning, but bore nothing which could possibly lead to its identification, except a gold ring marked with the initials "J. E." Portions of the wreck also drove ashore bearing the letters "Terreas," "Levekahyt," "Bestr" and "Kukal." The vessel struck at the foot of a steep cliff and hung on the rocks for a short period. Residents were unable to assist the crew, as no boat could live in the sea which was running, and nobody could reach them from the hilltops.

Lost From the Tug.

LIFTING OF GLENCOE CURSE.

Late Earl of Stair First With Three Sons Since Massacre.

London, Dec. 7.—The late Earl of Stair was descended from the first earl, who was mainly responsible for the terrible massacre of the Macdonalds of Glencoe in 1692, in which his three stalwart sons participated. A curse was pronounced against him that no future earl should have three sons until his crime was expiated, and in derision he tied up certain valuable property so that it should be inherited only by the third son of his successors. Of the nine earls since then, one had two sons, one had one and the remainder had no sons at all until the earl just dead, who had four. Col. Dalyrymple, his third son, came in for the property, with all its accumulated interest.

FIRE ON GRAIN BOAT.

Str. Owens' 80,000 Bushels of Wheat May Be Total Loss.

Sturgeon Bay, Wis., Dec. 7.—With flames bursting from every hatch, and fire roaring through her upper works, the steamer J. Emory Owens was towed into Sturgeon Bay Canal Saturday night. Although it may not be necessary to scuttle the Owens, her cargo of 80,000 bushels of wheat will probably be a total loss. The Owens, bound from Manitowoo to Buffalo, had just headed away on the last long run of the year when fire started in the boiler-room. The loss on the cargo and ship will approximate $100,000.

Feeble Because of Drink.

Victoria, B.C., Dec. 7.—In the Hopper-Dunsmuir will case Saturday, evidence taken by a commission at San Francisco was read, in which Ralph Burnett, L. A. Folsom and Frederick Baumgartener, bell boys at the Grand Hotel, told of heavy drinking on the part of the late Alexander Dunsmuir. Mrs. J. E Jacques, seamstress employed by Mrs. Dunsmuir, from 1895 to 1898, gave evidence. Dunsmuir was feeble in condition because of excessive drinking.

No Food For 14 Days.

Newport News, Va., Dec. 7.—Self-imprisoned in the hold of an ocean frighter fourteen days, without food or water, was the experience of Robert Leslie, 30 years old, a stowaway, had to relate when he was rescued in an almost dying condition yesterday. Leslie slipped on board the British steamer Rappanhannock, Captain Buckingham, while the vessel was loading at Liverpool two weeks ago. When found he presented a pitiable sight. He weighed only 60 pounds, and was too weak to raise himself. Leslie's weight when he secreted himself at Liverpool was 140 pounds.

Panama Plotters Deported.

Colon, Dec. 7.—Through a letter, the Panama Government has discovered what is alleged to have been a plot against the life of Gen. Huertas, Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the Republic of Panama, and an effort on the part of a few army officers to persuade the garrison at Panama to revolt. The alleged plotters were brought under guard to Colon, and shipped hence to Port Limon, Costa Rica. One of them is a colonel, two are majors, and the fourth is the adjutant of Gen. Huertas.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Norah McMahon, a Former Otonabee Resident Dead.

It is with regret that the death of a former resident of Peterborough is announced in the person of Mrs. Timothy McMahon, whose maiden name was Norah O'Brien.

The deceased was born in the County of Tipperary, Ireland, 71 years years ago, and came to Canada when but a year old. She was married in 1848 to Mr. Timothy McMahon, and took up residence in Otonabee, afterwards removing to Mount Pleasant, Mich, where she buried her husband and son, and then spent the remainder of her life in her late home, Neilsville, Wis., where she died on Monday, November 30th.

Mrs. McMahon was a highly respected lady; her hospitality and generous disposition won for her a large circle of friends. She was a practical pious Roman Catholic, and leaves to mourn her death nine of a family. She was an aunt of Rev. Father John O'Brien of the Cathedral, and Rev. Father Fitzpatrick of Enniscore, is a cousin of the deceased. The family are Mrs. Wm. Young, Chili, Wis.; Mrs. T. Coughlin, Neilsville, Wis.; Mrs Jer. Coughlin, Ashburnham; Mrs. Hugh McCormick, Mount Pleasant, Mich.; Mrs. Geo. Trogner, Neilsville, Wis.; and Timothy and Michael, of Rib Lake, Wis.; Matthew and Edward, Neilsville, and one sister, Mrs. Edward Conroy, Ashburnham The deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved friends.

NOT AS BADLY BURNED AS WAS EXPECTED.

Mr. L. B. Ramsden's Injuries Are Not Likely to Prove Serious.

The many friends of Mr. L. B. Ramsden, who was rather severely burned by the short-circuit of an electric current on Thursday last, will be pleased to learn that he is less seriously burned about the face than was at first thought. His hand however, is very badly injured and will take some time to heal. When his recovery is sufficiently advanced he will go to his home in Port Colborne, where he expects to spend the Christmas tide.

THE CHURCHES.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

The pastor, Rev. J. G. Potter, preached yesterday at St. Andrew's church at both services. The choir sang for the morning anthem "Sweet is Thy Mercy," Miss Miller taking the solo. After the sermon Miss Miller also sang a solo. In the evening service the anthem was "How Long Wilt Thou Forget Me," the contralto solo being taken by Miss Pedlar and a duet by Miss Miller and Mrs. Kerr. During the offertory, "That will be Glory" was sung as a quartette unaccompanied by Miss Miller, soprano; Mrs. P. Kerr, alto; Mr. Lloyd, bass, and Mr. D. Potter, tenor.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.

Rev. Fred Sawers, M.A., of Trinity College School, Port Hope, preached at both services yesterday, his sermons being masterly expositions of simply Gospel truth. At the evening service, the choir sang Christopher Mark's "Now the Day is Over," Mr. J. Legg taking the tenor solo.

At both services of St. Luke's church yesterday, special hymns for those at sea were sung, for Mrs. R. Hamilton and Miss Hamilton, who are on their way home from Germany.

GEORGE STREET METHODIST.

Rev. J. N. Clarry, of Millbrook, preached in George street church yesterday at both services, his sermons being much enjoyed. The choir sang in the morning, "O Clap Your Hands Together." At the evening service the anthem was, "Hast Thou Not Known?" while for the offertory, "Softly Now the Light of Day."

Christmas Fruit.

All kinds of dried fruits are now in great demand for the approaching holiday season. E. F. Mason & Co. have the largest and best assorted stock to be found anywhere and you are welcome to inspect and compare quality and prices. Crescent brand raisins and currants are superior to all others. 2d130

The Mission Band of St. John's Church will hold a Sale of Christmas Novelties, Fancy and Useful Articles, on Tuesday, Dec. 8th, from 4 until 9 p.m., in St. John's School House.

A NEW OPERA HOUSE.

The question of a new opera house for Peterborough is assuming special importance as the entertainment season closes in. It is not worth the while to point out again, as has previously been done in these columns, the urgent need of an opera house for Peterborough. The people require amusement, and if amusement of the proper kind is not provided, the young, especially, will seek forms of entertainment that are not so moral or wholesome. We see in Toronto papers advertisements of theatrical and other companies, which could easily be secured for Peterborough, if we had a suitable opera house. The need of an opera house should all the more easily be met when one recalls the probability that an enterprise of that kind would, in addition to removing the reproach of backwardness which the town now labours under, be a profitable investment, under proper management. It must be that this town possesses a sufficient number of enterprising citizens to undertake the work of providing an opera house for Peterborough. If some one would make an opening, no doubt practical co-operation would follow. It is to be hoped that appeal to the public spirit of our citizens, will not be fruitless. Let us adapt the good, sound British motto — "What we need, we'll have."

HE LEAVES TOWN FOR CHATHAM, ONT.

Mr. Sid. Rogers Departs To-morrow—Is a Talented Musician.

Mr. Sidney Rogers, a talented member of the 57th Regimental Band, and for several years a member of a regimental band in the Imperial service, will leave town to-morrow for Chatham, Ont., where he has secured a position. During his residence in Peterborough he has been the leader of the All Saint's orchestra, the success of which organization is largely due to his personal supervision. He also took charge of the violin and mandolin class at the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Rogers is now well known to Peterborough audiences, although his stay in town has been quite a short one, and the absence of his name from concert programmes will, it is felt, be a regretted loss to the music-loving public.

WILLIAM MOORE KILLED BY TRAIN

A Toronto man met Death While on his way Home.

The Toronto Star has the following account of the death in Toronto of the father of Mr. L. J. Moore, of the Collegiate Institute staff. Mr. Moore is in Toronto to-day attending his father's funeral:—

"Wm. Moore, a carpenter, aged 65, and living at 99 Perth avenue, was killed by a train at the Bloor street crossing last night at 6 o'clock.

"After he had finished work his wife despatched him to the butcher shop to get some meat. While returning over the crossing he was struck by a south bound train. When the train was stopped Moore was dead.

"The body was taken to the Parkdale station, and from thence in the patrol wagon to the morgue. The body was not identified until Mrs. Moore went to the butcher shop to see why her husband had not returned, and there learned of the fatality. The deceased was deaf and did not hear the train approaching. A son of the deceased lives at Peterborough and a married daughter at 183 Lansdowne avenue.

A FINE PUBLIC BUILDING.

The Good Work of a Peterborough Contractor.

The Examiner has been shown a photographic reproduction of the Deseronto post office, customs and armoury building, recently completed and now occupied. The contractor in charge of the building, which is of blue St. Anne limestone, was Mr. Richard Sheehy, town, who carried out his undertaking with the Government in a most satisfactory manner, the chief architect, as well as others in a position to know, asserting that it is the best built and handsomest public building between Montreal and Toronto.

DECEMBER SITTINGS OF COUNTY COURT.

Will Open in Court House To-morrow.

Three Criminal and one Civil Case to be up for Hearing—The Stop-log Case to be Considered.

To-morrow, before His Honour Judge Weller, the December Sittings of the County Court will open in the Court House. There are three criminal cases and one civil, the former being as follows:

King vs. Parcels, the latter being charged with obtaining money under false pretences, and also of perjury; King vs. Howard Peters, charged with stealing a horse from Thomas Dewart of Dummer township; King vs. Allan Payne, charged with the theft of stop logs from a Government dam at the head of Indian River.

The only civil case is O'Brien vs. the Noxon Company, Limited. In this case the plaintiff, Mr. Jas. O'Brien, of Douro, claims $75, and $200 damages from the defendant, who are manufacturers of farm implements in Ingersoll. The facts on which the plaintiff bases his claim for the money as above stated are substantially as follows: On July 31st, 1900, Mr. O'Brien bought from the Noxon Co. a binder, the price being $135, of which amount $15 was paid in cash, and for the remainder two promissory notes were given. Mr. O'Brien now claims that the machine was not fit for the purpose intended, but was defective in construction so that there was great expense and loss of time and labour in binding the sheaves that were left unbound by said machine and in procuring services of experts to make the machine work. He from time to time applied to the defendants to have the machine put in proper order, but though experts were sent they did not improve the binder. In January last the defendants agreed to send a new knotter and on this agreement plaintiff paid a further sum of $60, besides the first sum of $15. The fendants still hold the notes and have brought action thereon against the plaintiff in Oxford Division Court. As against the claim of the plaintiff, the Noxon Company claim that Mr. O'Brien did not give notice of the machine's defect, as required in the warranty. That he has always retained possession of the binder and still has it. That anything done by the company since the failure of Mr. O'Brien to give the notice as set forth in the warranty has been voluntary and no consideration has been accepted for it. Therefore the action is asked to be dismissed with costs.

THE SOCIAL WORLD.

Interesting Personal Items Gathered by Reporters.

Mrs. W. H. Hill will not receive until January.

Mr. J. E. Ramsden, of the Customs and Canal Offices, Port Colborne, who came down to see his son, Mr. L. B. Ramsden, foreman of the C. G. E. power department, injured in an accident on Thursday, spent Sunday in town. He is very much impressed with the thrift and industrial and commercial importance of Peterborough.

The concert given Friday evening at Norwood, under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of St. John's church, was a decided success. Mrs. Milton Callander sang with good voice and fine quality of tone Denza's "Sing On;" the high notes being taken with ease, and clear as a bird. As an encore number Mrs. Callander sang Thomas' "Mignon" with good effect. At the close of the concert she was simply showered with congratulations. Mrs. Callander is a pupil of Mrs. W. J. Morrow, Peterborough.

THE CORDOVA MINES CLOSED TILL SPRING.

Most Reliable Information Obtainable Gives Reason for This Belief.

A special despatch to the Examiner from Cordova, gives the information that the gold mines there are entirely closed down, every employee, except the day and night watchmen, having been discharged. The most reliable information obtainable, is that work will not be resumed until the spring—possibly later. The employees are gradually leaving the village, which will be almost deserted ere long, save by a few who will remain until work is once more resumed in the mines.

It is almost incredible that with the wealth of ore in the mines, they should be allowed to remain closed for any length of time, and from those who are believed to be in the secrets of the company, it is learned that the shut down will not be a permanent one.

THE KING'S HORSE.

Many Changes at Windsor Castle Stables Since the Death of Her Late Majesty Queen Victoria.

There have been many changes at Windsor Castle since the death of Queen Victoria, writes Correspondent W. E. Curtis. Nearly all the members of her household, her attendants and servants, have been retired and pensioned off, and Parliament made a grant of $100,000 a year to give them annuities. Even her horses have been turned out to grass and will never wear harness again.

Sands, Queen Victoria's old coachman, who drove her for more than 40 years, and without whom she would not go out in a carriage, may be seen daily upon the streets of Windsor, and if you can warm him up a little he will relate anecdotes of the late Queen by the hour. He is retired on a pension of $750 and has been given a little cottage on the royal estates at Eton to live in. Sands never drove anybody but the Queen and was subject to her orders exclusively. For 40 years he has never mounted a box unless she was in the carriage, and it was probably true, as stated, that she never rode unless he held the reins. Although she was very stout, Queen Victoria was in the habit of riding horseback up to a few years before her death. Even when she was over 75 years of ago she frequently mounted the saddle with the faithful Sands at her side, and rode slowly around the riding hall at Windsor or among the paths upon the palace grounds. She considered it the best form of exercise.

The riding hall at Windsor is a building 150 by 75 feet in size, with a floor covered with tan bark. There all the horses belonging to the royal family are educated in a very severe school. Most of them are bred in the royal stables at Hampton. They are broken with the greatest care, and are taught to behave themselves under all circumstances so that nothing frightens them. They are accustomed to having military bands and fifes playing around them, firecrackers and rockets shot off under their noses, and flags waved in their eyes, so that when they go out in processions, as they are required to do frequently, they will not be disturbed by the demonstrations.

All the horses in the stables are trained in a similar manner, and Queen Victoria took a great personal interest in that business. There is a little balcony inclosed with glass overhanging the riding hall, in which she used to sit for hours watching the grooms train her horses and the little princes and princesses learning to ride. Every member of the royal family is accustomed to the saddle, and the little children of the Prince of Wales, now only 4 or 5 years old, are required to take lessons from the riding master twice a day. They have a pair of pretty Shetland ponies, and drive them in little carts. Queen Victoria had a team of eight cream-colored ponies, beautiful little animals, almost as small as dogs, which now belong to Queen Alexandra, who drives them tandem and is learning to drive them four-in-hand.

While he is at Windsor the King of England never drives after anything but grey horses, nor do other members of the royal family, and none but cream-colored horses are used on state occasions. The King has one black and three bay saddle horses, however. The Queen's saddle horses are bay and chestnut, and Princess Victoria, who is an accomplish horsewoman, has a beautiful sorrel hunter named Conqueror, with a banged tail, which she repeatedly rides at hunts. Notwithstanding his weight, the King is an excellent equestrian.

THE DIFFICULTIES OF NORWOOD HOCKEYISTS.

May Not Enter Team in the Trent Valley League.

Annual Meeting of the Club to be Held This Week—Organization of a Ladies' Team.

Norwood, Dec. 7th. (Special.) — A survey of the hockey prospects for the coming season in Norwood, does not show a very encouraging outlook. After having had a team in the Trent Valley Hockey League every year since the organization of the League, and each year making a good showing, being runners up at least twice, there is a probability that the town will not be represented in the League this season. It was with the deepest regret that this statement was made by one of the most prominent hockeyists in the town, and the announcement has caused almost consternation among the increasing number of hockey supporters here. Norwood is one of the best hockey town on the whole Trent Valley Circuit, the game having taken a firm hold upon the citizens, and the games played here last season were all well attended, and the team has been given good financial support.

The announcement therefore that the team might disband, in the face of its past excellent record, and the favour with which the game is looked upon here, is all the more deplorable.

The feeling among the players is that unless they can get together a winning team they prefer to remain out of the game. They have become somewhat discouraged too by the removal from town of some of last year's good men, and the prospect that more may go, and they do not see where the material is to come from to fill their places. Miller will this season play with Midland. Cameron is slated for Barrie, although this fact does not contain any particular significance, as far as the Norwood team is concerned, because this player has not caught a place on the team for the last two seasons.

The whole matter now hinges on Kemp. If he remains in town there there will be a team, and if he leaves, as there is a possibility of his doing, there will likely be a vacancy in the Trent Valley League.

The annual meeting of the Club has not been held yet, but it will in all probability be held during this week, before the meeting of the Trent Valley League, when a decision will be arrived at. The players have done no practicing yet; the rink, however, is being flooded, and hopes are entertained that before long the ice will be ready for use.

The rink, evidently has not proven a very successful venture as it has been sold during the last few days by the Stock Company which built it to Mr., Cummings at 20 per cent. of its cost. Last season was a very successful one, and it is thought that with the growing interest in the game if the hockey team is reorganized the rink would pay this season, otherwise it will be a losing venture.

The players who are still in town are anxious to get a team together, and a survey of the available men gives ground for belief that a fairly successful team could be picked up.

The team which could be gotten together now would line up about as follows: Goal, R. Pearce; point, C. Pearce; cover point, ——; forwards, McNicholl, Kemp, Rathwell, Sherry,

The present executive officers of the club are, President, M. E. Knox; Secretary, J. Anderson.

While it must be admitted that the prospects for hockey, as far as the men are concerned, are not particularly bright, the town will not be entirely without the game, as a movement is on foot to organize a ladies' team, and the chances for a successful outcome are good. There are quite a few excellent lady skaters, and last season some of them developed considerable ability in chasing the puck, and this season it is altogether likely that Norwood will see a successful ladies' hockey team on the ice.

EXTRACTS FROM THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Mr. J. Ross Robertson Deals With Matters of Interest to Hockeyists.

President J. Ross Robertson, of the O.H.A. presented his annual address at the meeting of the greatest organized amateur sporting organization in the world, held in Toronto on Saturday, and its careful perusal will amply repay any and every man who has a love for sport. One or two extracts from the address are given below. He says:

"Flattery may be the food of fools but I don't think we are doing the self-commendation act when we just use a little bit of it and shake hands with one another at the close of the season and say, 'Well we've had another successful year,' for success is the result that must come in natural sequence to all organizations whose interests are faithfully looked after, as yours are, by those whom you at the annual meetings place in control.

Speaking of the time of actual play, Mr. Robertson says:—

"There is no rule of the Association that is more frequently violated than that which applies to the time of play. The rule is that a game shall consist of one hour's actual play. There was not a single match played in the Association rinks last season that occupied in the time of actual play more than three-quarters of an hour. During the season the loose interpretation of the rule became most apparent, principally because the clubs took advantage of it to further their own ends, and some of these ends were not commendable. The commencement of the violation of this rule may be traced to the ignoring of slight delays which were counted in the time of actual play. The rule calls for one hour's play, and referees should see that it is strictly observed."

He deals with the "Tourist" system severely in the following terms:

"The tourist issue raises a large question which is important in its relationship to the game which is our chief care, and to the individual players, whose welfare must be a matter of some concern to every thoughtful man.

"The Ontario Hockey Association does everything that honourably can be done to encourage hockey as a sport. It has no use for hockey as a business. The tourist system helps clubs having gilt-edged jobs in their gift to beat out clubs that can offer nothing but the attrations of the game as an inducement to players.

"The tourist system as it is worked in the United States tears a boy up by the roots of his business career in Canada, and sets him playing hockey with business as a side issue, until he is displaced by a faster excursionist from over the line. Then the tourist has lost the start he might have got in his Canadian career, and is simply an exploded hockey player, who has wasted some of the best years of his life without establishing even the beginnings of a start in life.

"Hockey as a recreation is all right, but hockey as a business is all wrong, and the Ontario Hockey Association will be untrue to its own high amateur standards when it allows its teams to officiate as revenue producers for United States aggregations of expatriated Canadians."

Riley, our new goalkeeper, is home from a trip to Picton. He says that Brighton is building an open air rink to play the game on. When passing through a town not forty miles from here, whose team is aspiring for O. H. A. championship, Mr. Riley was asked to remain there, and spend the winter, but he promptly refused the magnificent offer made him, saying Lindsay was the town for him. Now, Port Hope, wouldn't that crack your collar button?—Lindsay Post.

RUGBY.

The Chicago Tribune says:—Nineteen lives were lost on the football field during the season of 1903, one boy was driven insane from injuries and thirteen players were severely injured, some of them being disabled for life. The number of minor but painful accidents goes into the hundreds and the list of the severely injured necessarily also is incomplete.

The feature of this tabulation is that it shows the serious casualties particularly were confined to the untrained players. No member of any of the first class elevens was killed or permanently disabled. One Yale player and one Harvard player suffered a broken leg.

No player in any of the teams of the "big nine" in the West was the victim of any hurt worse than a wrenched shoulder, a bruised head, a sprained knee or a turned ankle.

In consequence of the injuries sustained by their players several of the minor schools have forbidden the game of football. Two towns, Columbus Junction, Pa., and Greenfield, O., have stopped the sport as the result of petitions circulated by parents.

Which Was His Wife?

A certain Turk, according to rumor, was once married to a veiled lady in white in the presence of the sultan. As soon as the ceremony was concluded the bride mysteriously disappeared. The groom was led into an adjoining room, where stood twelve ladies all dressed in white, but without veils. "Choose from the twelve," exclaimed the sovereign, "her that is your bride." As the man had never seen her face the command bewildered him. "If you make a mistake," added his majesty, "your life shall pay the forfeit." The poor man walked up and down the row of beauties, but saw nothing whatever to aid his choice. "You have only a minute left," yelled the sultan in anger; "choose at once." Ten of the ladies, he noticed, gave him nothing else than a stony stare. One of them frowned, the other smiled. "The frowning one," he thought, "is my bride, for she expresses her displeasure and impatience at my ignorance. "No," he said to himself, "it must be the smiling one, for she desires to invite me to her." After debating the subject in his mind until his time was up he boldly made a selection from the two. He was successful. He had regained his bride. Which was she, the one who frowned or the one who smiled?

The Vault of St. Michan's.

The most interesting place of pilgrimage in Dublin is St. Michan's church, where the organ is still to be seen upon which Handel is said to have composed his "Messiah." In the graveyard is the last resting place of Robert Emmet, and the vault of St. Michan's provides a more grewsome thrill than the morgue. The sexton lifts an iron door and descends a few rude steps, carrying a light, without which the place would be pitch dark. You follow and find yourself in a narrow passage, from which cell-like recesses belonging to different families branch off. Whether it is owing to the extreme dryness of the surroundings or to some mysterious property of the place, the process of decay has been arrested, and the features of persons dead for two centuries may be recognized from authentic portraits. Perhaps the strangest thing about the vault is the fact that, apart from the weird sensation, there is nothing offensive in the surroundings.

A Thrifty Bride.

"It's a pity," said the man in the rough brown suit, "that Johnson married at the very beginning of his business career. I am afraid that young wife of his, with her love for pretty clothes, will be a millstone around his neck."

"Don't you believe it. She'll make him president of a bank one of these days," said the man in the new derby, who had been spending the week end at the small suburban home of the aforementioned Johnson. "Every towel and napkin I saw in the house had the name of some hotel stamped on it, and so did the spoons, by Jove! She had gathered them up on their wedding journey."

BASIS FOR TAX BILL

Assessment Committee Agree Upon Some Principles.

THE HOUSE TAX IS REJECTED

Special Franchise Tax Argued Against—Members Seemed to Prefer a Tax on Gross Revenue of Companies—New System to Be Based on Real Estate, Business Assessment and Income.

Toronto, Dec. 5.—Before separating for a fortnight or so, the special Assessment Committee held a discussion yesterday afternoon, which indicated that enough of the new assessment bill will be adopted to greatly simplify and improve the present law. The Chairman, Hon. J. M. Gibson, proposed that the new system be comprised of taxation on the three following sources: (1) Real estate; (2) business assessment, and (3) income. This leaves out of account the old personalty tax, the proposed new house tax, which was condemned as having a bad name, and not being desirable to any great extent, and for the franchise tax, which the new bill called for, there will probably be a tax on the gross revenue of the corporations which it would have affected. Another idea was to assess the telephone company at the general rate at so much per mile in rural districts. In the cities their real estate and a percentage of their gross income would be the only basis of assessment. The exemption of machinery in general was favored by many, but it was recognized that there were difficulties in the way of carrying that out.

Mr. Stanton Resumes.

When the committee resumed Mr. Lynch-Stanton was again heard in behalf of the Bell Telephone Company. He made it plain that the company was not trying to evade taxation, but wanted a basis fixed that would be no more than just and equitable. "Tax on a percentage," he said, "and then impose the business tax on our exchanges and toll offices, and if that can not be worked out we are willing that the tax be put on the gross revenue. Then you eliminate the poles and wires."

Several members thought it would be a farce to attempt to impose a tax on some of the exchanges, which consisted merely of a switchboard in a corner of some store. Mr. Hoyle wanted to tax the street plant, but Mr. Lynch-Stanton objected to this as a doubling-up process. He objected to being taxed in a half a dozen different ways.

Assessor Hutton of Hamilton, was asked for an opinion whether a tax on the gross revenue of the company would be satisfactory to the municipalities. He said he thought it would.

Taxation of Franchises.

H. M. Mowat, K.C., solicitor for the Ottawa Electric Companies, was given the floor and made a plea against the taxation of franchises. The corporations were not grasping monopolies, he said, but were partners with the public. It was an advantage to the public for the companies to use the streets for their poles and wires.

"Would you consider a tax on the gross receipts a fair one?" Mr. Preston asked.

Mr. Mowat said he had not been instructed on that point, but his own opinion was that it would be fair. He was asked as to his conception of the meaning of the term "actual value," as applied to the property of an electric company, and answered that he thought it meant scrap iron value. If the taxation of special franchises was stuck out they would have to go back to the "going concern" clause.

Mr. Whitney asked if they could make it mean the actual value at the time of the assessment for the purpose for which it was first used.

Assessor Foreman said the amendment of 1902, respecting the assessment of structures on the highway, was quite satisfactory to Toronto.

The chairman remarked that though the Toronto Railway Company paid taxes on its poles, plant, etc., there was an impression that there was something over and above what they were paying for that had a value and for which they should pay taxes.

The $1,000 Exemption.

"Is the committee of the opinion that the $1,000 exemption should stand?" the chairman asked. There was a chorus of "yes," and Mr. Gibson thought that obviated the necessity of hearing a St. Thomas deputation that came to the committee to advocate that very idea.

Mr. Helmuth spoke of the difficulty of assessing franchise-holding corporations as going concerns.

The chairman said when the Legislature removed the inequality of the scrap iron law there appeared to be considerable satisfaction.

After an exchange of views on some of the main features of the bill the committee adjourned at the call of the chairman.

The Fires of Eczema.

So keen is the suffering of many people who endure the stinging, itching sensations of Eczema that they speak of the skin as being on fire. By its soothing, healing, antiseptic influence Dr. Chase's Ointment positively cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and every form of itching skin disease. It is of inestimable value in every home, and when once introduced becomes a household necessity. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the standard the world over, and has no worthy rival.

Boycott Becomes a Strike.

Quebec, Dec. 5.—Shoe manufacturers who have had their employes locked out for a couple of weeks, expected them to turn up for work yesterday morning as an intimation had been given that there would be work for them. Instead the men turned a lock-out into a strike by the men failing to show up. They paraded the streets, and threw stones through factory windows.

Later—The boot and shoe employes decided to go back to their workshops this morning, between 9 and 10 o'clock, and have a talk with their masters.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Abigail Becker.

A despatch from Petrolia, Nov. 28, says: The school children around this district have suddenly taken an interest in the story of Abigail Becker in their readers. The reason is apparent, for Mrs. Roarer, once Abigail Becker, is visiting in this district, and the teachers have taken the opportunity to teach the children the lesson again.

The story as almost everyone remembers the story told by Commander T. Jones of Abigail Becker, the brave young woman, who, on Nov. 24, 1854, was the means of saving the lives of a crew of seven shipwrecked sailors, from a ship which went ashore off Long Point Island, Lake Erie, on that memorable day. Her husband was away for the day, and while going down to the lake for water Mrs. Becker saw the stranded ship about half a mile from the shore with the seven sailors clinging to the frozen rigging. She knew that they would not last over another night with their limbs and hands in a frozen condition, so she returned to her lonely hut and warmed blankets and made such articles of food which would warm and strengthen the men should she pull them through the thundering surf.

As they began to come ashore one by one dropping off the rigging they found Mrs. Becker up to her neck in the surf waiting to clutch them and drag them to the dry land. After they had all come ashore she took them to the cottage and there nursed them to life again.

Mrs. Becker, of all the gifts that were to be heaped upon her, accepted only a gold medal, which two of the crew sent her. She was offered $5 a day and expenses to go and visit the Queen, but she thought it right to refuse. Shortly after this her husband died and she married Mr. Roarer.

She is seventy-five years of age, and is still strong and in good health. Last Sunday evening she was present at the evening service of the Methodist Church of this city, where she is staying with her sister, Mrs. Deo, the minister seeing her in the audience invited her up to the platform, and she made a few modest remarks, but took no credit for her brave deed of younger days.

Told on Dr. Rainsford.

Dr. Rainsford, who was formerly in Toronto, had a habit at one time of conditioning his actions with the phrase, "Deo volente," or "God willing," or something of the sort. An old woman, the head of an aristocratic family, invited him to dine. "I shall be delighted to accept," he said, "if I can be spared." Perhaps the woman thought she sniffered cant in the terminal phrase, for she said quickly: "Oh, if you're dead, I promise not to expect you."—Christian Register.

I WONDER WHY.

I wonder why the world's so bright,
No matter what the weather,
So full of beauty and delight
For us to share together;
I wonder why the sky should be
So deeply blue above you—
Perhaps it's just because, you see,
I love you!

I wonder why my heart should sing
All day a song of gladness,
Why every season should be spring,
No thought of care or sadness;
Why every night the stars should glow
With meanings just above me—
Perhaps it's just because I know
You love me!

Speeches of Men.

You may search through the annals of all time, and the speeches of men will tell the passions of the periods during which they flourished. The speeches of the ancients that have been preserved through the ages present to us our strongest and most important history of the past. They constitute the living sentiment of the literature of fame. In all the mighty tumults of war, the tranquil periods of peace and the convulsive shocks of revolution the orator stands in clear relief as impressive and enduring as the soldier. The great speeches of the great men of antiquity are in the mouth of the schoolboy. He cannot know Greece without Demosthenes. He cannot know Rome without Cicero. Still the stenographers of these centuries were unlike the stenographers of this, and so it will always remain a lasting regret that many of the most brilliant utterances of ancient oratory and wit have never been recorded.

A Bishop on Gambolling Girls.

An interesting speech was made by the Bishop of Stepney at a meeting held at the Mansion House, London, recently, in aid of the Police Court Mission.

In praising the work of the police court missionaries, the bishop drew a comparison between the pranks of young university bloods and the exuberance of spirit which frequently led London lads to the police court.

It was simply human nature in each case, he declared, but with the university lad it left no more serious result than a lecture from the dean or rustication, whereas in London many lads with no more real viciousness in their characters than their more fortunate brothers got sent to a prison for which they were never destined.

"It may be considered unconventional of me to say so," added the bishop, "but it is no less a fact that I have seen in prison girls who are as good and pure as the daughters of any member of my audience.

"A girl of the lower classes yields to the pressure of friends to take intoxicating drinks; she gets excited, commits some freak, and goes to the police court as a 'drunk and disorderly.'

"But I have known girls in the highest circles who say they dare not refuse to have a little gambol for fear of offending their hosts and hostesses."

In each case there was, said the bishop, a breach of the moral code, but the former instance was no more deserving of punishment than the latter.

Lord Provost of Edinburgh.

Sir Robert Cranstoun, the Lord-Provost-elect of Edinburgh, may be described as Edinburgh's "universal provider," says The London Chronicle. As treasurer of the city, he was Knighted by the King on the occasion of his visit last spring. Of Border extraction, with all the fine old fighting spirit of the Liddesdale Reivers, he is one of the keenest volunteers in the kingdom. He was one of the first to join the ranks of the Queen's Edinburgh Brigade, the largest of its kind in the country, and he once boasted that for a quarter of a century he had never missed a parade. He enjoys the distinction of having been the first volunteer officer to be appointed adjutant to his own corps—and to this honor he attained by special staff studies in London and at Aldershot. Several years ago, when the Duke of Connaught was still commanding at the Camp, he invited Col. Cranstoun down to join his staff on the occasion of the army manoeuvres. His fame is sealed by the familiarity of the populace with "Bob" Cranstoun.

Alphabetically Answered.

A turn of the political wheel had placed the English Conservatives on top and lowered the Liberals.

Not long afterward a young and presumptuous member of the ruling Government, who was sitting opposite a member of the defeated party at a London dinner party, took that time to say:

"Well, Mr. Bank, how do you like being an ex?"

"I should like it better if we had been succeeded by the y'e" (wise), instantly retorted the Liberal.

STORY OF SIR OLIVER MOWAT.

Curious Question Asked of Him by Talkless Supporter.

A party of newspapermen, who have almost arrived at the veteran stage as political reporters, were yarn-spinning the other evening, when one of them told a story of Sir Oliver Mowat that was new to his hearers.

"It was about ten years ago," said the narrator, "when I was assigned by my news editor to accompany Sir Oliver, who was, of course, Premier, on a short campaigning trip in Eastern Ontario. Sir Oliver made a couple of speeches, after which he and his party took the steamer up the Rideau Lakes. At a village on the route the boat was boarded by a dozen or so of the prominent Liberals of the county, and Sir Oliver greeted them all cordially. They intended to accompany the party fifteen miles to the next stopping place, and then to return on the boat making the down journey. Sir Oliver held a sort of informal reception on the deck. On the outskirts of the little group was a tall, whiskered man, who was introduced as Mr. So-and-So, the vice-president of the local Liberal Association, and, according to report, a free contributor of the sinews of war. But the gentleman, although he had plenty of money, was absolutely incapable of taking part in a conversation. He watched with some envy his friends talking to the Little Premier, and he made the desperate resolve that he would show them that he, too, had some idea of carrying a colloquy. He waited until there was a lull in the talk, and then the travelers heard this amazing enquiry, pitched in a high treble:

"Sir Oliver Mowat, do you know how to make dried-up chewing tobacco fresh again?"

The members of the group looked enquiringly at the Vice-President. The newspapermen grinned cheerfully, but Sir Oliver, although his eyes twinkled, never moved a muscle. Indeed, he replied, as if the question had been an ordinary one:

"I'm afraid that I don't know the process."

The Vice-President had struck oil, he believed. "Why," said he triumphantly, "all you do is to take a news paper, spread it on a table, sprinkle your tobacco with alcohol and water, and in two days your tobacco will be as good as new."

"Indeed! You surprise me," said Sir Oliver suavely. "But why not save the trouble by purchasing fresh tobacco?"

"Oh, but remember the money you save!" returned the Vice-President.

Which closed the conversation. Altogether it was probably the most absurd that Sir Oliver ever took part in. But it happened, all right.

Story of Late Sir Melville Parker

A story told of the late Sir Melville affords good illustration of that bluffness of character which won the hearts of all with whom he came into contact. He held the office of magistrate at the time, and to him came a man who wished to have another arrested for having assaulted him, as he claimed. While in the midst of his tale the other man came in. He came likewise to complain of having been attacked and charged the firstcomer with being the aggressor. Sir Melville listened to both versions of the affair, and this was his judicial pronouncement: "Come out with me, both of you, into the back yard. You can fight it out there. I'll be the umpire." The fight took place. It was a spirited contest, with the victory inclining decisively to one combatant.

This ended the affair, at least so far as the men were concerned. But it cropped up later at a municipal contest, in which Sir Melville was a candidate for election. The story was freely circulated by his opponents and used as an argument that he was unfit for holding office. Sir Melville made no denial in whole or in part. He admitted the truth of the whole matter, but—here he turned the tables—by announcing that the two gladiators were his warmest supporters.

It was a case of the biter being bit, and the engineer hoist with his own petard. The baronet was elected by an overwhelming majority.

Carving 1,000 Years Old Found.

A remarkable piece of antique Indian carving, which must be nearly a thousand years old, was dug up early in November in making an excavation in the centre of Vancouver. The carving is of brown sandstone, and the work must have been done with a sharp piece of flint or slate. It is in two sections, one being a bowl and the other a bear's head. It was found under the decaying stump of an immense cedar tree, and may have been placed there before the tree began to grow and long before Columbus had any thought of discovering America.

She Got a Good Training.

Miss Lena Ashwell, the leading London actress, was the principal guest at the new Vagabond Club, and responding to a toast, said she was surprised to find herself the principal guest of the club, for most of her childhood had been passed in a little wooden house in Canada, where her duties were washing, mending, baking and cooking. Englishmen laughed at the colonial accent, but a colonial would occasionally smile at the accent heard in London.

Fish Flour For Food.

The fisheries represent one of Norway's chief industries, and quantities of fish are sold at very low rates, particularly during summer. One way in which these are utilised is by means of an invention which quickly dries and pulverises the flesh of fresh fish. The resulting product, called fish flour, is easy to transport from one place to another and has great nutritive value.

The Democratic Apple.

A southern editor says this in praise of the apple: "The apple is the most democratic of all fruits. The pomegranate is priestly, the grape is royal, the orange is luxurious, the peach and pear are plutocratic, but the apple belongs to the populace. It is symbolic of the country store and the corner grocery. It breathes the free spirit of the American township and village. It has a flavor of old New England and yet a pungency as of the south and middle west. It is mild, palatable, nourishing and promotive of good fellowship and long life."

Strollers

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM

Author of "Under the Rose."

Of his reply the listener caught only the words "windbreak" and "lame." He observed the soldier assist her to the throne and then, to Mauville's surprise, spring into the wagon himself.

"Why, the fellow is going with them!" exclaimed the land baron. "Or, at any rate, he is going with her. What can it mean?" And hurriedly quitting his post, his toilet now being complete, he hastened to the door and quickly made his way downstairs.

During the past week his own addresses had miscarried and his gallantry had been love's labor lost. At first he had fancied he was making progress, but soon acknowledged to himself he had underestimated the enterprise. Play had succeeded play—he could not have told what part favored her most! Ophelia sighed and died; Susan danced on her grave between acts, according to the programme, and turned tears into smiles; the farewell night had come and gone—and yet Constance had made no sign of compliance to reward the patient wooer. Now, at the sight of these preparations for departure and the presence of the stalwart stranger in the property wagon, he experienced a sudden sensation of pique, almost akin to jealousy.

Stepping from the tavern, it was with an effort he suppressed his chagrin and vexation and assumed that air of nonchalance which became him well. Smilingly he bade Susan and the other occupants of the chariot farewell, shook Barnes by the hand and turned to the property wagon.

"The noise of your departure awakened me," he said to the young girl. "So I have come to claim my compensation—the pleasure of seeing you"—

"Depart!" she laughed quickly.

Momentarily disconcerted, he turned to the soldier. "You ride early."

"As you see," returned the other immovably.

"A habit contracted in the army, no doubt!" retorted Mauville, recovering his easy self possession. "Well, a bumping trunk is as efficacious as a bugle call! But au revoir, Miss Carew; for we may meet again. The world is broad—yet its highways are narrow! There is no need wishing you a pleasant journey."

His glance rested on Saint-Prosper for a moment, but told nothing beyond the slight touch of irony in his words, and then shifting to the young girl it lingered upon each detail of costume and outline of feature. Before she could reply Barnes cracked his whip, the horses sprang forward, and the stable boy, a confused tangle of legs and arms, was shot as from a catapult among the sweet williams. The abrupt departure of the chariot was the cue for the property wagon, which followed with some labor and jolting, like a convoy struggling in the wake of a pretentious ship. From the door Mauville watched it until it reached a tollgate, passed beneath the portcullis and disappeared into the broad province of the wilderness.

CHAPTER VII.

CALM and still was the morning; the wandering air just stirred the pendulous branches of the elms and maples, and in the clear atmosphere the russet hills were sharply outlined. As they swung out into the road, with Hans, the musician, at the reins, the young girl removed her bonnet and leaned back in the chair of state where kings had fretted and queens had lolled.

The throne, imposing on the stage, now appeared but a flimsy article of furniture, with frayed and torn upholstering and carving which had long since lost its gilded magnificence. Seated amid the jumble of theatrical appliances and accouterments—scenery, rolled up rug fashion, property trunks, stage clock, lamps and draperies—she accepted the situation gracefully, even finding nothing strange in the presence of the soldier. New faces had come and gone in the company before, and when Barnes had complacently informed her Saint-Prosper would journey with the players to New Orleans in a semibusiness capacity the arrangement appeared conformable to precedent.

The manager's satisfaction augured well for the importance of the semibusiness role assumed by the stranger, and Barnes' friendliness was perhaps in some degree unconsciously reflected in her manner, an attitude the soldier's own reserve, or taciturnity, had not tended to dispel. So his being in the property wagon seemed no more singular than Hans' occupancy of the front seat, or if Adonis, Hawkes or Susan had been there with her. She was accustomed to free and easy comradeship; indeed, knew no other life, and it was only assiduous attentions like those of the land baron's that startled and disquieted her.

As comfortably as might be she settled back in the capacious, threadbare throne, a slender figure in its depths—more adapted to accommodate a corpulent Henry VIII.—and smiled gayly as the wagon, in avoiding one rut, ran into another and lurched somewhat violently. Saint-Prosper, lodged on a neighboring trunk, quickly extended a steadying hand.

"You see how precarious thrones are!" he said.

"There isn't room for it to more than totter," she replied lightly, removing her bonnet and lazily swinging it from the arm of the chair.

"Then it's safer than real thrones," he answered, watching the swaying bonnet, or, perhaps, contrasting the muscular, bronzed hand he had placed on the chair with the smooth, white one which held the blue ribbons; a small, though firm, hand to grapple with the minotaur, Life!

She slowly wound the ribbons around her fingers.

"Oh, you mean France," she said, and he looked away with sudden disquietude. "Poor monarchs! Their road is rougher than this one."

"Rougher truly!"

"You love France?" she asked suddenly after studying, with secret, sidelong glances, his reserved, impenetrable face.

His gaze returned to her—to the bonnet now resting in her lap—to the hand beside it.

"It is my native land," he replied.

"Then why did you leave it—in its trouble?" she asked impulsively.

"Why?" he repeated, regarding her keenly; but in a moment he added: "For several reasons. I returned from Africa, from serving under Bugeaud, to find the red flag waving in Paris; the king fled!"

"Oh!" she said quickly. "A king should"—

"What?" he asked as she paused.

"I was going to say it was better to die like a king than"—

"Than live an outcast!" he concluded for her, a shadow on his brow.

She nodded. "At any rate, that is the way they always do in the plays," she added brightly. "But you were saying you found your real king fled." His heavy brows contracted, though he answered readily enough: "Yes, the king had fled. A kinsman in whose house I had been reared then bade me head a movement for the restoration of the royal figure. For what object? The regency was doomed, the king a play fly."

"And so you refused?"

"We quarreled; he swore like a Gascon. His little puppet should yet sit in the chair where Louis XIV. had lorded it. I, who owed my commission to his noble name, was a republican, a deserter! The best way out of the difficulty was out of the country. First it was England; then it was here; tomorrow—where?" he added in a lower tone, half to himself.

"Where?" she repeated lightly. "That is our case too."

He looked at her with sudden interest. "Yours is an eventful life, Miss Carew."

"I have never known any other," she said simply, adding after a pause: "My earliest recollections are associated with my mother and the stage. As a child I watched her from the wings. I remember a grand voice and majestic presence. When the audience broke into applause my heart throbbed with pride."

But as her thoughts reverted to times past the touch of melancholy invoked by the memory of her mother was gradually dispelled as fancy conjured other scenes, and a flickering smile hovered over the lips whose parting displaced that graver mood.

"Once or twice I played with her, too," she added. "I thought it nice to be one of the little princes in 'Richard III.' and wear white satin clothes. One night after the play an old gentleman took me on his knee and said, 'I had to come, my child, and see if the wicked old uncle hadn't really smothered you!' When he had gone my mother told me he was Mr. Washington Irving. I thought him very kind, for he brought me a bag of bonbons from the coffee room."

"It's the first time I ever heard of a great critic laden with sweetmeats!" said the soldier. "And were you not flattered by his honeyed regard?"

"Oh, yes; I devoured it and wanted more," she laughed.

Hans' flourishing whip put an end to further conversation. They had advanced in this manner for some distance through furrow and groove, when the vehicle gave a sharper lurch down a deeper rut and abruptly settled on one side. Barnes held the plunging horses in control, while the gentlemen scrambled to the ground and assisted the ladies to dismount.

"Any one hurt?" asked the manager from his box.

"No damage done—except to the coach," said Hawkes.

By this time the horses had become quiet and Barnes, now that the passengers were rescued, like a good skipper, left the quarter deck.

"We couldn't have chosen a better place for our lunch," he remarked philosophically. "How fortunate we should have broken down where we did!"

"Very fortunate!" echoed the old lady ironically.

The accident had happened upon a slight plateau, of which they accordingly took possession, tethering the horses to graze. From the branches overhead the squirrels surveyed them as if asking what manner of people were these, and the busy woodpecker ceased his drumming, cocking his head inquisitively at the intruders, then slyly drew away, mounting spirally the trunk of the tree to the bole chiseled by his strong beak for a nest. As Barnes gazed around upon the pleasing prospect he straightway became the duke in the comedy of the forest.

"Ha, my brothers in exile," he exclaimed, "are not these woods more free from peril than the envious court?"

"All it wants," said the tragedian hungrily, "is mutton, greens and a foaming pot."

"I can't promise the foaming pot," answered the manager. "But, at least, we have a well filled hamper."

Soon the coffee was simmering and such viands as they had brought with them—for Barnes was a farsighted and provident manager—were spread out in tempting profusion. Near them a swift flowing stream chattered about the stones like one of nature's busiest gossips; it whispered to the flowers, murmured to the rushes and was voluble to the overhanging branch that dragged upon the surface of the water. The flowers on its brim nodded, the rushes waved and the branch bent as if in assent to the mad gossip of the blithesome brook. And it seemed as though all this animated conversation was caused by the encampment of the band of players by the wayside.

The repast finished, they turned their attention to the injured chariot, but fortunately the damage was not beyond repair, and Barnes, actor, manager, billposter, license procurer, added to his already extensive repertory the part of joiner and wheelwright. The skilled artisans in coachmaking and coach repairing might not have regarded the manager as a master workman, but the fractured parts were finally set after a fashion. By that time, however, the sun had sunk to rest upon a pillow of clouds; the squirrels, law abiding citizens, had sought their homes; the woodpecker had vanished in his snug chamber, and only forest dwellers of nocturnal habits were now abroad, their name legion, like the gadabouts of a populous city.

"There!" exclaimed the manager, surveying his handiwork. "The bus is ready! But there is little use going on tonight. I am not sure of the road, and here is a likely spot to pass the night."

"Likely to be devoured by wild beasts," said Kate with a shudder.

"I am sure I see two glistening eyes!" exclaimed Susan.

"Fudge!" observed the elastic old lady. "That's the first time you have been afraid of two glistening eyes."

"There's a vast difference between wolves and men," murmured Susan.

"I'm not so sure of that," returned the aged cynic.

But as the light of day was withdrawn a great fire sprang up, illuminating the immediate foreground. The flames were cheering, drawing the party more closely together. Even Hawkes partly discarded his tragedy face; the old lady threw a bundle of fifty odd years from her shoulders as easily as a wood carrier would cast aside his miserable stack of fagots, while Barnes forgot his troubles in narrating the harrowing experience of a company which had penetrated the west at a period antedating the settlement of the Michigan and Ohio boundary dispute.

The soldier alone was silent, curiously watching the play of light and shade on the faces of the strollers, his gaze resting longest perhaps on the features of the young girl. Leaning against an ancient oak, so old the heart of it was gone and it towered but a mighty shell, the slender figure of the actress was clearly outlined, but against that dark and roughly furrowed background she seemed too slight and delicate to buffet with storms and hardships. That day's experience was a forerunner of the unexpected in this wandering life, but another time the mishap might not be turned to diversion. The coach would not always traverse sunny byways. The dry leaf floating from the majestic arm of the oak, the sound of an acorn as it struck the earth, presaged days less halcyon to come.

"How do you enjoy being a stroller?" asked a voice, interrupting the soldier's reverie. "It has its bitters and its sweets, hasn't it, especially its sweets?" Susan added, glancing meaningly at the young girl. "But, after all, it doesn't much matter what happens to you if you are in good company."

She seemed too slight and delicate.

The semigloom permitted her to gaze steadfastly into his eyes. He ignored the opportunity for a compliment, and Susan stifled a little yawn, real or imaginary.

"Positively one could die of ennui in this wilderness," she continued. "Do you know you are a welcome addition to our band? But you will have to make yourself very agreeable. I suppose"—archly—"you were very agreeable in the property wagon."

"Miss Carew had a part to study," he returned coldly.

"A part to study!" in mock consternation. "How I hate studying parts! They say what you wouldn't, and don't say what you would. But I'm off to bed," rising impatiently. "I'm getting sleepy."

"Sleepy!" echoed Barnes. "Take your choice—the Hotel du Omnibus"—indicating the chariot—"or the Villa Italienne," with a gesture toward a tent made of the drop curtain, upon the walls of which was the picture of an Italian scene.

"The chariot for me," answered Susan. "It is more high and dry and does not suggest spiders and other crawling things."

"Good night, then, and remember a good conscience makes a hard bed soft."

"Then I shall sleep on down. I haven't had a chance"—with a sigh—"to damage my conscience lately. But when I strike civilization again"—and Susan shook her head eloquently to conclude her sentence. "Oh, yes; if beds depend on conscience, boughs would be feathers for me tonight," with which half laughing, half defiant conclusion Susan tripped to the chariot, pausing a moment, however, to cast a reproachful glance over her shoulder at Saint-Prosper before vanishing in the cavernous depths of the vehicle of the muses.

Her departure was the signal for the dispersing of the party to their respective couches. Now the fire sank lower, the stars came out brighter, and the moon arose and traveled majestically up the heavens, taking a brief but comprehensive survey of the habitations of mortals, and then, as if satisfied with her scrutiny, sailed back to the horizon and dropped out of sight.

FIFTY CENTS A MONTH

A small bottle of Scott's Emulsion costing fifty cents will last a baby a month—a few drops in its bottle each time it is fed. That's a small outlay for so large a return of health and comfort.

Babies that are given Scott's Emulsion quickly respond to its helpful action. It seems to contain just the elements of nourishment a baby needs most.

Ordinary food frequently lacks this nourishment; Scott's Emulsion always supplies it.

CHILL WINDS

Are the dread of those whose lungs are "weak." Some fortunate people can follow the summer as it goes southward, and escape the cold blasts of winter and the chill airs of spring. But for the majority of people this is impossible. Family cares and business obligations hold them fast.

"Weak" lungs are made strong by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures the obstinate cough, heals the inflamed tissues, stops the hemorrhage, and restores the lost flesh to the emaciated body.

"I am a railroad agent," writes I. B. Staples, Esq., of Barclay, Osage Co., Kans., "and four years ago my work keeping me in a warm room and stepping out frequently into the cold air gave me bronchitis, which became chronic and deep seated. Doctors failed to reach my case and advised me to try a higher air, but, fortunately for me, a friend also advised me to try Dr. Pierce's medicines. I commenced taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and by the time I had taken the first bottle I was better, and after taking about four bottles my cough was entirely gone. I have found no necessity for seeking another climate."

Sometimes a dealer, tempted by the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines, will offer the customer a substitute as being "just as good" as the "Discovery."

You get the People's Medical Adviser, the best medical work ever published, free by sending stamps, to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound volume, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Six Doctors Failed to Cure Him.

ERYSIPELAS AND SALT RHEUM WAS THE TROUBLE.

Burdock Blood Bitters

DID MORE THAN SIX DOCTORS COULD DO.

Mrs. Theo. Newell, Argyle Sound, N.S., expresses her opinion of this wonderful blood remedy in the following letter:

"It is with the greatest gratitude that I can testify to the wonderful curative powers of Burdock Blood Bitters. For years my husband suffered terribly with Erysipelas and Salt Rheum. He was so bad at times that he could no sleep on account of the itching and burning. He had been under the care of six different doctors, but they failed to do him any good. I had read different times of the wonderful cures being made by Burdock Blood Bitters, so advised him to give it a trial. He did so, and after taking five bottles was cured without a doubt. I would strongly advise any person troubled with blood disorders to give B.B.B. a fair trial for I am sure it will cure them."

Oriental Rug Dyes.

In his monograph, "The Oriental Rug," Mr. W. D. Ellwanger, writing on the crucial matter of the dyes used, says:

"One expert Armenian has a sure test for mineral dyes in his tongue. When in doubt he cuts a bit of wool from the rug, nibbles it a minute or so and then pronounces his sure verdict. But the test is a delicate one, and the fruit of knowledge is presumably bitter."

The Nice Thing He Said.

"I'm not given to flattery," drawled Mr. Staylate. "I don't make a point to say nice things to girls"—

"No? I'm sure that was a nice thing you said to me earlier in the evening," replied Miss Bord, with a yawn.

"What was that?"

"You remarked that you didn't have long to stay, you know."

POINTS ABOUT PEOPLE.

Story of Justice Hawkins' First Brief in English Court.

Otto Goldschmidt, the surviving husband of Jenny Lind, once renowned as "the Swedish nightingale," recently celebrated his seventy-fourth birthday. He is living quietly on the English estate the songstress purchased with the proceeds of her American tour.

The Bishop of St. Andrew's, England, accompanied by Canon Scott, Holland, his chaplain, has gone to South Africa, with a view to establishing an Anglican mission there. Heretofore the Church of England has scarcely had a foothold among the Boers.

The editor of the oldest English newspaper in Turkey, The Levant Herald, died recently. He was Edgar Whittaker, and besides conducting his own newspaper at Constantinople, acted as correspondent of The London Times. He was greatly interested in educational and musical matters. As an amateur conductor he created an orchestra, and for several years directed concerts, which did much to develop a taste for high-class music among the educated Levantine, as well as the European communities of the Turkish capital.

Lady Dudley, wife of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, is a woman of the kindliest impulses and has greatly endeared herself to the Irish people. A short time ago, while motoring near Rockingham, she overtook a drove of donkeys coming from the fair of Tobercurry. Among the herd was one only a fortnight old, who found the road terribly long. Lady Dudley stopped her car, bought the young one and its dam, and had them cared for and sent by easy stages to her home, where the "baby" is already much beloved by the Ladies' Ward.

Lord Broughton, better known as Justice Hawkins, the distinguished English barrister and jurist, says that his first brief was to defend one of two men charged with coining, and when they were placed in the dock he overhead a brief colloquy between them. Coiner No. 1 told his comrade that he was to be defended by a very good man. Coiner No. 2 said he also was defended. He did not know the man's name, "but"—indicating Mr. Hawkins—he added, admiringly, "he's a smart 'un. When I handed over the fee he put the thic 'un"—i. e., sovereign—"between his teeth and bit it. He's the chap for my money."

King Edward and the Lawyers.

The King had a rousing reception on his arrival at the Middle Temple lately, where he dined for the first time since his accession with his fellow benchers. His Majesty was received by the Treasurer (Sir Robert Finlay) and after the benchers were presented to His Majesty he walked up the hall with the Attorney-General at the head of the procession of benchers, meeting with a deafening welcomed from the 250 robed barristers and students assembled. His Majesty, who sat on the dais on the Attorney-General's right, appeared in excellent health and spirits, chatting with unusual gaiety with his right-hand neighbor, the United States Ambassador. The beautiful hall was seen at its best. The soft glow of the electric light arranged as flambeaux suffused the whole interior from the oaken roof to the red-carpeted floor while a footlight behind the King illuminated the priceless Van Dyke portrait of Charles I. at the end of the hall. There were only three toasts: "The King," "Queen Alexandra, the Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," and "Domus," the last given at dessert; and no speeches were made. Only members of the Inn were present.

Between Friends.

Belle—He has money, you know. Madge—Yes, I appreciate that fact; but how am I to live happily with a man who is my inferior? Belle—Don't tell him, and he'll never know it.—Sydney Town and Country Journal.

The Loser.

"He's what I call a 'good loser.'"

"He didn't seem that way to me."

"Why, I saw him lose $150 at poker last night, and he didn't kick at all."

"Funny! You should have heard him today when he dropped a half dollar and it rolled down the culvert."

Quickly Solved.

"Yes, for a year and a half she was in doubt as to whether she loved him enough to marry him or not."

"And how did she succeed in finding out?"

"There was another girl who got to acting as if she wanted him."

Struggle at Last Ends.

Vienna, Dec. 7.—It is believed that the struggle against obstruction in the Hungarian Parliament has at last been terminated. Count Tiaza, the Premier, announced Saturday that in consideration of the renunciation by the independence party of its policy of obstruction, the plan to hold two sittings daily would not be carried into effect.

OUR SUMMER GATEWAY.

How the Emigration Department Has Prevented the Influx of Diseased Settlers —All Past Records Surpassed.

Navigation, as far as the regular passenger steamship lines are concerned, is on the eve of a close, and with it the end of immigration over the St. Lawrence route. Seventy thousand immigrants from all European nations landed at Quebec during the past summer season, which is the largest aggregation of settlers from European countries to ever come to Canada via the St. Lawrence route, and 22,000 more than last season, when 48,000 arrived. It must not be thought, however, that the full number of 70,000 immigrants who landed at Quebec were destined to remain and settle in Canada. Thirty per cent. of this number were booked for various centres of the United States, and on landing were handed over to the care of the United States immigration officials stationed at this port every season. Thus only 49,000 immigrants who came to Canada via the St. Lawrence during the past year settled in the West and Northwest, and helped to swell the 121,000 new settlers who have taken up their homes in the Dominion during the past ten months. The number of immigrants expected to have arrived by the St. Lawrence during the past season was computed at 100,000. The falling off of 30,000 is accounted for by the unexpected decrease of the Russian and Russia-Polish Jew immigration, which evidently sought some other country, or another inlet into the United States. The stringent law enacted this summer governing the landing of immigrants in Canada may have had its influence, especially on the foreign passengers suffering from contagious diseases, such as trachoma and fulvus.

Heretofore the Canadian ports were wide open to immigration from all parts of the world, and the danger of this loose practice only recently became apparent to the Canadian Government, when its attention was called to the necessarily stringent health laws in regard to the landing of immigrants at American ports, and the rejection of the same arriving at Canadian ports, booked for the United States, that were rejected by the United States officers stationed here to protect their country from infected and otherwise undesirable immigrant seeking entrance into the neighboring Republic through Canadian ports.

The Canadian Immigration Department, alive to the importance of the situation, inaugurated a new system in the early part of the past season, to protect Fanada from being overrun with diseased immigrants, especially those suffering from trachoma, from landing. Every port was furnished with a port physician, whose duty was to inspect and examine every immigrant who landed, and send all cases he thought might be curable to hospital for treatment, and detain those he considered incurable for deportation by the steamer on which they came.

Dr. J. C. Howe, a well-known and reputable physician, was named port physician for the port of Quebec, and at the same time Dr. Ellis, of St. John, was appointed medical inspector of all Canadian ports, and passed the summer in Quebec, in connection with his office, superintending his medical examination of all immigrants. Dr. Howe has proved himself a conscientious and careful public officer. He was never absent from his post during the entire session, night or day. When required, and whenever a ship arrived, he was on hand to do his duty, anh facilitate the work of the Department. Dr. Howe sent hundreds of foreigners to the house of detention for treatment, and at the same time deported 170 incurables back whence they came. It was this strict medical examination which no doubt debarred many thousand more immigrants than arrived, and were expected from coming out to Canada by the St. Lawrence route.

The Department of Immigration, however, learned a great deal of experience during the past summer, which will bring about a number of new regulations in regard to immigration to Canada. The superintendent of the Dominion, Mr. W. D. Scott of Ottawa, has given great attention to the work during the past summer, and is sure to be heard from in a report making suggestions for the future. There is one thing badly needed in Quebec, a proper house of detention under the control of the Government. This, it is said, will be remedied by the opening of navigation next season. A new hospital, or house of detention, is to be erected on the Louise embankment, in close vicinity to the immigration shed, which will also have to be enlarged to adequately accommodate the increasing volume of immigrants. Besides this, it is expected that Mr. W. D. Scott will formulate plans to restrict pauper as well as diseased immigrants from entering the country, which is another danger that threatens Canada.

Touching Patriotism in Canada.

J. Hobart Moore, lately returned from a fishing trip in Canada, says that he found the devotion of the French-Canadians to Canada and things Canadian quite touching.

"It was this way," he said. "When I struck Montreal a Canadian friend of mine told me that I could easily get a guide for $1 per day for the month. He had done it often, and he recommended Pierre Lorrison, who lived at St. Rose. I interview Lorrison and asked him what he would charge for the job.

"'Where you was come from?' said he.

"'Chicago,' said I.

"'For me, your guide, I take four dollars a day,' said he.

"I remonstrated, but it was no go. I found that the guides who would take $1 per day from a Canadian wanted $4 to $6 from Americans.

"So, you see, I was touched by the patriotism of these people—touched for about $3 a day."—New York Times.

The Cradle.

Peter Cooper had fifty-five years of domestic happiness and morning fire building. Mr. Cooper was an ingenious man. When a cradle became necessary in his home, as was sometimes the case years ago, Peter rigged a self rocking cradle, with a fan attachment. Afterward he patented the device and sold the patent. There were many opportunities "in those days."

STRATEGIC THIBET.

WHY ENGLAND AND RUSSIA WANT TO OCCUPY LAND OF MYSTERY.

British Troops Again Marching—Grand Lama Said to Have Come to an Understanding With the Czar—Thibetans and Their Customs—One Englishman Who Entered Lhassa—Perils of the Road.

Colonel Younghusband's unsuccessful mission to Thibet, which has resulted in the British Government fitting out an expedition to bring the Dalai Llama to terms, calls attention to that great city of which the outside world knows so little—Lhassa, the mysterious. Solitary and aloof it has dwelt in the heart of the Himalayas for twelve centuries, and from its mountain heights has sent forth the sacred lay to millions of the faithful, for the Grand Llama is the Pope of the Buddhist world. His temporal authority is almost equal to that of a king, although Thibet has always been ranked as a Chinese province, and thrice a year the Lama has sent a tribute to Pekin. Outside of this perfunctory observance of an ancient custom, Thibet has been unmindful of politics and international affairs. The people of the country have tilled their arid soil and tended their herds of sheep and yaks, while the Grand Llama and the lesser church dignitaries have been wrapped in the contemplation of their ancient religion. But this isolation must end, soon or late, for Thibet has become a pawn in the great game which Britain and Russia are playing. The Bear is seeking an outlet to the south, and the Lion keeps moving north. Thibet lies between. Its fate is inevitable. It must choose its master. No longer will it be permitted to remain neutral. The Llama realizes this fact, and making a virtue out of a necessity, he despatched a mission to St. Petersburg some months ago, and, it is rumored, came to an understanding with the Czar. He was wise enough not to waste time by applying to Pekin for advice or assistance. This move forced the hand of Britain, and Col. Younghusband's mission was the result. The pretext for the British expedition is the refusal of the Llama to make a commercial t[illegible] with the Indian Government. [illegible] of Russia is the reason.

Thibetans and Customs.

Except from a strategic point of view Great Britain or Russia can gain little by occupying Thibet. The country is poor, the inhabitants, except to themselves, are unimportant. But The Novoe Vremya says: "Whoever becomes master in the residence of the Dalai Llama will undoubtedly enjoy great prestige and influence throughout the Buddhist world." Prestige of this sort is not important to either of the great powers, but it is difficult to see how the Russian newspaper arrives at its conclusion. One rather inclines to the belief that the Buddhists would regard the captors of their holy city with much the same feelings as the Crusaders entertained for the Moslems during the Crusade. The opinions of the Buddhists are not worrying either Russia or Britain. Both nations have the habit of depending on themselves, and each, for the sake of forestalling the other, would probably be willing to be voted the most unpopular race in Asia. Although, according to our enlightened eyes, the Thibetans are poor misguided heathens, their impending fate is something they have hardly deserved. Many conflicting reports have been circulated about them, but the best authorities agree that they are neither bloodthirsty nor predatory. On the contrary, they have frequently shown the greatest kindness to adventurous Europeans who have penetrated their country. True, some of their customs do not commend themselves to the refined tastes of Christian people. For instance, they mix butter in their tea and eat with chopsticks. They also practice polyandry, woman being far outnumbered by the men. This fact may account for the great number of religious instructors in the country who take the vows of celibacy. Apart from these peculiarities, which only go to prove that they are old-fashioned, the Thibetans are a decent people, as Asiatic races go. It is not their fault that they occupy ground, which, if Russia held it, would be dangerous to India, and which, if dominated by Britain, would be exasperating to the Czar. It is their misfortune. Having declined to receive our missionaries, they must prepare to entertain our troops.

One Englishman Enters Lhassa.

Since the famous Palace of Lhassa was erected in the seventh century, hundreds of Caucasian explorers have attempted to visit the sacred city and register at the best hotel they could find. Some famous explorers have undertaken the exploit, and among them might be named Prince Henry of Orleans, Bonvalat, Prjevalski, Capt. Bower, Savage Landor, Rockhill, Capt. Wellby, Dutreuil de Rhin, Gerard, Littledale, Sven Hedin, Bogle, Maxwell, and Sherlock Holmes. Only two of the number ever entered the forbidden city—Maxwell and Holmes. We have only Sir A. C. Doyle's assurance that Mr. Holmes really did reach Lhassa, but since the gentleman has done more remarkable things there is no reason why we should attempt to discredit his exploit. In 1811, Thomas Maxwell saw the inside of Lhassa, and it is rather surprising to learn that he didn't trouble to write a book about it. He was a finely educated gentleman, who might, had he chosen, have prepared a literary monument to his memory. He merely jotted down a few notes, which long after his death were incorporated in the volume of another explorer. The first British mission to the Dalai Llama was despatched by Warren Hastings in 1774, in charge of George Bogle. This intrepid traveler got within a hundred miles of the city when he was met by Ambassadors from the Llama, who treated him with the greatest courtesy, but firmly refused to allow him to advance. As Bogle's chief business was not to enter the city itself, he was not greatly disappointed. He had Hastings' instructions to establish friendly relations with the Llama, and this he succeeded in doing, and for many years there was free intercourse between India and Thibet. Bogle returned, taking with him specimens of the country's chief products which his master had instructed him to procure. He also acquired many facts about Thibet which were then for the first time given to the world.

Perils of the Road.

Traveling in Thibet has always been, and must always be, difficult in the extreme. An armed expedition such as Britain purposes sending forth would find providing for its transport the most difficult problem. Mules and ponies are plentiful, but in those altitudes fodder is scarce. At this season of the year the trip would be even more hazardous than usual. A military force would be able to resist the bands of robbers which infest the great roads, so that this danger, very imminent indeed to smaller parties, need not be reckoned on. The Thibetans, however, would probably resist, and as they have lately supplied themselves with magazine rifles they could do terrible execution in a country which can furnish three ambuscades for every mile of road. Until a couple of years ago the Thibetans were armed with old flintlocks and spears, but they learned from China what China had learned of Japan, and are now much better equipped to give battle than formerly. Should the expedition reach Lhassa (and that it will do so if Lhassa becomes its objective cannot be doubted), the probability is that a fierce fight will ensue. From what little is known of the city, it seems certain that it is a veritable fortress, set on a high hill. Never has it been put to the test of war, however, so that its actual strength is a matter of mere conjecture. The guns of the British are going to ask it a question.
